SHOWROOMS OF A & B REFRIGERATING CO., INC., 444 Haywood road. Unusual interest in Norge electric ranges and Rollator refrigerators since their display at the Citizen-Times cooking school is noticed. This firm supplied the three handsome Norge electric ranges for the school demonstration. Sam Brown, manager, says, "We have been notified that manufacture of refrigerators and ranges will cease on April 30th. However, we have on hand a fair stock of these appliances, including a few 1941 models, which we expect to pass on to the public at the old prices, as long as it lasts. We also have one of the ranges left that was used by Miss Chambers at the school. This model will sell at a $20 discount. In addition to these, we have a number of extra fine "trade-ins" in both gas and electric ranges and refrigerators at real bargain prices. Sam Brown, manager, was for many years connected with Reusing's, of Asheville, and has had more than 12 years' experience in the refrigeration business. Their phone number is 2610.

FINE SERVICE AT A & M GARAGE

Painting And Fender Straightening Are Featured

If your car is not giving the performance that you think it should you should by all means take it to the A & M Garage located at 12 Brevard road in West Asheville and have an experienced mechanic give it a thorough check-up.

R. L. Atkins, manager, states that his firm is in position to do all types of automobile repairing and that the cost is always reasonable. Painting cars and straightening fenders are a specialty at this shop. Cars that look well and are in good mechanical condition makes the owner feel good and at the same time the value is greatly increased in event owner wants to trade his car in on a new model.

Rebuilding wrecked automobiles is another feature service at the A & M Garage. A twenty-four-hour wrecker service is maintained and the Holmes power operated wrecker is used. Body and fender work is done as well as all types of general automobile repairing. The A & M Garage has been in the same location for the past 12 years and have built an ever increasing business due to the fine type of work that is done at all times, said Mr. Atkins. Willard and Exide batteries are carried in stock. The motorist is invited to call phone number 80 for free estimate and complete information.

Dear Betty Anne:

I received your note and item about The West Asheville History Project several days ago. Like you, I put it in a stack of 'stuff', to finish ASAP and somehow it has kept going to The bottom of the pile. Methinks it's because I really don't know what response you need for the project and wonder if my memory bank contains the desired data.

Dad managed an A&P store at 415 Haywood Road from (?1931-2) when the 'corner A&P' was closed in favor of the new Super Store (A&P) next to the Methodist Church on Haywood Road about 1938-9. Dad did not think the super store concept would take hold, people wanted to be waited on, he said. He leased the space at 415 Haywood Road with Ed Johnson and together they operated Estes and Johnson Grocery and Meats. The economy was very bad at the time and many folks had to 'charge their groceries and pay later'. Dad, was very generous in extending credit and wound up closing the store and opening one at the head of Burton St. which continued an economic slide into closure. Not foreclosure, he paid every Penny he owed, but most that owed him said, 'bye, bye'. I've had many good hot-dogs at Saucy Sandwich.....mmmmmmm! Good!

I remember Jax-Pax Grocery at S.W. corner of Haywood Road and Michigan Avenue. I seem To remember Mr. Morgan as manager???? I remember Metcalf's, too, but can't recall Details. There was an Atkins Garage just north of the Haywood Road, Michigan Ave. intersection. I spent many hours 'hanging out' there. Pumped gas, worked for nothing so to speak just for the fun of it. They had an ace wrecker driver, Marion Poor (nickname Ham), and at times he'd let me ride the wrecker with him. Saw many serious accidents and watched Ham as he professionally performed his job. Ham is the father of your sister in law, Peggy.

I remember Restaurants, Drug Stores, Barber Shops, service stations, theaters, cleaners, and more, but details and photo's are not with me. Remember, I left Asheville at age 18, returned at almost 21 and was recalled to Active Duty (Navy) in 1950 and have been gone since then except for visits home. At age 76 I do good to remember to get up each day and I feel so blessed that I can.

Sincerely,

Ray Estes

Ace Has 4-Point Formula For Success

Once mainly a "white goods" appliance and service store, Ace Appliance Co., 444 Haywood Road, now attributes 20 to 25 percent of its sales to television sets, video cassette recorders and related equipment.

But the "white goods" — refrigerators, freezers, washers, dryers, ranges, ovens, etc. — are still the mainstay, according to James B. Smith, president, who said 1985 was an excellent growth year for the firm he founded in 1956.

To accommodate its growth in "brown goods" — TVs, VCRs, etc. — Ace expanded its operation last year by opening a service center on nearby Richmond Avenue for those merchandise lines. The service center for "white goods" remains at the store's main location.

Ace sells appliances made by White-Westinghouse, Maytag, Litton, Magic Chef and Sharp. In the video field, product lines include RCA, Magnavox, Sharp, Mitsubishi and DuMont.

Microwave oven sales are also a staple. Products offered include White-Westinghouse, Sharp, Litton, Magic Chef and DuMont.

For 1986, Smith said, Ace plans to expand its operations in the video field and is looking forward to further growth.

The firm is operated by Smith and his son, Bruce, vice president. Another son, Wayne — who was vice president for sales, purchasing and advertising — died last year. TV and radio audiences probably remember Wayne Smith for the TV and radio commercials he did to promote the firm. Some of the Ace's commercials are now done by Bruce Smith.

The growth rate and success of the family-owned business has been so remarkable that other businessmen in the nation have visited the Smith family to learn their "secrets."

But J. B. Smith makes no secret of the formula for his success — a four-point program which has brought Ace a long way since Smith opened a small appliance service center 30 years ago.

The program involves the service and parts department's commitment to making every reasonable attempt to satisfy customers; good credit and good relationships with area banks; lots of advertising; and dedicated employees.

In 1979 Ace joined Nationwide Buying Group, the largest appliance buying group in the country. Smith said this enables Ace to buy at the cost level of the group and pass the savings along to its customers.

THE ADMIRAL

The elegance of a clipper ship in full sail with the practicality & economy of a cinder block.

The Admiral embarked not with a set course, but steered more in a general direction. We had little doubt that we could cultivate a successful dive bar, but we aspired to create an unexpected restaurant that thrived on its talent and creativity.

With the procurement of a modest cinderblock building on the wage earning side of town we succeeded in our goal - to serve delicious food without having to hold on to convention, all in an atmosphere that lacks the restraints of standard technique.

We hope you find our décor timeless, our service gentle, and our cuisine inventive and delicious.

Our doors are open 4pm-2am Monday thru Saturday. The menu changes frequently to maintain freshness and creativity.

Reservations are recommended. Please call us at (828) 252-2541 before 5pm.

Join us every Saturday night for a Soul/R&B/Mod/Garage dance party.

A special late night menu is served 10:15pm-1:30am.

The Admiral
Proudly flying the West Asheville flag
by Hanna Rachel Raskin in Vol. 14 / Iss. 29 on 02/13/2008

Flavor: Warm and cozy continental
Ambiance: Neighborhood watering hole for the hippest of neighbors

I'm quite sure I'd have to surrender my alternative-press credentials if I didn't like The Admiral.

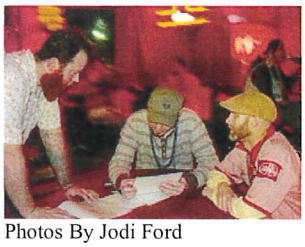
The Admiral, the snug little gastropub that suddenly materialized late last year across the street from BJ's convenience store on Haywood Road, probably hews more closely to the tenets of good alt-journalism than any giveaway tabloid-sized paper you're likely to find. According to the Association of Alternative Newsweeklies, the member-driven group charged with corralling an oft-unruly bunch of papers, the best examples of the alternative press focus on local culture, exhibit an informal and sometimes profane style, tolerate freedom and social difference and generally do what the mainstream doesn't. And how does The Admiral rank against those lofty criteria? Check, check, check and check.

The AAN is slightly too hip to mention the final component to which all weeklies aspire: Effortless cool, a category in which the Admiral excels. Surely you don't have to be tight-jeaned and tattooed to dine here, but it's impossible to dodge the self-assured aesthetic that prevails. The Admiral, with its muted lighting and Po-Mo patrons, feels very much like a trendy Williamsburg dive bar—albeit with significantly more square footage.

Struggling artists' fantasies of la vie artistique extend even to the hack jobs they work to support their creative habits, and it's easy to imagine them pining for meaningless work at a place like the Admiral. It's nigh impossible—not to mention unworthy of one's memoir—to dither about first drafts with a fellow fry cook at McDonalds. But The Admiral, by contrast, reverberates with knowingness and an almost-total nonchalance about the actual business of food service.

Which doesn't mean the food isn't good. In its own offhanded way, the Admiral does a masterful job of serving starving-artist comfort food—utilitarian white plates piled high with sautéed tofu, clumps of spinach and crackly roasted potatoes, all done up to match the season. Many of its offerings are downright lovely. Still, food isn't always front and center here: If having to read this far into the review to find a mention of what's emerging from the Admiral's open kitchen made you wish you had something far less aggravating to do, like listen to the steady drone of a drill outside your office window, then the easygoing vibe at the Admiral might not suit you at all.

But for those willing to relax into one of the warm booths reserved for diners, perhaps nursing a well-mixed drink all the while, the Admiral touts its signature grog made from Sailor Jerry's spiced rum and Cheerwine, though the bartenders are thoroughly fluent in the non-soda-pop end of the sippable spectrum. Then there are some terrifically rewarding dishes on the strongly Continental menu: voluptuous mussels, swimming in a puddle of broth stocked with equally-sized dices of spicy chorizo sausage and sweet tomatoes, and a beautifully grilled steak wearing a gossamer-thin sheath of salt.



Photos By Jodi Ford

And sometimes there aren't either of those things, because all the informality and freedom at the Admiral conspire to produce an ever-changing bill of fare. Beloved favorites vanish overnight: "I'm not sure we'll see the mussels again," a genuinely kind server told me grimly a few nights before the bivalves miraculously reappeared. Diners who arrive at fashionably late hours often go without. As a note on the Xeroxed menu reads: "We change our menu daily to keep our cuisine fresh and exciting, it is not a rarity for us to run out of something, the earlier you're here the better."

If you had the run of the menu last month, your appetizer choices might have included hummus dashed with japaleno and poblano peppers, soup and a pimento-cheese platter. The creamy three-potato soup I sampled was so congealed, it could easily pass for a dip—and a disappointingly bland one at that. But the easy-to-eat pimento cheese was zippy and satisfying, even if the title ingredient—a Highland Black Mocha Stout—was a staunchly fugitive flavor, lending the finished product neither the heartiness nor the chocolate overtones typically associated with the seasonal brew.

I found something to like on almost every entrée plate, although a few dishes were marred by wildly askew seasoning. A perfectly delicious rack of lamb was glazed with an off-putting gastrique of apple cider and apricots that made for a bitter finish, while an already overcooked catfish was further damaged by a misconceived Dijon barbecue sauce that tasted gloppy and flat. Still, both entrées were served with crisp, roasted hunks of potatoes that could very well have won honors for best side dish, had the salmon and sausages not shown up accompanied by a mound of mashed root vegetables.

Root vegetables are the comic foils of the produce department, with silly names like parsnip, turnip and rutabaga, and laughable sales to match. While carrots have ridden to greatness on their reputation as Vitamin A powerhouses, their subterranean brethren have suffered, written off by most Americans as poverty foods. But the Admiral's superb take on the genre is good enough to make even an apartment dweller consider digging a root cellar. It's a simple preparation, to be sure, but as aficionados of biscuits and macaroni-and-cheese know, there's often glory in simplicity.

The mashed root vegetables are the mash in the Admiral's version of Bangers and Mash: The bangers are venison and blueberry-stuffed sausages, a combination that's as good as it is audacious. Blueberry sausages initially struck me as a parlor trick or a recipe dreamt up by a publicist for the State of Maine, but the flavor was surprisingly spot-on.

I was also wowed by the duck, a house-smoked leg and thigh that was wonderfully warm and juicy. Served alongside a mess of mashed potatoes braided with Brie, it bespoke all the best of winter.

If I hadn't enjoyed the Admiral, I'm guessing my cred would be the only casualty. The place has been crowded every time I've visited, and I doubt anything I said would dissuade its West Asheville neighbors from making it a favorite hangout. That's because the Admiral is hitting one more mark set by alternative weeklies everywhere: It's creating a community, which is reason enough to welcome it to the street.

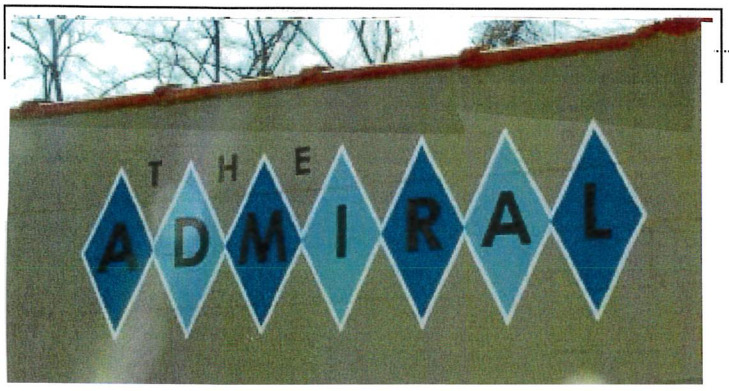
The Admiral in West Asheville

Van And I were in Asheville on Thursday and a friend and her husband told me to check out The Admiral. It is a little funky gastropub style place. Van had the wild Sockeye Salmon with Blue Corn Hominy and Fried Green Tomatoes. I had the Kurobota Pork Chop with Pommes Frites,Arugula, Goat Cheese, and Balsamic Reduction. The place sits about 50 people including the outside. They change their menu daily and they have a small garden out front. The place was full the whole time . And on a side note they have PBR in a can.

Here are some pictures from the web.



German grocery chain Aldi opens first Asheville store

By Mark Barrett
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — At a typical full-service grocery store, the shelves might hold a regular can of Campbell's tomato soup, a premium brand, a can of the store's house brand, a can with less salt, another in a special container that allows it to be heated in a microwave oven and so on.

At the Aldi grocery store that opened Thursday at 1344 Patton Ave. in West Asheville, there is one kind of a tomato soup on the shelves. But, it's cheap: 39 cents a can.

Local residents looking for low prices flocked to the store on opening day, and most gave a thumbs-up to the store's no-frills approach.

At other stores, "You can't ... get all this for $20," said West Asheville resident Luvonne Riveira, pointing to her grocery cart with one hand and holding her receipt in the other.

Germany-based Aldi is the latest entrant into Buncombe County's grocery market. The county's first Wal-Mart Supercenter, which offers groceries in addition to merchandise sold at traditional Wal-Mart stores, opened in east Asheville Jan. 26. They join Black Mountain-based Ingles Markets and several other chains.

Aldi specializes in smaller stores offering only one or two brands of common items, typically the chain's own "house" brands, said Kendra Shaw, regional operations director. The West Asheville store carries about 900 items, she said. At 15,000 square feet, it is less than half the size of many newer, full-service grocery stores.

"It saves money because we don't have to stock 12 brands of ketchup," Shaw said.

Shopping bags cost a nickel or a dime, though customers are free to bring their own, and shoppers must deposit a quarter to get a shopping cart, redeemable when the cart is returned. The store has shorter operating hours than most grocers, and it takes only five to 10 workers to staff a typical store, Shaw said.

"If you want fancy shopping, this isn't it, but if you want good value, come here," she said.

Keeping their grocery bill low was the main attraction for most shoppers Thursday.

"The good thing is the price," Jason Bosch said.

Aldi has 780 stores in the Midwest and eastern United States. Its first Western North Carolina store opened in Hendersonville last July, and a second Asheville store is under construction on Swannanoa River Road.

Shaw said that store, which she said is located close to the Wal-Mart Supercenter because of the traffic the supercenter will draw, should open in June.

GREENHOUSE AT WEST ASHEVILLE IS SOLD

Deciding to handle home grown flowers instead of the imported article, Allison's flower shop has purchased the West Asheville greenhouses and will make a number of repairs and additions to the hothouse immediately. Shelby Griffith, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who has had years of experience in the florist business, will be placed in charge of the new enterprise, and Allison's flower shop will make a specialty of church and home decorations for weddings, parties, funerals and other occasions. Work on the improvements will be started immediately and "grown in Asheville" flowers will soon replace the imported article now handled by that shop.

Hundreds Of Ribbons Are Won By Fine Birds Bred On Asheville Farm

ALLPORT FLOCKS ARE FAMOUS OVER ENTIRE COUNTRY

Model Plant In City Has Produced Hundreds Of Winners

By SUDIE E. PYATT.

J. H. Allport began raising prize winning chickens when he was a boy on a farm in Virginia. He has been raising prize winners every since. A pen of his White Plymouth Rocks, four hens and one rooster, has just won the first prize for White Plymouth Rocks at the Madison Square Garden Poultry Show in New York City, in competition with birds from all over the United States and from other countries. Last fall another pen of the same breed won first prize at the State Fair in Raleigh. His chickens and ducks have won 278 ribbons and 17 cups and trophies at five shows. In 1927 they were three times winner of best birds in show.

Mr. Allport prizes no particular one of the many ribbons, cups and trophies that his chickens and ducks have won above the others. "I'm proud of them all," he says as modestly as if a pen of his poultry had just won the first prize he had ever received.

The owner of the Allport Poultry Farm on St. Dunstan's Road, within the city limits of Asheville, says he raises poultry, because he "just naturally likes to."

Began As A Boy

The first chickens he ever owned were White Brahmas. He bought a setting of eggs when he was a boy eight or nine years old for the same reason that he owns a poultry farm today—he just likes chickens, and always has.

When he began his first poultry venture as a youngster he didn't have any especial reason for raising White Brahmas in preference to any other breed of chicken. White Brahmas are a very large bird with feathers on their legs. Mr. Allport didn't say, but it may be that the odd leg decoration of the Brahmas attracted his boyish eye. Anyway his first chickens were White Brahmas, and the first prize he ever won was on this breed of chicken.

The poultryman-business man still likes some odd birds, though the majority of his flock are White Plymouth Rocks, and he says that for an all around general purpose bird the White Plymouth Rocks are superior to any other chicken that he knows of. He has some White Crested Black Polish chickens, Japanese Silkies, Partridge Plymouth Rocks and White Leghorns. The White Crested Black Polish chickens are black with a huge white crest of feathers growing from their heads. The Japanese Silkies are a small white bird with a body covering more like down than feathers. The Partridge Plymouth Rocks, like his White Plymouth Rocks, belong to the large Rock family of chickens. Like the White Plymouth Rocks they are a large bird. The hens are almost the color of a partridge, and the male birds look very much like a rich dark Rhode Island Red cock.

Likes White Rocks

Of the Rock family Mr. Allport says the White Plymouth Rocks are the most popular. They are a large bird, some of the hens weighing as much as nine pounds, and they will average around six and seven pounds. They have a white feather, which makes them more suitable for meat than birds with dark feathers, and they are wonderful winter layers.

"Any hen," the poultryman said, "will lay in the spring and summer."

Ducks hold their own right along with chickens on the farm, though only the small ones are kept on the farm at St. Dunstan's Road. The older ducks are kept out at the Allport Farm in West Asheville. Long Island Pekins, Cayugas, Muscovys, and Wild Mallards make up the aristocracy of Allport Ducks. For Allport ducks, as well as Allport chickens are prize winners. In the hatchery and brooder house on St. Dunstan's Road there are special incubators for the hatching of duck's eggs. Duck eggs have to be kept moistened while they are in process of hatching and cannot be hatched in the same incubator that will hatch baby chicks.

The Allport Poultry Farm on St. Dunstan's Road is built on the side of a hill. Driving into the yard of the Allport home one is within a few feet of the brooder house and hatchery, but does not realize it until he is told, or led down the steps to the brooder house behind the stone wall that marks the boundary between house and garden and poultry farm. There are five acres in the hillside poultry farm within the city limits. The brooder house and hatcheries are built at the top of the hill directly under the stone wall, and the ground from the brooder house and hatcheries to the foot of the hill is laid out in runs for the smaller chicks, yards and houses for the grownups that are kept at this farm.

The runs are planted in four kinds of grain, oats, wheat, rye and barley.

Allport Methods

When the baby chicks come from the mammoth incubator that holds 5,000 eggs they go in the first compartment of the steam heated, ten section brooder house that will hold 5,000 chicks. Hatching on the farm, which is under the direct supervision of Otis Duncan, is begun in January and continued until June. After June, Allport Poultry Farm chickens rest. Any surplus eggs are sold for commercial use, but Allport Poultry Farm chickens are never forced for commercial layers. The farm owner says hens that are used to produce eggs for breeding purposes simply cannot be forced for commercial layers.

Baby chicks are hatched from the mammoth incubator every Wednesday during the hatching season. Every Wednesday there are always two compartments of the ten in the brooder house swept and clean, waiting for new occupants. The first vacant section is the one from which the previous week's hatch has been promoted to the next section. The last section has just "graduated" its feathered flocks from the brooder house. In all the chicks spend about ten weeks in the brooder house. The house is of the Shenandoah system, heated by hot water from a central heating plant. Metal hoods come down over the hot water pipes in the back of each section, and the baby chicks hover under these metal hens around the hot water pipes as contentedly as they would under their mother's wings—that is if the chicks could know who their mothers were. Chicks that are ailing are not allowed to die, but are killed as soon as they appear sick.

When they are small the White Plymouth Rocks are blue, but blue babies of this breed grow up into whitest of hens and roosters. The White Leghorns are cream puffballs when they first come from the egg. Rhode Islands Reds are covered with a rich reddish down.

The Death Cell

Young chickens that are sold for eating purposes are put in the "death cell" for two weeks and fed on buttermilk mash to fatten them, before they are put on the market. Chickens are killed as they are ordered. This method of killing them assures the person who is purchasing the chicken that he is getting a strictly fresh fowl, as fresh as if he had killed it from his own flock. Dressed poultry is sold both wholesale and retail. The farm sells yard eggs, dressed ducks and chickens by the pound, and baby chicks and ducklings by the chick or duckling.

Baby chicks and ducklings are shipped from the farm to points all over North Carolina and the United States. They are sent in a special ventilated pasteboard container, "Pullman trains," Mr. Allport calls it, by express or parcel post. There is no express office near many of the places to which he sends the chicks. Then they go, chirping happily in their "pullman train" by parcel post.

One woman sent a post office money order for eighty cents, ordering a duck and drake. The ducklings had been advetised for, thirty-five cents each, making two cost seventy cents, the extra ten cents was for postage.

"I'd like to know," Mr. Allport said, "how she thought I could tell whether a baby duckling, just hatched, was a duck or a drake."

All hatching is done from the Allport Poultry Farm flocks' own eggs. No eggs are purchased from other flocks for hatching purposes.

Raises Fine Hogs

In addition to his chickens Mr. Allport also raises some hogs on his West Asheville farm. His hogs are also prize winners. A boar took first prize at the Maryland State Fair last year, and a sow won second place at another fair. The hogs are poland Chinas, andlike all of the chickens and ducks are thoroughbreds.

"No matter what you're raising, it doesn't pay to raise anything but thoroughbreds," Mr. Allport said. "I never could understand why farmers would content themselves with scrub stock when for a few dollars more they could buy pure-bred breeders and quickly build up their own flocks or herds of pure-breds. Any farmer can purchase from a breeder of pure-bred poultry or stock, what the breeder has spent years getting up to a certain point of high efficiency."

Despite the fact that he started with Brahmas Mr. Allport has no chickens of this breed now. "They aren't as popular as they once were," he said. From this last fact one might deduce that there are styles in poultry just as there are in hats and dresses. The big markets do not want chickens with feathers on their legs and this is perhaps one reason for the present lack of popularity of the Brahmas.

Inside the entrance to his storage warehouse, which is part of his business, Mr. Allport has a large glass showcase in which is displayed the ribbons, diplomas, trophies and cups which his poultry and swine have won during the last two years. The diplomas are from The American Poultry Association, and were awarded the farm for having the best of certain breeds of both chickens and ducks. There are prizes from the Western Carolina Poultry Association at Asheville, The National Poultry and Pet show, Washington, D. C., the Chattahoochee Valley Exposition Co lumbus, Ga., as well as from Madison Square Garden, New York City, the State Fair at Raleigh, and other places. "These are only a small part of the prizes my chickens have won," said the man, who just naturally likes chickens. "I could more than paper the wall of a room with all the ribbons I have."

CEMETERY BUYS ACREAGE FOR 32,000 GRAVES

Green Hills To Spend $30,000 For Tract And Its Development.

An acreage sufficient to provide 32,000 additional grave spaces, with appropriate driveways and reservations for landscaping effects, has just been acquired by Green Hills cemetery in West Asheville, it was announced today.

The purchase price of the land and the amount to be expended in development of the tract for cemetery use will aggregate $30,000, officials said.

The property, acquired from the Wachovia Bank and Trust company, executor of the Robert P. Johnston estate, W. E. Shuford and William Johnston, Jr., is a portion of the well known 610-acre Anandale farm developed by the Johnstons. It fronts 1,659 feet on the Pea Ridge road and 2,701 feet on the County Home road, and lies south of the Southern Railway's Murphy branch line and the County Home road.

George Pennell, superintendent of the cemetery, pointed out today that the property will be developed over a 10-year period under the supervision of Fulp and Fulp, cemetery engineers of Chicago, Ill. It is planned to devote about 20 acres to non-monument divisions. The new purchase will necessitate the erection of fencing one and one-eighth miles long, and approximately 2,750 shrubs will be planted along the boundary lines.

The addition to the cemetery holdings contains 32 varieties of native trees and shrubs, including a grove of oaks which has been estimated to be more than 100 years old. An interesting feature is an old house site, where is found a flower garden planted 60 years ago with rare collections of flowers and herbs some of which came from England.

A portion of the acreage will be converted into a bird sanctuary, with appropriate cover permitted to grow on the plot to provide birds with food.

New Funeral Home In West Asheville

Anders-Rice Hold Formal Opening Saturday And Sunday

A recent and very attractive addition to the business life of West Asheville is the new funeral home of Anders-Rice, formal opening of which will be held tomorrow afternoon and all day Sunday, at 521 Haywood road.

The new home is modern in every respect, with ample facilities for the best of mortuary work. Pleasing features that set it apart from the sombre idea of the ordinary funeral parlor include a beautifully appointed chapel and music room that seats about 150 people, a lovely slumber room, an attractive reception room. A circular drive permits of formation of funeral cars without congesting street traffice. The grounds are being beautified with rhododendron and other shrubs.

Principals of the Anders-Rice Funeral Home are J. B. Anders and C. J. Rice, and they cordially invite the public to attend the formal opening Saturday and Sunday. The firm has been in operation for several years, formerly located at 829 Haywood road in West Asheville. A 24-hour modern ambulance service is maintained.

ANDERS-RICE ASSOCIATION IS HELPFUL

Recognizing its obligation to the people of the community and the need for low cost burial insurance, Anders-Rice Funeral home sponsors a burial association which is purely mutual and is owned and operated for the exclusive benefit of its members. It is strictly non-profit and all funds collected, less the actual cost of collecting, are used to provide funeral benefits for its members

The Anders - Rice association now has more than 4,000 members. Being a unit of the more than 250 such assocations in North Carolina, the organization is operated under the laws of the state and a surety bond in the amount of $5,000 has been deposited to insure efficient operation.

Membership in the burial association provides complete funeral service in the amount of $100 for persons over the age of ten, and $50 for persons under that age. This does not mean, however, that the family may not procure a funeral which might entail additional costs if it desires.

Membership in the association not only brings ease of mind to the individual family but being a mutual enterprise, hepls make possible this protection for others who may not otherwise be financially prepared for the emergency.

Officers of the Anders-Rice Association are J. B. Anders and C. J. Rice. The home is located at 521 Haywood road. Further information about this type of protection may be obtained by phoning 1035.

A VOTE FOR DAN MOORE was cast from an ambulance stretcher by at least one Asheville Democrat Saturday —but if you want to know how they got Miss Julia B. Colyer into the booth without tilting their patient to a vertical position, you'll have to ask Anders-Rice ambulance attendants Vincent Roberts, left, and Gary Johnson, right. Miss Colyer, on her way home at 13 Wilmington St. from Aston Park Hospital, shades her eyes from the sun as Roberts and Johnson wheel her out of the ambulance at Precinct 14 at Aycock School. Make It A Dash

A gentleman called the newsroom and asked which funeral home had the body of a friend who had died the day before.

"That's Anders-Rice," Henry Robinson said.

"Can you tell me where it's located?"

"Yes, sir. It's at 1428 Patton Avenue."

"How do you spell the funeral home?"

Patiently, Henry said, "A-n-d-e-r-s hyphen R-i-c-e."

"How do you spell the middle name?"

"It doesn't have a middle name."

"You said it was Anders Hyphen Rice Funeral Home."

"Just make that hyphen a dash," Henry said.

SILK HOSIERY MILL LOCATES IN ASHEVILLE

First Unit To Be Started At Once And Completed By March

IS FIRST PLANT TO FOLLOW ENKA

Thorough Investigation By Experienced Men Brought Decision

One of the first of the industries being attracted to Asheville, following the announcement of the erection here of the $10,000,000 Enka rayon plant, is the Asheville Silk Hosiery Company mill, which will be erected on Beaverdam road west of the city limits. The plant will employ about [illegible] owners announced that within the year the full force of 1000 in all units may be employed.

Albert Shultz and David Baer, hosiery mill owners of Lansdale, Pa., are the principal owners and directors of the plant. The initial plant will be a modern brick and steel factory and other equipment, and is expected to be in operation by March 1, 1929. F. Q. Boyer, industrial engineer of the Chamber of Commerce, and Stanley Wright, city engineer, visited the plant site yesterday to secure a report for the commissioners' meeting this morning, when the requests of the new company will be presented and acted upon.

The extension of the city sewer and water mains are the main requisites of the new industry. This plant will occupy a five-acre tract, the deed for which will be given the new owners as soon as the city commissioners have passed on the project, which is expected to be at the commissioners meeting at 9 o'clock this morning at the city hall.

Initial Unit

The initial building will be 56 feet by 154 feet, but the plans call for the extension of this building to its full length of 364 feet by the end of the first year of operation. Following the closing of the deal yesterday morning at the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Shultz and Mr. Baer left the city. The Chamber of Commerce will complete the details of the new industry's plans.

The industrial department of the Chamber of Commerce has been at work on the securing of this plant for the past five months. It was announced yesterday that Mr. Shultz and Mr. Baer were formerly associated with the Dexdale Hosiery Mills of Lansdale, Pa., of which Charles D. Owen, treasurer, and Charles C. Dexter, director of the Beacon Mills of Swannanoa, were directors. Mr. Baer was in the sales organization of the Dexdale Mill.

$200,000 Investment

The initial investment of this new industry in Asheville will be approximately $200,000, but the entire proposed investment of the industry here will be more than $1,000,000. Construction of the new plant will begin as soon as the title to the land has been perfected. [illegible] This is expected to be consummated within the next few days. The heads of the plant will return to the city to supervise the erection of the plant and the installation of the machines which will be used in making full-fashioned silk hosiery.

[illegible] perienced mill men and have thoroughly investigated Asheville as an industrial center. Following the lead of the Enka rayon officials, who two months ago selected Asheville as the site for the largest rayon plant in the world, this industry has been announced. Other manufacturing concerns are now investigating the Asheville district for branch or main plant sites.

Favorable climate, ideal living conditions, convenient location, civic and general co-operation, good labor conditions, water and resources, the same attributes of Asheville that brought the Enka plant here, are now attracting others. The Asheville hosiery mill is the first of what is expected to be a chain of smaller plants that will establish here near the Enka plant.

Asheville Citizen November 16, 1928

Asheville Hosiery Mills Purchased By 2 Officers

Purchase of the Asheville Hosiery Mills on Beaver View road, West Asheville, from Robert E. Schultz and Julius R. Rauch was announced yesterday by officers of the company. The consideration involved in the sale was not divulged.

The plant was erected during the latter part of 1928 and early in 1929 at a cost of approximately $250,000, not including equipment, and is one of the largest industries of its kind in this section of the state. Regular operation was begun early last summer and the plant now has a capacity of 1000 pairs of ladies' full-fashioned silk hosiery each week.

Present officers of the company are B. R. Baer, treasurer, and Theodore Y. Rodgers, president, of Philadelphia. Mr. Rodgers has been associated with Mr. Baer for a long period, and is a well known manufacturer of Pennsylvania. Mr. Baer came to Asheville over a year ago and has been connected with the construction of the plant. He and Mr. Baer were named purchasers of the plant in the announcement yesterday, Mr. Rodgers succeeding Mr. Schultz, former part owner, as president. Mr. Rauch, associate of Mr. Schultz, is a former vice president. According to the announcement of sale, Mr. Baer will have active charge of the plant and its operations here.

LOCAL CONSTRUCTION COMPANY PURCHASES BIG ACREAGE TRACT

Fifty-Three Acres in West Asheville Acquired From F. Zimmerson at Cost of $200,000.

Real estate transfers for Asheville for the new year received a good start yesterday when it was announced that the Asheville Construction Company purchased from F. Zimmerman and associates, 54 acres of land for a consideration of $200,000.

The property was bought by Henry Reed and J. M. McDowell, owners of the construction company, to enable expansion of their rock mining interests in the West Asheville section. It is planned to use a portion of the property for building of railroad sidetracks to facilitate loading of products. The property faces the railroad at Murphy junction and extends toward the West Asheville road some distance, a section of the acquired property being adjacent to the present rock quarries of the company.

The land purchased has the plant of the Asheville Packing Company upon it and it is understood that Mr. Zimmerman will tear down the buildings and will erect, later this year, on some additional property that he retained, a thoroughly modern packing plant that will rank with the businesses of the same nature in larger cities. The proposed cost of the buildings in the new plant will be around $100,000 and will include railroad side track facilities that will enable the operators to dispatch meats to all sections of the neraby states.

The present buildings of the packing company have been located in West Asheville for the past 26 years. With the erection of the new plant it is planned to put on the market a brand of food and meats.

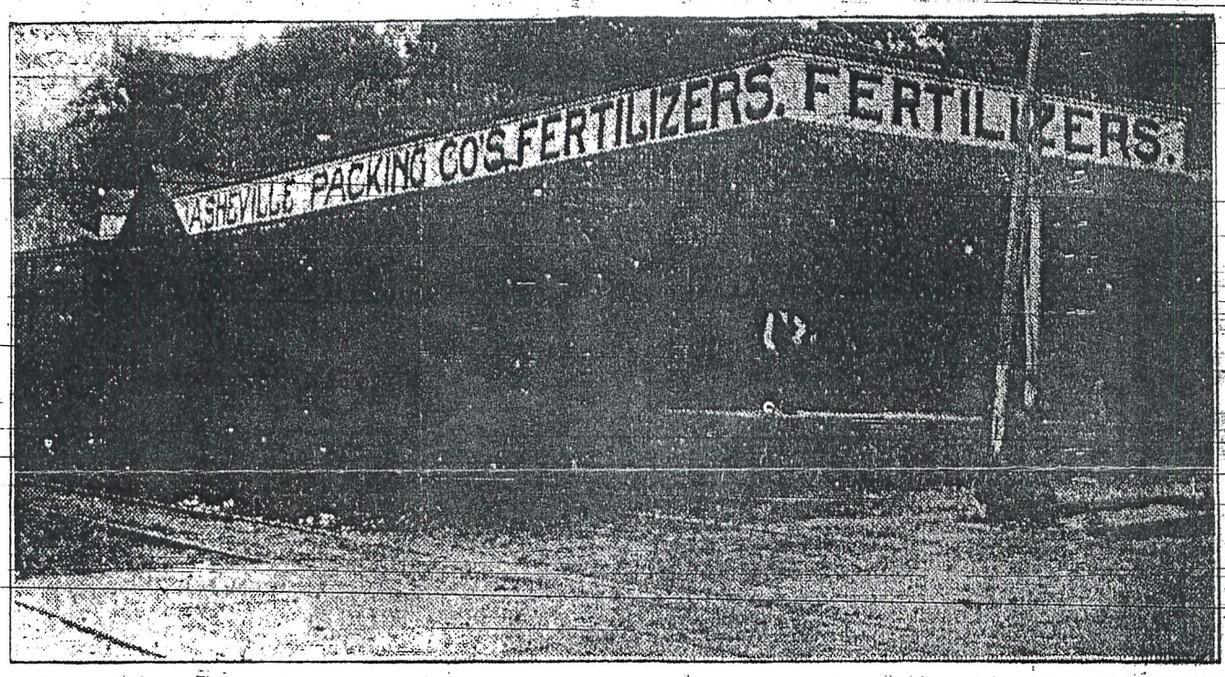
Asheville Packing Company

Meal Packers and Manufacturers of Fertilizers



Plant of Asheville Packing Company.

Fertilizers play an important part in southern farming operations, more so, perhaps, than in those of any other section of the country, and the manufacture of fertilizers particularly suited to the soil of this section has long been a great and growing industry. This is represented here by the Asheville Packing company, one of the most important enterprises of the city and one which has since it was established some years ago had a phenomenal and gratifying growth, backed as it has been by the energy, industry and capital of Mr. S. Sternberg, and his partner, Mr. Gustav Lichtenfels, and the practical knowledge of Mr. F. Zimmerman, the capable and efficient manager of the plant who has had a long experience in the business. The company's works are located at West Asheville, which are equipped with tht most improved machinery procurable, and the output of all kinds of fertilizers, bone-meal, and the usual by-products of a plant of this kind is coming the largest and most modern in Western North Carolina. Its goods are of the highest grade, are always fully up to the analysis, and the farmers who patronize the company have learned by long experience that there is never any misrepresentation, and they always get precisely what they pay for. This is the policy upon which the immense business of the concern has been built, and has resulted in keeping all the old customers and constantly getting new ones. The company has agents everywhere, and no difficulty will be found in getting the goods manufactured promptly and in the best of mechanical condition. The general offices are located at 853 Depot street along the tracks of the Southern railroad. The officers are, S. Sternberg, president; F. Zimmerman, vice president; G. Lichtenfels, secretary and treasurer.

A Cup of Tea

About us...

Our new telephone 828-230-9627.....

A Cup of Tea was created by spirit, through Virato and Dhiraja... during an inspirational flash of light. In fact, Virato fell out of his chair as the name blasted through. They were directed to start this special place--based upon the popular "salon" concept of the 1920's and '30s--in which learning and healing happened in a small and intimate atmosphere through experience and exploration. The name, A Cup of Tea, which finds its heritage in Buddhist tradition, is also the name of Osho's book, which is a compilation of his letters to friends.

Located in Asheville, North Carolina, A Cup of Tea is a place/concept of personal exploration, growth and enlightenment

Virato, who has been editor and publisher of New Frontier Magazine for over 20 years, provides a wealth of knowledge when it comes to the transformation of human consciousness. He has personally met, and become friends with, such notables as Deepak Chopra, Ram Dass, Rupert Sheldrake, Ravi Shankar, Marianne Williamson, Steven Halpern, Kitaro, Gabriel Cousens, Sogyal Rinpoche, Tim Wheater, Timothy Leary, and hundreds of other notables in the field of body, mind and spirit.

Virato has also had outstanding success in the field of drug and alcohol addiction/misuse treatment in Russia, where many psychologists have adopted his methods. He was also featured in a special on drug addiction broadcast on Russia's equivalent of PBS-TV. Virato also spent a part of 1979-1980 in India, and is a considered a master of Tantra.

He has been director of Premsagar Meditation Center in Philadelphia, The Love Center in New Jersey, New Frontier Education Society (and director of its successful growth center in Philadelphia). He is also currently director of the Nepal Institute. Virato has served on the Board of Directors of the Association for Humanistic Psychology, and was Marketing Director of Asheville's Oasis Mountain Wellness Center.

Dhiraja, a natural shaman, healer and intuitive artist from St. Petersburg, Russia, spent her childhood in Tajikistan where she connected with spirit. She and Virato are soul mates, and were married on St. Valentine's Day, 2002.

They are both sannyasins of the enlightened mystic, Osho.

Magic happens around Dhiraja and Virato...and they have attracted other practitioners with outstanding abilities, success and credentials...

Atkins Harper Announces Expansion Plans For '77

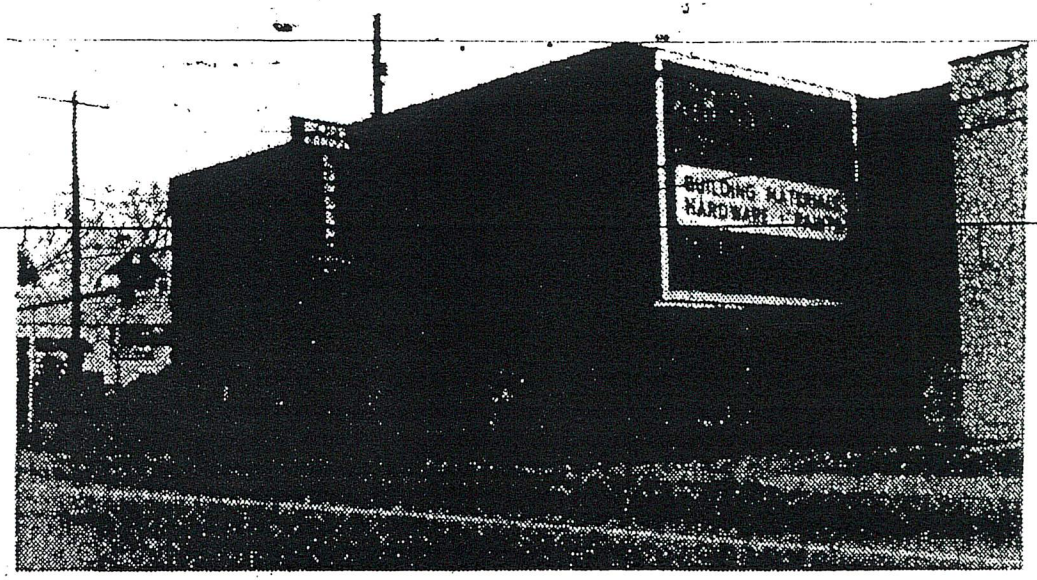
Atkins Harper Lumber Company was founded by Harry T. Atkins in 1938 and has long been established as a leading business in the West Asheville area.

The slogan "Everything from Foundation to Roof," is backed by quality materials, service, and availability of the major building materials for housing needs. Atkins owned and operated the business until July 1975 when he sold the company to Builder Marts of America but remained as president and consultant until July 1976.

At that time Builder Marts of America named John Kenneth White to succeed Atkins as president and general manager. White has 18 years experience in the lumber business in sales, purchasing and management.

During 1976 the firm renovated the sales floor, added a new contractor sales office, and additional products brought into stock. George Woodruff was hired as an outside salesman and is now servicing the contractors in Asheville and the surrounding area.

Atkins-Harper has expansion plans for the year of 1977. A new sales floor and additional lumber sheds will be acquired to better serve our customers for the years to come. Product additions will be kitchen cabinets, vanities, carpet, light fixtures, and a more complete line of plumbing.



A LEADING BUSINESS in West Asheville, Atkins Harper Lumber Co. is planning to expand its sales floor and storage areas in 1977.

REMODELED ATKINS-HARPER BUILDING

Remodeled Atkins-Harper Firm Has Grand Opening

Atkins-Harper Lumber Company at 322 Haywood Road is observing the grand opening of its newly expanded and remodeled operation this week.

The landmark firm in West Asheville was bought about two years ago by Builders Mart of America, a nationwide firm that has since begun a major expansion and upgrading of the local outlet.

According to retail sales manager Jim Burrell the first step in the project was renovating the old sales building into a 3,500-square-foot showroom.

Next came construction of a new 60 by 110-foot retail sales building adjacent to the renovated showroom.

Burrell said the showroom will have displays of all types of items in construction from kitchen cabinets to the firm's new line of lighting fixtures.

Shoppers can brouse through the showroom area, pick out the items they like and then go to the adjacent retail sales building where a sales person will help them.

Kenneth White is general manager of the store that claims it can supply anything in home construction from foundation materials to the roof.

"I think we've got as many different types of lumber as anyone in this area. We've got white pine, redwood, cedar, fir, yellow pine. Anything that anyone would want," Burrell said.

The company is also an outlet for a full line of siding and the Andersen windows.

In addition to the new retail sales building, the company has bought adjacent property and converted it into a large parking area for customers and an expanded lumber area.

Burrell added that the company also has a full woodworking shop where they can turn out all types of custom made wood products including windows and pre-hung doors.

"We feel like we've got a real good location here in West Asheville," Burrell said.

FRANK AUSTIN NEW STORE IS POPULAR SPOT

Though open but a short while, the Frank Austin store located at 442 Haywood street, West Asheville, is one of the busiest spots in the community. The store is now completely stocked and ready to serve its patrons with the finest quality merchandise at the lowest prices.

With Spring just around the corner, scores of property owners are beginning to think about repairing and remodeling, and many are planning to build. With this in mind, it would be a wise idea for any owner to visit the Austin store and get estimates on paints, hardware, building materials of all kinds . . . and by all means lumber.

We emphasize lumber in the program of building because the Austin Company has one of the finest of saw mills at Hominy and turns out orders of cut lumber in a speedy fashion. The mill has fifteen efficient men, all of them expert in woodwork. There you can find the kind of wood you want, have it sized quickly, then delivered to your door ready to be used. Scores of orders are coming in at this plant, not alone from local persons but from remote sections.

Paints carried at the store are nationally known brands and, of course, are guaranteed. Roofing, are on hand in great variety and building materials and hardware you can find just what you want to help you in building, remodeling or repairing at the Austin store.

Call 1828 and get estimates before you make a decision on hardware, paints, lumber and building materials. You'll get the best at the lowest prices.

B & B Pharmacy was established in 1953 as a small "corner" drugstore to serve Asheville as "Prescription Specialists" for many years.

Co-founder, L. BALFOUR BROOKSHIRE, had the foresight to realize that to meet future generation needs, expansion was necessary. Almost 40 years have elapsed and B & B Pharmacy is now "Four Times Bigger & Better" than ever.

Now considered one of the leading full service independent pharmacies in the southeast, B & B Pharmacy is serving the greater Asheville metro area with pride still as "Prescription Specialists."

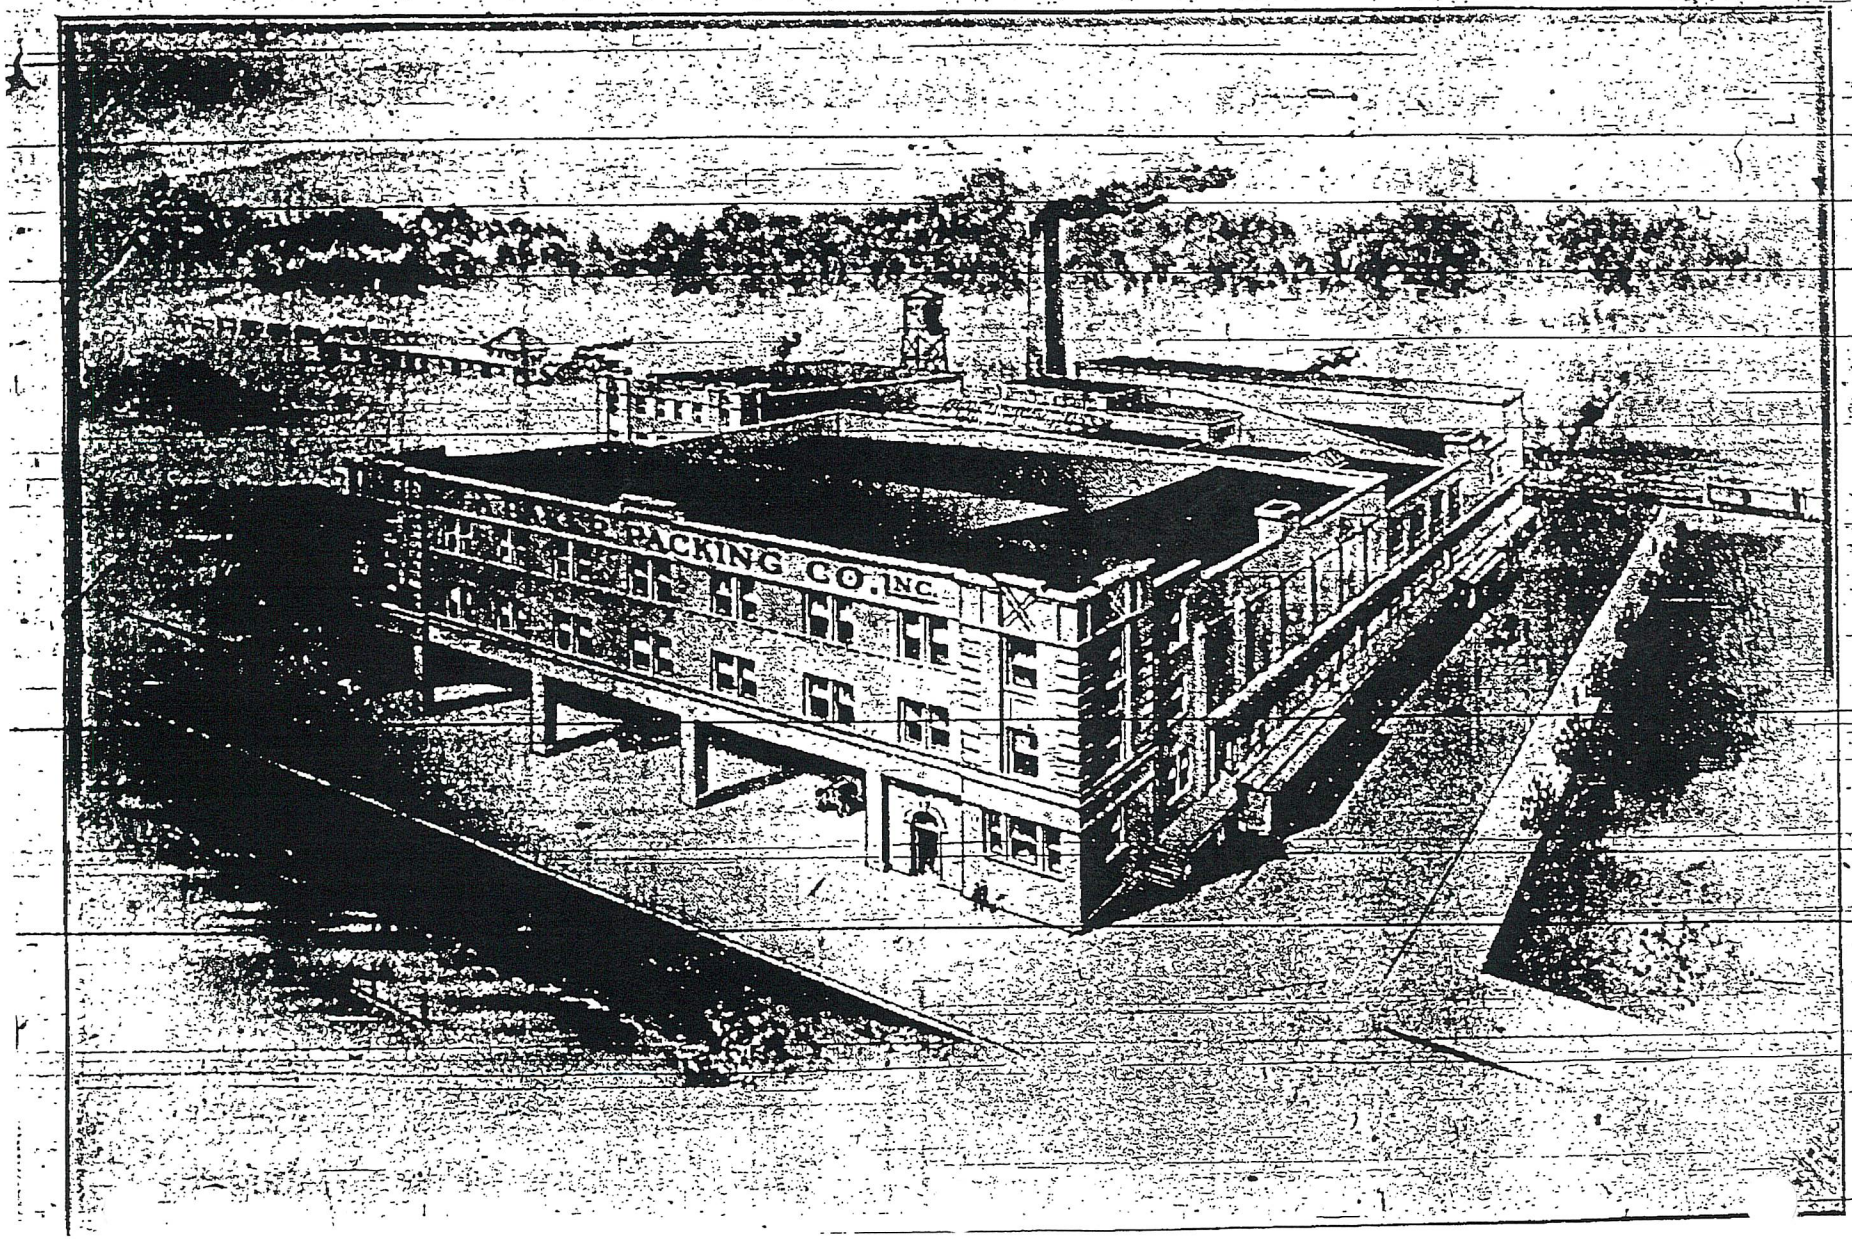
Ground For Erection Of $250,000 Plant For J. A. Baker Packing Co. Will Be Broken Within Next Few Days



Ground will be broken here July 1st on the site for the erection of the plant of the J. A. Baker Packing Company, Inc., of this city.

The plant when completed will be the largest and finest in the entire South, it is stated by those interested, with the exception of a plant in Louisville, Ky. It will not only excel in size but in equipment and in modern packing principles, it is declared.

This plant, with the buildings and grounds and equipment ready for operation, will cost approximately $250,000, it is stated, which will leave the company with ample working capital.

Upon completion, 75 persons will constitute the operating force. However, at full capacity the plant will have from 100 to 125 employes, it is said. This will mean a payroll of around $2,500 per week.

The site is on the French Broad River, near the Southern Railway freight depot. The front of the building will face the river, while to the rear will be the railroad yards. Below the plant site is the generating plant of the Asheville Power and Light Company, while above it are the yards of the Central Coal Company. The structure will be erected on the place where Ferguson formerly fed the animals.

Officers of the new Asheville concern are: John A. Baker, president; T. F. Gerety, vice-president; Dr. H. C. Bruner, secretary; John A. Baker, treasurer. Directors are: Mr. Baker, Asheville; Dr. Bruner, Asheville; T. F. Gerety of Louisville; Mr. Gerc[illegible] Asheville, formerly of Louisville, [illegible] at one time connected with [illegible] five" packers; J. H. Manley, Asheville, Marcus Erwin is general counsel. The Central Bank and Trust Company is the registrar and transfer agent. Stockholders include: E. W. Grove, W. L. Cherry, Morris Meyers, Dan Hill, Jr., D. Miller, Frank A. Barbar, A. D. Stoner, S. Sternberg, J. G. K. McClure, Sr., and several others.

The object for which the corporation was formed, as stated in the articles of incorporation, is "slaughtering of live stock; dressing, preparing, selling and dealing in meat and meat products; manufacturing and sale of by-products; packing of farm products; refrigeration and cold storage." The killing capacity will be 500 hogs and 50 cattle daily, officers say.

The company is capitalized at $500,000, with $200,000 paid in, according to Dr. Bruner.

The purpose of the promoters, it is declared, is to build and operate a new meat packing and provision plant, the most modern and efficient that experience and ingenuity can devise. Mr. Bruner states that the most important point to be considered in building of an enterprise of this kind is the location. Extensive terminal railroad facilities for the transfer of live stock and finished products should be had, and the plant should be within easy reach of wholesale, retail and jobbing centers.

The management gave due consideration to these items in making the decision to locate in Asheville, and officers of the company believe that the present conditions and the future possibilities will prove the wisdom of their selection. In summing up these advantages, Dr. Bruner states that Asheville affords all the requirements for a packing plant, viz: railroad facilities, center of population, center of live stock raising district of State, center of jobbing district, center of population of the Western part of the State, macadam roads leading in all directions, thus allowing for refrigerator truck service to the small towns, and giving them fresh meat three times per week.

An abattoir will be operated for the use of butchers who wish to have their stock killed, dressed, cooled and handled in a sanitary plant and under the inspection of a regularly appointed Government inspector, thus insuring at all times that they will have clean and wholesome meat products regularly passed and inspected under the provisions as set forth by the Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Government. Dr. Bruner states that this is an added feature that the State at this time does not have.

Stock yards for the sale, feeding, watering and handling of live stock will be maintained for the use of the handlers and producers of live stock. This will greatly benefit the live stock industry, it is believed, as it will assure the advantages of having a central point for shipping stock in and out; besides, it is declared, it will insure to stock raisers at all times a ready and favorable cash market for their products.

Benefits to the State are declared to be as follows: Building home industries, keeping of money at home, and giving to the people of the community the fruits of their toil, helping the State to keep step with its progress, and putting its products before others.

In regard to the buildings and equipment, the cold storage section will be separated from the slaughtering and manufacturing sections by fire walls, in order to reduce insurance cost and fire hazard, it is stated. The coolers will be insulated with cork and provided with the spray system of refrigeration, which is said to be the most economical and efficient.

The slaughtering house will be equipped with the very latest machinery for slaughtering and handling of by-products, officers say. Every piece of machinery will be of an improved type and of sufficient capacity to take care of the increased killing for the future expansion of the plant. The buildings will have the following features:

(a) Extensive railroad docks. (b) Covered loading court for trucks. (c) Elevators of large capacity. (d) Spiral chutes and conveyors. It is stated that the commercial value of these features are: (1) Increased speed in freight movement, manufacture, transfer and loading of miscellaneous and standard packing commodities. (2) Reduced handling cost per ton. (3) Lowest insurance cost due to fireproofing walls and fire doors.

Below are listed some facts that bring out the possibilities of a meat packing plant, as proposed for Asheville. There are from 12 to 14 cars of meat shipped into Asheville each week for local consumption and distribution.

Several hundred head of hogs, cattle, veals and lambs are slaughtered and handled by local butchers.

It is stated that the institutional requirements alone in this State are sufficient to take the entire output of the plant, to say nothing of the other localities and their requirements for meat and meat products.

Asheville is the center of distribution for Western North Carolina and is within easy reach of other markets and wholesale centers.

This city is in close proximity to the live stock producing sections. Macadam roads radiate in all directions, thus allowing for [illegible] concern, by the use of refrigerated truck, to give to the cities and towns within a radius of 100 miles fresh meat and meat products every other day.

Besides this, a business of over three quarters of a million dollars is already established, it is brought out. And this business has outgrown its present quarters, thus necessitating expansion.

From a small meat shop of a few years ago to a volume of business of over $750,000 per annum is the story in brief of the business concern run by J. A. Baker in Asheville, it is said. Mr. Baker states: "For several years past I have owned and operated the J. A. Baker Packing Company, the largest meat packing plant in Western North Carolina. The practical knowledge gained from my own experience brought me forcibly to realize the great need for more and better meat packing facilities in this State."

Mr. Gerety, the vice-president, has been in this line of work all his life, it is stated. His labors have been with the "big five" packers, where he started in the sticking room and worked his way through the various departments to branch manager, and on to general efficiency expert. He recently severed his connection with the New Emmart Packing Company, of Louisville, Ky. The success of the Louisville plant has been almost phenominal, it is declared. Within the short space of six months, under Mr. Gerety's guidance as general manager, this plant has a volume of business running at the rate of over $5,000,000 per annum, Dr. Bruner states.

Dr. H. C. Bruner has had wide experience in financing in this and other lines. He, like Mr. Gerety, comes to the Asheville organization fresh with the knowledge and experience gained by his association with the Emmart Packing Company.

The new concern has received letters of endorsement from many persons prominent in the life of the community, such as E. W. Grove, S. Sternberg, Frank Whitman, James G. K. McClure, Jr., J. G. Adams and others. Dr. William Moore, State Veterinarian, with headquarters at Raleigh, has been given assurance of his co-operation. The letter from Dr. Grove says in part: "After carefully going over your prospectus, you may rest assured that you will have both my moral and financial support. In my opinion there is not a more greatly needed enterprise or one that will do more toward the future development of Western North Carolina, and our city. I have full confidence in J. A. Baker and his organization. It is with pleasure that I give you my endorsement and subscription."

Dr. Bruner states that financially the plant will be a great help to Western North Carolina. At 200 hogs per day, weighing 200 pounds each, the concern will purchase 40,000 pounds of hogs each day or 240,000 pounds per week of six days. At eight cents per pound this will result in $28,000 each week, it is said, this going to the raisers of this section.

It is also pointed out that the company will use 25 head of cattle each day, averaging roughly 900 pounds each. This means the purchase of 22,500 pounds a day. In a week of six days this means the purchase of 135,000 pounds, which figured at eight cents a pound will cost $10,800. Calves will cost around $3,000 a week. Totalled, the cost of hogs, cattle and calves is estimated at $42,600 a week. This, combined with the total weekly payroll of about $2,500, makes $45,100. Other purchases, expenses, etc., will total $15,000, Dr. Bruner states, thus making a total outlay of around $60,100 each week. This figured for 52 weeks in the year will mean the total sum of about $3,125,200 going into the community each year from this packing plant alone. These figures are those of officers of the company who are men of experience in estimating costs of business of this kind.

Baker Packing Plant Is Being Rushed to Completion; Need of Greater Livestock Productions

Remarkable progress is being made in the construction of the new plant of the J. A. Baker Packing Company, which is to be opened about September 15, according to officials of the company. The four-story structure, designed by Arnold H. Vanderhoof, is to be built completely of reinforced concrete, steel and hollow tile at an expense of approximately $350,000. Considerable time still is to expend and work is proceeding as rapidly as material is brought to the scene of operations.

The plant will have a capacity of from 300 to 500 hogs daily and 50 head of cattle, making a large outlet for the livestock industry of Western North Carolina. Efforts are now being made to have farmers of the nearby counties increase the number of hogs being raised on their lands in order to keep up to the killing capacity of the Baker plant.

Market prices will be paid by the Baker Company for livestock, according to officers of the concern, and farmers will be enabled to get the prices they desire in this way by driving or shipping their cattle directly to the plant, instead of having to ship to Middlewestern markets and getting whatever price governs at the time the cattle are accepted.

The beef produced in this section is far superior to the Middlewestern quality shipped in, officers of the Company state, and commands a premium of several cents on the pound. Hogs produced here are also of excellent quality, they state.

As part of the company's service to Western North Carolina, four refrigerating motor trucks will be put in operation this fall, making three trips weekly 100 miles in length, thus furnishing meats to the greater part of this section. Six other trucks will also be used, and all of these have already been purchased.

A business of approximately $800,000 annually is being done at the present plant on Patton Avenue, according to J. N. Dalton, secretary-treasurer of the company, and these quarters are badly cramped. Animals are now slaughtered in the country and shipped in to the refrigerators while in the new plant an entire room at the top of the structure will be given over to this purpose.

This plant will utilize everything but the proverbial squeal, according to Mr. Dalton, as chicken feed and fertilizer will be made out of the byproducts of the meats.

Three ice-making machines will be installed for making the ice needed by the plant, and four refrigerators will be in use. These are completely cork insulated at an expense of about $16,000. Complete packing house equipment of the types used by the principal packing concerns of the country and entirely up to date will be installed.

Tracks will be built directly to the door of the plant for direct shipment. A large concrete loading platform for truck shipment will also be constructed to facilitate delivery.

About two acres of land have been purchased and the structure is being erected on one corner of this. The remaining ground will be used as a stockyard and a sloping gangway of circular shape will be used to drive the cattle to the top of the building where they will be slaughtered and processed downward to the loading platforms and refrigerators.

Building operations were begun last March but owing to bad weather conditions and delay in getting materials little progress was made for some time. The work is now being pushed at full speed and it is hoped to complete it early in September, completion being assured by the end of that month.

The plant is to be a model one in every respect and the company will be able to furnish much better products under better operating conditions than at present, according to Mr. Dalton. With Western North Carolina and Eastern Tennessee to draw from for livestock, this company will be able to greatly reduce the importation of Middlewestern meats, with the probability of almost entirely eliminating this importation when this section produces sufficient meats to cover the local demand and the amount of exportation done by the Baker Company.

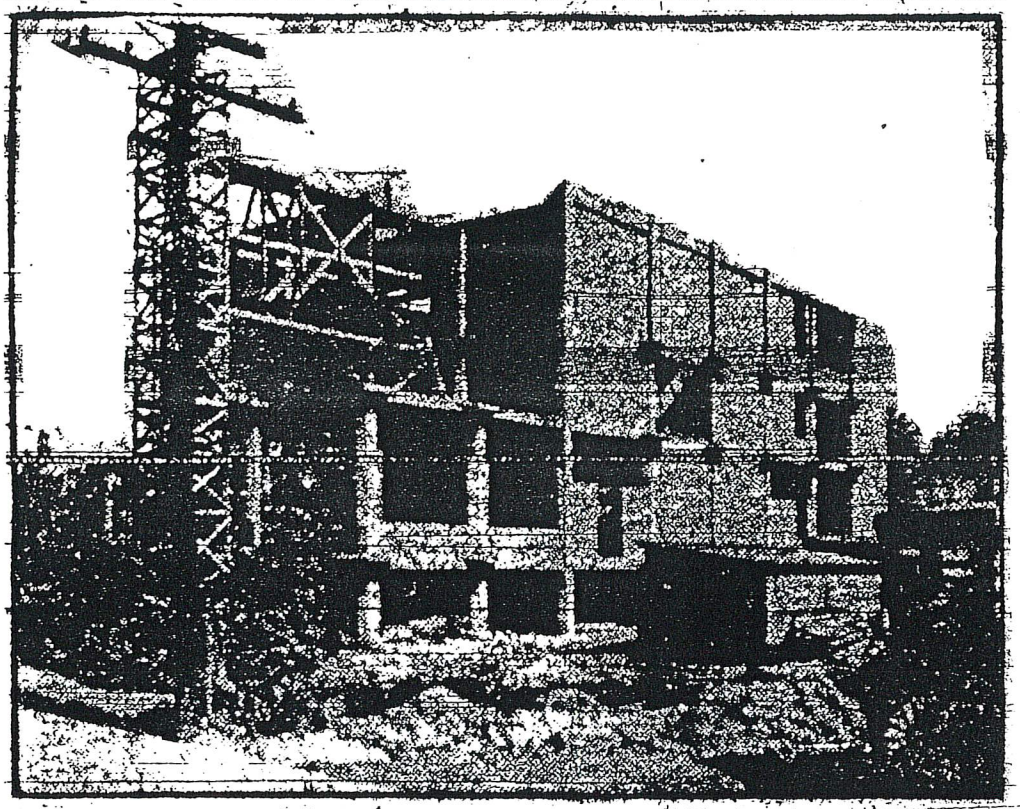
NEW PACKING PLANT



The packing plant being erected by J. A. Baker for the purpose of giving Asheville one of the finest and most up-to-the-minute industries of the kind in the South, is now well underway. This plant will represent an expenditure of at least $100,000. It is being located near the depot.

RITES TODAY FOR HAMILTON BAKER

Pioneer Business Man Died Early Tuesday In W. Asheville

Funeral service for Hamilton David Baker, 78, well known Asheville business man, who died at his home, 140 Westwood Place, West Asheville, yesterday morning at 6 o'clock, will be held at Calvary Baptist Church this morning at 10 o'clock. The Rev. J. B. Grice, pastor, will officiate, and burial will be in Riverside Cemetery.

Mr. Baker had been a resident of Asheville for the past 50 years, and was a pioneer business man of this section. He was a partner with his son in operating the Baker Packing Company, and a well known civic leader. He came to Asheville from Ashe County when 28 years of age. Death followed an illness of several months at his home.

Surviving are two sons, J. A. Baker and H. B. Baker, and one daughter, Mrs. Emma B. McDonald.

BALL'S BARBER SHOP BEGAN IN 1909

Ball's Barber Shop began operation in 1909, in the West End of Asheville, moving to the present location in 1928. Enoch G. Ball Sr. sold to his son "Junior" in 1953. Junior has operated the shop since, and has a total of 15 years experience, specializing in flat top haircuts, and styles to fit your head.

BALL

Mr. Ball Jr. is a licensed minister in the Baptist Church, and is widely known for singing gospel songs on TV and radio.

He resides on Ben Lippen Road with his wife Barbara, and two sons, Keith and David, and six months old daughter Karen.

The Everett Ball career plan: Work until you 'give out'

JOHN BOYLE
Columnist
JBoyle@citizen-times.com

The next time you're tempted to complain about how hard you're working, think of Everett Ball.

At age 87, the man just won't slow down. While Ball's Service Center isn't as busy as it once was, Ball still works just about every day, towing cars and doing minor mechanical repairs.

"I'll work till I give out — and then I'll quit," said Ball.

Melissa McCulloch, a local Fed Ex driver who often stops by Ball's shop, suggested I do a story on him. She loves hearing him talk about the old days, when Smoky Park Highway was a three-lane road and the area was full of houses, not just big box retailers and car dealers.

"Today there were two vehicles up on lifts at the same time," she told me Friday. "He's the hardest working person on my route."

Ball has been on Smoky Park Highway since 1938 — heck, he's had the same business phone number since 1938 — and he's not looking to sell.

"I've talked to a lot of real estate people who want to buy," Ball said with a smile Friday.

Between his house just above the station and the business itself, he and his wife Helen are sitting on about two acres of prime real estate on one of the area's busiest roads.

Nobody would like to see him retire more than Helen, who showed up around lunchtime Friday to check on her stubborn man when he didn't answer the phone (he was busy talking to a newspaper columnist — oops).

"I fuss at him, but it don't do no good," she said with a laugh.

I mentioned to her how some people retire and end up bored out of their minds, lamenting the decision to quit work.

"That's what he's afraid of," Helen Ball said.

If he's not out on a tow job or helping a customer, Ball is always puttering around the property, cleaning up or trimming grass. When I stopped by Friday he was putting the hedge clippers away.

Ironically, he got turned down for armed forces services in World War II because of infantile paralysis in his right leg, which still causes him to wear a brace.

He used to sell gasoline, but he got out of that a few years back when he was going to need new tanks.

"It cost me $32,000 to get started in this business, and it cost me $42,000 to stop selling gas," Ball said, referring to the cost of digging up the old tanks. "It would've been $350,000 to put new ones and new pumps back in."

At one point, Ball had seven employees, but for the past 10 years, he's been going it alone. His two mechanics left to start their own businesses.

He sold his big rollback tow truck and a 1971 Ford he used on occasion, but he still operates a smaller rollback, answering calls on local roads but avoiding the interstates.

Everett and Helen have a son who lives in Milwaukee and a daughter who lives locally, but neither is interested in the business, which has been at its present location since 1958.

Not that Everett would give up the reins anyway. His health is good, he says, except for some side effects from medication his doctor put him on.

"I blame it all on my doctor," he said of the aches he got. "He's trying to lower my cholesterol, and it about killed me. I tried about six different kinds. As long as I don't take that stuff, I feel pretty good."

Born and raised in Asheville, Ball was one of 14 children born to Enoch and Irene Ball. Just six survive today.

They raised hogs and cows and kept chickens, which Ball says tided them over during the Great Drepression. His father died at 77, but his mother lived to 99, an age Ball hopes to reach — right at Ball's Service Center.

"I got plans to quit when I get my money out of this place, or when I'm in Pisgah View Memorial Park," he said.

Asheville Citizen July 18, 2005

John Boyle/CITIZEN-TIMES

Although he's approaching 90, Everett Ball has no plans of quitting the business he established on Smoky Park Highway in 1938. "I just don't want to sit around and do nothing," Ball says. "I like to stay busy."

W. ASHEVILLE TO HAVE BANK

Charter Has Been Secured for Bank of West Asheville With Capital Stock of $10,000.

G. D. CARTER WILL BE PRESIDENT, IS REPORT

Institution Promoted by A. H. Miller, of Greer, S. C.—Organization Next Week—To Open in 30 Days.

The stupendous European war and the much talked-of financial stringencies resulting therefrom have caused no uneasiness in this particular section, as indicated by the announcement just made that a new bank is to open shortly in West Asheville. A charter for the institution has already been granted by the state, and it will be known as the Bank of West Asheville. It will have a capital stock of $10,000 and will probably open within the next 30 days. There will be a meeting of the stockholders here next week, when a board of directors and officers will be selected. It is reported that G. D. Carter will head the list of officers as president.

The promotion of this new banking institution was undertaken a short time ago by A. H. Miller of Greer, S. C., who is interested in the banks at Fletcher and Clyde. Since Mr. Miller took the proposition up he has received the strong support of practically every business man in West Asheville and the amount of the capital stock is almost subscribed in full. The incorporators include a number of West Asheville's leading business men and with such co-operation among them the success of the institution seems to be assured even before plans are perfected for its opening.

Aside from the business of selecting directors and officers at the meeting of stockholders next week, arrangements will be made for fixtures and a building will be secured for the bank. Just as soon as the fixtures are received and can be installed the bank will open its doors for a general banking business.

West Asheville is one of the most thriving of Asheville's suburban towns, and during the last few years has experienced a most remarkable growth. The population of the town at present is estimated to be about 5,000. A building boom has been in progress for over a year now and realty values have gone up amazingly. The town has had a trolley service to Asheville for something over three years now, and numbers of men maintain their residences there and look after their business interests in Asheville. Work is now in progress in installing modern water and sewer systems, which will give the residents the advantage of Asheville city water, which is brought from the summit of Mount Mitchell, 18 miles away.

The little city across the French Broad, aside from possessing the combined advantages of both city and suburban life, is situated in close touch with one of Buncombe county's richest sections, the Hominy valley. Many of the residents of this section have found it more convenient and advantageous to transact business in West Asheville, and as a result the business of the town within the past few years has grown by leaps and bounds. A banking institution became a real necessity, and the manner in which the business men supported the proposition to open a bank there indicates very clearly that they have realized this need of the town. The scope of business transacted in the town will be greatly broadened by the opening of the bank and its opening will likewise serve to show the sound business conditions now existing there.

TO ESTABLISH BANK IN WEST ASHEVLLE

Charter for Institution of $10,000 Capital Stock Granted by State—To Be Operated Soon.

The Bank of West Asheville with a capital stock of $10,000, has secured a charter from the state and will begin operations in a short time, according to the promoters of the plan. It is stated that the bank will begin operations probably within thirty days. The business men of West Asheville are behind the movement and it is stated that most of the stock has been subscribed already.

A. H. Miller, of Greer, S. C., started the promotion of the scheme several months ago and it met with immediate success. Mr. Miller is interested in banks at Fletchers and Clyde. General enthusiasm has been evinced in the banking plan and many of the largest propertyholders in the town of West Asheville have invested in the stock.

A meeting of the stockholders will be held next week when officers and directors will be chosen and it is announced that the name of G. D. Carter is being mentioned for the position of president.

Aside from the business of selecting officers and directors, a building to be occupied will be selected. As soon as this has been done, fixtures for the offices will be chosen and ordered.

The establishment of a bank in West Asheville at this time is taken as an indication of the prosperity and growth of the town, which has a population at present of about 5,000. It is one of the most thriving of the towns in the surrounding section and it is expected that the new bank will add much to the business industry of the place.

Another iconic city restaurant closes

BILL SANDERS/ WSANDERS@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

The Barbecue Inn on Patton Avenue has closed after 50 years. The West Asheville institution was founded by Gus Kooles in 1961. Charlie Kooles, one of Gus' sons, sits in the restaurant's original dining room.

By Jason Sandford
JSANDFORD@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

ASHEVILLE — Long before grits had to have jalapenos and cheese and collard greens became cool, places like the homey Barbecue Inn ruled the restaurant scene.

But a 50-year run ended over the weekend for the restaurant overlooking downtown from atop Patton Avenue, with its iced tea served in Mason jars and ice cream offered free to finish off a meal of eastern North Carolina-style barbecue.

The family-owned institution decided to close for good over the July Fourth weekend. Martha Kooles, who owns the restaurant with Woody and Chuck Kooles, on Tuesday cited recent economic hardships.

"Business was way down already," Martha Kooles said. "We knew it was going to be tough to make it through the winter."

The restaurant's closure followed word that Three Brothers, a family-owned restaurant dishing out plates full of spaghetti and spanakopita for 52 years in Asheville, had closed Friday.

The Zourzoukis family, who opened the restaurant at the corner of Montford Avenue and Haywood Street in April 1959, said second-generation owners wanted to spend more time with family.

The two restaurants opened in an era of Asheville dining vastly different from today. Roadside diners and traditional fare dominated then, while today, new twists on favorites likely greens and grits and locally sourced foods draw attention.

There's still plenty of good news on the Asheville restaurant scene. The Circle in the Square pizzeria and Green Sage Coffeehouse and Café are both preparing to open second locations, while Rocky's Hot Chicken

Shack, which had been closed for about a year, reopened last week on Patton Avenue in West Asheville.

"I feel like the restaurant scene in Asheville has changed in the past 15 years, and as a restaurant, you have to move and grow and change to keep up," said Gabe Fore, who owns New Restaurant Logic, a restaurant consulting business.

"You don't have to change your whole menu or concept, but you do have to keep it fresh and keep the community aware of what you're doing," Fore said. Restaurants that do more than one thing well, such as serve great cocktails as well as tasty food, also do well in Asheville, he said.

Little changed over the years at the Barbecue Inn, whose owners considered its tradition of consistent eastern Carolina pit-cooked barbecue its biggest selling point.

Gus Kooles spent a summer in Goldsboro learning the barbecue business before opening the Barbecue Inn at 1341 Patton Ave. near the intersection with Haywood Road.

The eatery, with its tender pork, hushpuppies, vinegar-based sauce and eclectic collection of decorative pigs, drew raves from diners and repeat business from families.

The pig collection started when Gus Kooles offered a free meal to anyone who brought him a unique pig. Hundreds poured in, and the restaurant walls are rimmed with shelves of all kinds of pigs fashioned from ceramic, metal and even jade.

"I have fond memories of family dinners there," said Asheville resident Hunter Goosman. "When we would go out Patton Avenue, starting up the hill there were two restaurants out there and the Barbecue Inn was one of them."

Martha Kooles emphasized her family's appreciation for the community's support over the decades and said she was proud of the service the family provided.

"We are going to fall back and regroup," she said.

"We are taking some time off to enjoy family."

West Asheville Girls Are Invited To Attend The Plaza Party

For convenience and to take care of a rapidly increasing membership in the new Doll Society, The Asheville Citizen yesterday opened a new doll headquarters for West Asheville girls at Barker's Department Store, 462 Haywood road, like the headquarters at the Susquehanna Furniture company, 15 Broadway, the Middlemount Gardens, 38 Haywood street, Miss Cruise's Beauty Shop at 23 Haywood street, and Mooneyham's Drug Store at Woodfin. Barker's was a busy place yesterday, especially after school hours, even if the weather man did deliver a showery day.

With all the other little girls in Western North Carolina and Asheville, the girls living in West Asheville have been extended a cordial invitation to attend The Citizen's big doll party to be held in the Plaza theater on Pack Square Saturday morning, beginning at 10 o'clock. The party will last a whole hour and everything will be free, including a special picture in which Harold Lloyd, the funny man of the movies, will entertain the guests, and ice cream will be served.

EWART M. BALL COLLECTION, RAMSEY LIBRARY, SPECIAL COLLECTIONS, UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA AT ASHEVILLE

"West Asheville Revealed: Contemporary and Historic Photos" is the title of an exhibit that opens to the public Friday in the Mel Blowers Gallery at Ramsey Library, UNCA. It is one of the products of the West Asheville History Project sponsored by West Asheville Branch Library and funded in part by the N.C. Humanities Council. The photos present a varied portrait of a community whose history endures in many of its structures and in its neighborhoods.
Below, Lissa Juedemann's contemporary photo of Meadow Dry Goods & Shoes tells two stories. The business, established by Nanny Thomas, and the building, built by her husband in 1949, operates unchanged; but, around it, the environment has been altered by modern highway construction. The exhibit will be on display free and open to the public through July 14. For more information, call 251-4990.

Do you care if your coffee is organic or fair trade?

"I try to get anything organic because it's organic. I just like a cup of coffee, to tell you the truth. As long as it's not decaf."
— Jennifer Webb, 31, drinking organic Guatemalan at Malaprop's

"I don't mind organic coffees. Taste, flavor — that's what I'm looking for."
— Kevin Morrisson, 48, drinking home-brewed Maxwell House

"Yes (but) if I need a cup of coffee and they don't have it I'll still get a cup of coffee."
— Amy Cavanaugh, 34, drinking organic Mexican at Blue Moon

"I never specifically look for it, but most of the places I go seem to have it."
— Joe Pisapia, 35, drinking Sumatran at Beanstreets

"No. We just drink it."

Get to the bottom of your cup

By Jill Ingram
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — We drink it every day, but a lot of us don't know beans about our coffee.

"I've had people ask me for organic coffee and then say, 'I don't know what that is anyway,'" says Rachel Sanders, 23, barrista and manager at Mountain City Coffee Roasters in Asheville's Grove Arcade.

The coffee game has gotten more complicated in the past few years, with choices of organic, fairly traded and shade-grown coffee. Many stores, restaurants and coffeehouses in Western North Carolina deliver on choices of all three — sometimes in a single serving — but what does that mean to you? Read on to see what's up in your cup.

ON THE NET: For more information on fair-trade coffee, visit these sites: http://transfairusa.org/ or www.equalexchange.com

Jill Ingram/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Eli Ornberg, a roaster at Bean Werks in West Asheville, checks an espresso blend before he dumps it from the roaster.

What's it all mean?

Fair trade

Promotes equitable, nonexploitative dealings with producers in developing countries. Fair trade principles stress minimum prices; credit availability; and stable, long-term business relationships directly with farmer cooperatives, avoiding intermediaries or middlemen. Fair trade certification can also apply to tea, chocolate and other foods. TransFair USA is the body responsible for designating vendors fair-trade-certified.

Organic

Produced by an approach that views the farm as an ecosystem. Emphasis is placed on recycling, composting, soil health and biological activity with the goal of long-term protection of the farm environment. Synthetic chemicals are rigorously avoided.
In accordance with the 1990 Organic Foods Production Act, the U.S. Department of Agriculture is standardizing the use of the label "organic." Organically grown coffee is not necessarily shade-grown, but it usually is.

Shade-grown

Generally refers to coffee grown under a natural canopy and to farming practices nearer the "rustic" end of the shade spectrum, but for now is pretty much whatever the seller says it is. A number of organizations are working to establish a standard, enforceable label. Bird conservationists in particular are interested in shade coffee. Depending on the species of shade trees used and the structure of the tree cover, anywhere from a few to scores of resident and migratory bird species will use Latin American and Caribbean coffee farms for food and cover.

Did you know?

- The Asheville Sam's Club consistently ranks in the top 5 of the store's 535 U.S. outlets in sales of Café Bom Dia brand organic coffee.
- Churches, including some locally, sell and serve fair trade coffees to promote better conditions for coffee farmers.
- There are two primary categories of coffee: robusta and arabica. Robusta is considered inferior and is often used for instant coffee and in supermarket-grade blends, but the caffeine content of robusta beans is about twice that of arabica.
- Coffee plants typically grow in regions that are within 25 degrees of either side of the equator and that receive at least 75 inches of rain fall per year.
- There are four businesses in Asheville that roast coffee: Mountain City Roasters, Bean Werks, Asheville Coffee Roasters and Biltmore Coffee Traders.
- Coffee beans are really seeds or pits of the fruit called coffee cherries.

Bledsoe Building Will Open To Public Today

Beautiful West Asheville Building Ready For Occupancy

The opening of the beautiful new Bledsoe building today in West Asheville sees the final dream of its builder, J. T. Bledsoe fulfilled. This huge building covers the better part of a large city block and with its completion, West Asheville can well afford to boast of one of the finest structures both from the point of building materials and general layout, to be found any where in this section of the country.

The completion of the Bledsoe building marks one more progressive step in the affairs of the J. T. Bledsoe company, of which J. T. Bledsoe and W. T. Robinson are owners. In addition to the larger holdings of this company such as the new $100,000 building they have also developed Gracelynn, Lucerne Park, a short distance from the new building is three years old and to date has been sold 60 per cent. Beautiful Broadview Park, two miles east of Biltmore is also owned by the Bledsoe company. In addition to extensive Beaver Lake interests this company also owns the Elk Mountain Orcards, consisting of 16,000 trees. The completion of the Bledsoe building is quite a fitting culmination of 23 years in the active real estate field.

The building is located at the junction of Sand Hill road, Vermont, Mildred and Haywood road. It runs east and west standing back 12 feet from the sidewalk with four marquees fronting on Haywood the structure is quite an addition to the community of West Asheville. It also presents the only "white way" in that section of the city. Located only one block from the carline it is according to the census report in the center of population of West Asheville.

Mr. Bledsoe, of the J. T. Bledsoe company, has shown his faith in the future development of this part of the city in very concrete form. Figures and facts, however, admirably bear out his assertion that in West Asheville is to be found a large portion of this sections future growth. The opening of the Bledsoe building today will recall to "old timers" that there was little if any West Asheville 23 years ago. Today West Asheville can boast a population of 15,000 people and bears the added distinction of having grown more in the past three years than any city in North Carolina. Mr. Bledsoe stated that in his opinion the population should double in five years. The new Bledsoe building will help materially in the present as well as future growth of this part of the city.

At present there are two stores in the Bledsoe Building. The Carolina Power and Light Company have opened a large West Asheville branch and H. Pumpford and Son, plumbing and hardware have established a modern plumbing store in an opposite wing. Mr. J. T. Bledsoe stated Friday that he is about to close leases on three more stores which will be announced at an early date. D. W. Smith Realty Co., are Bledsoe and Company's agents representing them in the new building.

Only the best of material was used in the Bledsoe building. A total of 800,000 brick was used, and every wall is constructed of 13 inches of solid brick and stone. Every fourth wall has a 17 inch fire wall. A beautiful porch runs in the rear of the structure with three stairways leading to the street. The roof is finished in Barrett roofing specification.

There are eight large and spacious stores, seven fronting directly on Haywood street, while one is on Mildred Ave. There are 47 rooms on the second floor among which are office spaces as well as well planned apartments. Provision has been made for a hotel plan as 22 of these rooms work into one section of the building with communicating hall ways. Complete skylight and ventilating is carried out all over the building. The bath rooms are all of tile with the most modern of accessories. Four wide stair ways lead to the front of the building and three to the rear.

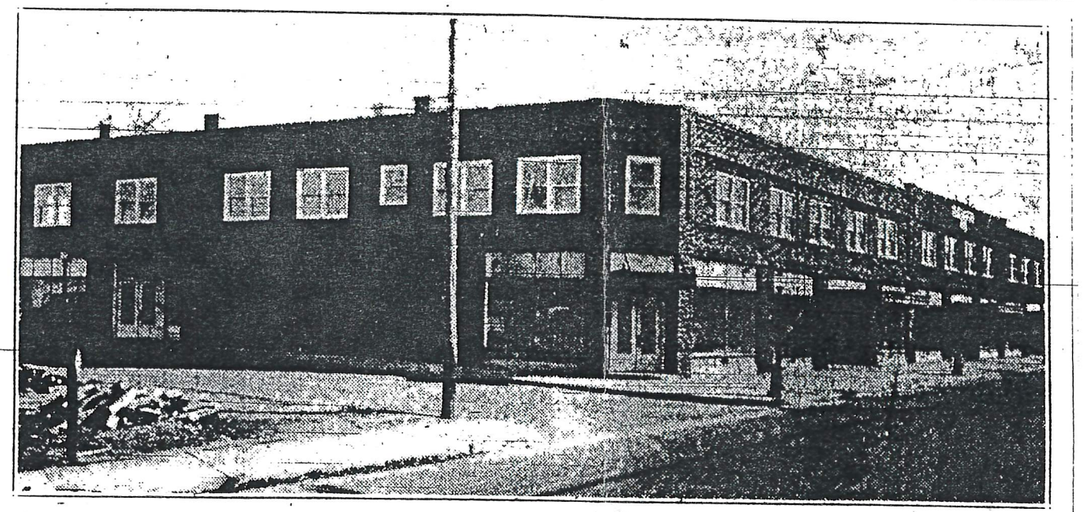
A fact possibly not arrived at by the average laymen is that if this new Bledsoe Building were picked up and stood on its side, it would be 16 stories high, taller in fact than either the Jackson building or the Flatiron building.

The heating of this large building is the most up to date available. The stores are heated with a train unit electric heating system. An electric heater and motor provides uniform heat for every part of each store. No cold corners are possible under this new system. The central heating unit was installed by the Kindler Heating and Plumbing Co., of this city and is provided with an extra tall chimney thus affording a guarantee of cleanliness insofar as smoke and soot is concerned for that part of West Asheville. The chimney itself is 70 feet in height.

Sash and door furnishings were provided by L. A. Trumbo and Son, of Biltmore. Paints and varnishes were supplied by Palmer and Lipe Co., 82 Patton Avenue. Electrical supplies by Marian B. Hayes. Steel and beams by Sternberg and Co., of Asheville; inside trimmings by the Biltmore Lumber Co. The Carr Lumber Co., located at Mt. Pisgah N. C., supplied the beautiful hardwood floors; sand and materials by George Henderson; stone by Asheville Construction Co.

The large heating plant to the rear of the building was sold from the Kindler plumbing and heating company and is one of the largest of its kind. Polk Plumbing Co., installed the plumbing job. Brick and materials from W. H. Westall, W. H. Arthur Company, local manufacturers and contractors furnished approximately 130 squares of metal roofing together with 130 squares of metal ceiling for the new Bledsoe Building. In addition to this, several skylights, furnishing remarkable ventilation were installed and manufactured by this local concern. The four marquees for the 8 large store fronts were also placed and made by W. H. Arthur Co. The skylights, as personal inspection will bear out, present unusually fine ventilation and light, so that there is no part of the big building that is not cared for in this respect. The "white way" which, incidentally is the only one in West Asheville is set to a fine degree by these large marquees.

Another Pretentious Structure For West Asheville



Bledsoe Building, West Asheville's latest structure, will have its formal opening today from 10 o'clock to 6 o'clock and the public is cordially invited to inspect this modern and complete new edifice.

Open for Inspection TODAY 10 A. M. to 6 P. M.

We take pleasure and pride in presenting to the public of Asheville, THE BLEDSOE BUILDING, which has just been completed on the Haywood road, at the intersection of Mildred avenue, and wish to call attention to the facilities and equipment of this structure, which is now available for lease.

This handsome building, fronting 168 feet on Haywood road, with a depth and frontage of 90 feet on Mildred avenue, comprises eight store rooms, and 47 office and apartment rooms overhead.

Two of these business rooms have been already leased and several more are under negotiation.

The D. W. Smith Realty Company, with offices on the second floor, have been appointed our agents and representatives for this building.

THE BLEDSOE BUILDING is one of the most modern and complete structures of its kind in North Carolina. A separate heating plant supplies every room. A white way illuminates the 12-foot sidewalk, and handsome marquees mark each entrance.

Very moderate terms of lease will be arranged.

This building is near the center of population of West Asheville, at an important juncture of thoroughfares, and offers an unusual opportunity for enterprising business firms.

We will be glad to give you full particulars.

We have 21 rooms with an adjoining space for a restaurant in one wing. We will rent this entire section but as a hotel.

■ A MATTER OF OPINION

Losing Vincent's Ear would be a blow to all that makes Asheville unique

David McConville is the co-founder of Black Box Studio, a multimedia production and consulting company based in West Asheville. He is also founder and Chair of the Media Arts Project, a member of the WNC Film Commission, a board member of the Black Mountain College Museum + Arts Center, and a member of the Asheville Sustainable Economic Development Task Force.

Vincent's Ear, a cornerstone of Asheville's independent music scene, recently received an eviction notice, giving the owners a little more than a month to close down. Since Vincent's is an internationally respected venue that represents many years of effort to foster a thriving, unique and creative arts scene in Asheville, it's well worth spending some time to understand the details of how this happened and how it will adversely affect Asheville's reputation, economy and arts scene. This story is wrought with irony, but I believe that there's a way for this incident to be settled that will make most everyone happy by enhancing the reputation of the Lantzius family (the building owners) for their legacy of community-oriented activities while keeping one the bedrocks of our creative community.

It's important to frame this issue in a larger context by considering the trends in economic development, acknowledging the importance of authentic and creative culture. Spawned by Richard Florida's book "The Rise of the Creative Class," local economic developers have been taking a hard look for the past two years at how our region can foster the type of environment that encourages innovation. According to Florida, key elements that have helped other communities thrive are what he calls the Four T's: tolerance, technology, talent and territorial assets (with a strong emphasis on a good local music scene). The strategic importance of Asheville's unique physical and cultural assets cannot be underestimated.

I've been encouraged by the willingness of some of our local planners to not take Florida's theories at face value, opting instead to analyze how his research findings apply specifically to our region. For many, even the term "creative class" is too exclusionary and divisive, since our community is composed of creative individuals who come from diverse backgrounds. There has been an emphasis on the importance of creating an environment in which everyone can find opportunities to work within the community to pursue their dreams. As an example of this ongoing dialogue, Kirk Watson, former mayor of Austin, Texas, and champion of the successful "Keep Austin Weird" campaign, was invited as the keynote speaker at the recent Advantage West annual meeting. In discussing sustainable and novel economic development approaches, Watson stressed the importance of fostering creativity and authenticity. If local economic developers want to better understand the complex dependencies of a creative economy, they need look no further than north Lexington Avenue and the surrounding Lexington Park area.

I've taken these discussions to heart, since the vibrant community that's flourished around Lexington Park is one of the primary reasons I moved back to Asheville after graduating from UNC Asheville and building my career elsewhere.

The explosion of creativity and do-it-yourself ethos that infuses numerous businesses, organizations and festivals in this district is personified by Vincent's Ear. While it may be tempting to stereotype Vincent's customers, many of us wear numerous hats in the larger community.

For instance, I was identified as a "video installation artist" in the recent "Vincent's Ear to close" article (AC-T, Nov. 23), but I'm also a commercial building owner, a business owner and active on the boards of numerous local organizations.

But most importantly, I used to be a broke busboy and college student who hung out and played at Vincent's when they first opened. I've consistently found Vincent's to be one of the few places where such a diverse group can get together on a regular basis to discuss a wide range of topics, in addition to seeing the best local and international independent music.

Rob Pulleyn, downtown commercial building owner and founder of Lark Books, later told me, "It's the only bar in town where I can have a decent conversation, and many folks I've met there later became editors, art directors or designers at Lark."

Authentic homegrown businesses like Vincent's are a vital component of fostering a sustainable future for our community, and their abrupt forced closure is a strong indicator that Asheville could easily lose its appeal to the innovative artists and entrepreneurs that civic leaders are seeking to attract and retain.

It's a huge mistake to assume something else will easily replace Vincent's, since it has taken many years to gain its international reputation. The tremendous outcry and show of support that have emerged in the past two weeks, including benefit concerts, raffles and petitions, is a testament to the impact that Vincent's has had on our community.

It is, of course, fully within the rights of the Lantzius family as private landowners to refuse to renew a lease. No one is asking for any municipal authorities to step in to trample individual rights.

However, since the family recently announced plans for a low-income "artist-friendly" apartment development in an empty Lexington Park lot, it would be wise for them to engage the artists and business owners who have helped turn the area into a thriving arts district.

If the community and tenants are ignored and/or evicted without any reason or effort at dialogue by property owners, history and economic research have both shown that it will harm our struggling attempts to foster a creative economy.

The biggest irony of this situation is that John and Dawn Lanztius have been key to fostering and maintaining Asheville's authenticity and architecture over the years, a fact seldom understood by many newcomers to the area.

It would be a tragedy for their incredible legacy to be threatened by a refusal to understand the multitude of ways in which their efforts have paid off.

It will ultimately serve their own enlightened self-interest to befriend the community they've worked so hard to foster, understanding the perils of destroying or displacing what makes our town genuinely unique.

If this controversy could result in Lexington Park keeping one of its most cherished institutions and opening the door to dialogue between property owners and the larger community to discuss and plan the direction Asheville is taking, this could turn out to be a blessing in disguise.

BENNETT'S DRUG STORE HAS FAMOUS BRAND CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Bennett's Drug Store, 472 Haywood Road in West Asheville has a complete stock of famous name gift suggestions . . . names that are always appreciated, such as Lionel trains, Coty and Max Factor cosmetics, Timex watches, Remington shavers, Shaeffer pens, and Hallmark cards.

BENNETT

The firm opened for business back in 1947 as Bennett's Sodas and Sundries. Then in 1956 the prescription department was added, as well as the present firm name. The drug department is under the supervision of William H. Kauffman, a native of Colorado and graduate of the University of Colorado. A registered pharmacist is always on duty at Bennett's, where pickup and delivery of prescriptions are featured. The store has a complete "soda fountain" as well as 8-hour photo finishing service.

W. R. Bennett, owner, resides in West Asheville with his wife and three daughters, Ann, Susan and Nancy.

Dear Graduate:

Let us congratulate you, and you should be, upon having finished high school.

In starting your life's vocation, do not forget that the bottom of the ladder is crowded, however there is room at the top.

In your endeavors, if they be for yourself or some one else, give more than is expected of you, fulfill your duties just a little better than your fellow employees. Show your employer that his interest is your interest, and you will soon be on top. Those who do not show such interest will wonder why they are always at the bottom. You will find your employer more observing than you think as well as more appreciative.

"Letting well enough alone" is a foolish motto in the life of a man who wants to get ahead. Nothing is "well enough' 'if you can do better.

Please accept this drink ticket as just a little gift.

We wish you every success.

Very truly yours,

For Ninety-Eight Years in Middle N. C. Removed from Mebane in 1891

ASHEVILLE, N. C.

FOUNDED 1793

Located Since 1891 on the Asheville Plateau, Three Miles From the City

BINGHAM IS THE OLDEST SCHOOL FOR BOYS IN THE SOUTHERN STATES, and has always ranked with the great schools of the Middle and New England States. It is one of the few schools in the country that have touched three centuries, and is the only one that has been administered by four generations of professional teachers of the same family.

LOCATED ON A RIDGE ACROSS THE FRENCH BROAD FROM ASHEVILLE, with beautiful mountain peaks in view on all sides, are the school buildings all of brick, constructed to secure the best fire protection, ventilation, sanitation, and quiet study.

More than a century ago, it fixed the standard for training of boys not only in the Carolinas, but in other states.

BINGHAM TRAINING HAS BECOME NOTED over a large portion of our country, not only on account of its high ideals for the development of boys into men of purpose and ambition, but also on account of its high standard of scholarship and mental training.

ITS AREA OF PATRONAGE has been both national and international, having included 40 states of the Union and 15 Foreign Countries.

While the school has maintained the best traditions in the education of the past, it has kept pace with modern progress, without allowing mere fads and fancies to creep in.

THE FACULTY IS COMPOSED ENTIRELY OF PROFESSIONAL TEACHERS, who represent the best of our colleges and universities, North and South.

A BOY AT BINGHAM IS WELL NOURISHED, well cared for, and lives a simple, wholesome life, under the guidance of experienced teachers, all of whom are Christian gentlemen.

ALL FORMS OF ATHLETICS ARE OFFERED, including football, basketball, baseball, track, tennis, and swimming.

SINCE 1861, BINGHAM HAS USED THE MILITARY ORGANIZATION to give a boy a manly, erect bearing, and as a help in securing better discipline, health, and scholarship.

The October 17, 2002 Open House at the restored Bledsoe Building, 775 Haywood Rd. in West Asheville, was a great community event! Over 200 people attended, old and new residents alike, and one of the most-enjoyed features of the evening was an extensive display of old West Asheville photos, furnished by the West Asheville History Project.

The Bledsoe Building was constructed in 1927, opening November 17, 1927. The 2-story multi-use brick building had apartments and offices on the second floor, and some of West Asheville's best-loved businesses on the ground floor; notably, Handte's Seed Store and the Palace Pharmacy.

The restored Bledsoe Building is once again a multi-use building including apartments, offices, and businesses. The new Westville Pub and Haywood Road Market (a whole foods co-op) are located in this historic building.

"Blind Bill's place," operated by W. R. Poteat, a blind man, at the intersection of Haywood road and Wellington street, was robbed last night.

Patrolmen J. M. Coffee and J. R. Pinner, cruising in West Asheville, discovered the robbery about 3:30 o'clock and notified the owner that the place had been entered. A check-up revealed that a quantity of cigarettes, tobaccos and candy had been taken.

Blue Ribbon Hair Salon

Beth Adams has opened The Blue Ribbon, offering haircuts for men and women, in West Asheville.
The shop features refurbished barber chairs from the 1920s, and customers of legal age are offered a free Pabst Blue Ribbon. (Adams estimates that after the noon hour, about 60 percent of customers accept the beer.)
A Greenville, N.C., native, Adams has cut hair in both high-end salons and cheaper places. She said that with the new shop, "I just wanted to hit the middle ground so people can afford to have nice hair. It's about being affordable, convenient and laid-back."
Cuts range from $12-$26, with color services starting at $45. A full line of RMS and Joe Grooming products are available.
The location is 506 Haywood Road, and hours are 10 a.m.-8 p.m. Wednesday-Saturday and 11 a.m.-7 p.m. Sundays. Call 251-4288 or visit www.blueribbonhair.com.

Wine? Champagne? How about a Pabst?

West Asheville hair cuttery offers a free PBR with any haircut

By Alyssa Spencer

Published: Wednesday, February 25, 2009
Updated: Tuesday, August 11, 2009

The Blue Ribbon, a hair salon for men and women in West Asheville, takes the experience of getting a haircut and adds an ice cold PBR while sitting in the barber chair.

"We serve customers a Pabst Blue Ribbon when they sit down," said salon owner Beth Adams. "I decided to serve PBR because I like it, and it's cheap. Beer is our equivalent of other hair salons' wine as a refreshment."

Adams, who opened the salon this past July, said she wanted to own a business with a laid-back vibe and an atmosphere conducive to Asheville's relaxed environment.

"I want customers to walk in and feel like they can just sit down, play cards, talk about whatever they want, drink a beer and get a good haircut," Adams said.

The salon is decorated with old-fashioned furniture, a Pabst Blue Ribbon horse lamp and refrigerator. Customers can sit and wait on a couch near a magazine rack or on stools at the old-fashioned counter.

Adams plays old rock 'n' roll and country music.

"I don't feel like I'm here to get my haircut," said junior Jon Hall. "I feel like I'm at a friend's place, lounging and drinking a cold one."

Adams said she hasn't received any negative comments about serving beer, nor did she need to get special authorization to do so.

"As long as it's a complimentary beverage, and we're not selling it, then it's fine," Adams said. "People love the Pabst thing. Some people come in here and have a beer at ten in the morning. They are limited, though. We give one beer per person, and we do ID."

The salon's staff includes four stylists, including Adams, and prices range from $5 to $26 for cuts and $45 and up for coloring.

"Prices are reasonable, and we can save you money here," Adams said. "If you don't want a shampoo you don't have to pay for it, and if you don't want a blow- dry you don't have to pay for it. So there's no pressure in walking out the door with your hair all done if you're getting ready to just go to the grocery store."

Adams, a first-time business owner, said the hardest parts of opening were getting permits and naming the salon.

"I'm glad the beginning process - dealing with the city and getting permits - is done," Adams said. "It was hard coming up with a name, too; that came last-minute. Someone suggested Blue Ribbon, so we just went with it."

Adams said despite the business' slow start, she now has several regular customers and business is great.

"Our clientele is pretty even between women and men," Adams said. "We get a lot of families - we get more kids than I thought we would. But everybody who comes in is laid-back."

Hair products, such as Goldwell, KMS and Joe Grooming, are for sale at the front of the salon behind the counter and candy dish.

"This place is so quaint," senior Mary Anne Craver said. "The interior is so welcoming and cozy. It seems like a great place to work."

Adams said that she encountered little negative feedback since opening the salon.

"The only negative comments we have run into is at first we were walk-ins only, and we changed that over because people wanted to make appointments. Really the only negative feedback we've had is from people who walk in and we can't fit them in. But for the most part, if people have to wait a little while, they're okay with it."

The Blue Ribbon, located at 506 Haywood Road, offers a 10-percent discount to customers who ride bikes and sells gift certificates in all amounts. Punch cards offer a free haircut after the seventh one.

"People need to get a different price point than a high-end salon or a Super Cuts. They need something in between, and I think that's where we fall in," Adams said.

Bob Furey's Prevents Auto, Truck Volcanic Eruptions

"You'll be seeing lots of them soon — volcanic eruptions of steam pouring out from car truck radiators that could have easily been prevented with the kind of specialized radiator servicing that you get from us," says Bob Furey, chief cook and bottlewasher at Bob Furey's Radiator Service, 1054 Patton Ave. the home of motor cooling engineers who are thoroughly dedicated to one principal business — servicing radiators!

What can be more annoying to a family on a vacation trip, a truck driver behind schedule or a businessman in a hurry than to see the temperature gauge shoot up to the "HOT" mark and a supposely sound radiator boil over with clouds of steam — a situation that says all to plainly, "Here's a person who could have prevented a lot of trouble for himself!"

Whatever kind of radiator it is — for car, truck, tractor or heavy earth-moving equipment — Bob Furey is the man to see when trouble comes. Or better yet, before it comes. At Bob Furey's they have the skill, experience and know-how when it comes to cleaning, repairing, recoring and rebuilding radiators. Only the best in radiator servicing equipment is used by Bob Furey's Radiator Service.

Judging by the large number of auto dealers, garages, servicenters, and auto repair shops who used Bob Furey's service which features two-way radio communication system, it can be said that this firm probably does more radiator servicing than any other in the area.

Call 252-4411 for an appointment or go by Bob Furey's Radiator Service in Asheville at 1054 Patton Avenue, where you will find plenty of convenient parking space.

Bob Furey's is also distributor for G & O and Daniel Cores, two of the best known and most reliable names in the field. For quality, service and speed see Bob Furey for all your radiator servicing needs.

And Bob Furey has now closed his Morganton servicenter and combined its servicing equipment with the Asheville operation which doubles his local servicing capacity and means faster and better service for his many customers.

Forget blogs; these artists prefer old-fashioned type

SUNDAY, APRIL 24, 2005

By Arnold Wengrow
CITIZEN-TIMES CORRESPONDENT

ASHEVILLE — For most people in the computer age, a font is a typeface in your word processing program and a printer is an inkjet on your desk.

For Laurie Corral, the founder of BookWorks, a new studio for book artists in West Asheville, a font is a big wooden case with compartments for hundreds of individual metal letters. And her printer is a floor-mounted cast-iron monster almost as tall as she is.

Corral is one of a growing group of artisan printers who are setting type by hand the way Gutenberg did: one letter at a time.

Letterpress printing itself is part of a constellation of bookmaking crafts, from papermaking to calligraphy to binding, that artists and writers are turning to for new forms of expression. And consumers are turning to their hand-produced products as an antidote to digital blandness.

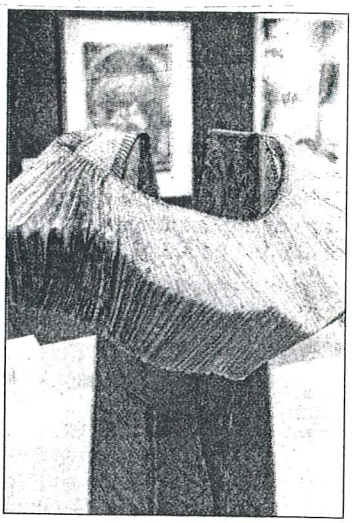
Above, Laurie Corral, left, and Gwen Diehn work on a project they are printing on an antique Brandtjen and Kluce letterpress at BookWorks on Haywood Road in West Asheville.

Left, Laurie Corral moves a text block for an antique Brandtjen and Kluce letterpress at BookWorks, an art book center that offers classes.



SPECIAL TO THE CITIZEN-TIMES

A book is also a sculpture when it's by book artist Dan Essig of Asheville.This is called "In Spirit/Bridge Book" and it's on display through Saturday in "Binding Impressions," an exhibition of book arts and papermaking at the Center for Craft, Creativity and Design in Hendersonville.

Tom Bannister, publisher of the Book Arts Directory in Washington, D.C., estimates there are some 3,000 people involved in the book arts in the United States. "It's one of those subcultures you don't really know about unless you're in it," he said.

Asheville, a welcoming place for artistic subcultures, is attracting letterpress publishers and book artists from other parts of the country. Corral came from Hickory to start BookWorks. Brandon Mise moved from San Francisco to establish Blue Barnhouse Press in West Asheville. And Mark Olson moved his Innerer Klang Press to Asheville's River District after 20 years in Boston.

Going back to letterpress

Why, when people can crank out their own business cards and birth announcements at home, are people going back to letterpress? Why write with a pen in a one-of-a-kind, hand-bound journal when you can publish your blog on the Web?

"Letterpress has such a different look," said Corral. She was standing next to four massive wooden cabinets with more than 80 drawers of type in the sunny former warehouse on Haywood Road that houses BookWorks.

"You can't get that impression with the computer," she said. "You can get flashy, great looking things with Photoshop but it's all starting to look alike because everybody is doing it. But the emboss of letterpress you can't get."

The "emboss" Corral refers to is the distinctive bite of metal type into fine paper as it is pulled through the press under pressure. The tiny crisp ridges on the page are irresistible to your fingertips.

In fact, letterpress has what "Megatrends" author John Naisbitt calls "high touch," a connection with something human in lives that he says are "distanced and distracted" by high tech.

Brandon Mise said his clients for wedding invitations and handmade wedding guest books appreciate things that take time.

"They understand that our whole bodies are going into this process," he said. "We don't push a button. The letterpress is something that can't be mimicked by any other press."

He notes that besides creating a touchable surface, letterpress uses more vibrant inks than offset printing.

A place to experiment

For their day-to-day business, Blue Barnhouse and Innerer Klang print announcements, invitations and stationary. For artists and writers they publish limited-edition books. Blue Barnhouse is home to "Em," a national literary and arts magazine. Mark Olson of Innerer Klang (the name is German for "inner sound") said he specializes in small books of poetry.

Corral sees BookWorks a bit differently. She wants it to be a gathering place for artists to experiment with printing, binding and papermaking. The studio offers week-long and weekend workshops for beginners and for people who already know how to use the equipment. Visitors can sample different bookmaking techniques at two-hour "open studios" on Monday nights.

Some weekends Corral holds what she calls a "salon." Come on over to the studio and play, she'll say in an e-mail to people who have expressed interest. "Bring something to eat, bring your paper and your ideas and let's just have fun."

BOOKWORKS NEWSLETTER - March 2006

Welcome to the March 2006 edition of the BookWorks Newsletter, our monthly publication that features classes and events taking place at Asheville BookWorks. In addition to our newsletter, we hope you'll take a look at our Spring Class Catalog, featuring workshops taught by Alicia Bailey, Sandy Webster, Daniel Essig, Paul Moxon, and many more. We invite you to stop on by our studio at 428 1/2 Haywood Road and pick up a catalog. You can also browse the Spring Class Catalog by clicking on the Workshops link above. If you'd like to receive the catalog via mail, feel free to give us a call at (828) 255-8444, or send us your information via e-mail to info@ashevillebookworks.com. We're also happy to provide bundles of catalogs for you to distribute to anyone who might be interested in taking a class. Just let us know. We hope to see you this month at BookWorks!

CLASSES

Featured Workshops: Paper Making:

Thanks to the kindness and generosity of Gwen Diehn and the Warren Wilson College Art Department, BookWorks will be offering two Paper Making workshops this spring. Taught by artists Colin Frazer and Micah Pulleyn, the weekend workshops will take place at Warren Wilson and will make wonderful use of the college's paper making facilities. The aim of the workshops is for participants, regardless of their incoming skill levels, to become full-fleged "amateur home paper makers", as explained by instructor Colin Frazer. This class stresses the Do-It-Yourself nature of paper and explores it's accessibility as a medium that can be successfully

EVENTS

Slow Book Salon at Asheville BookWorks

The Slow Book Salon, a recently formed group of WNC book arts enthusiasts, held their February meeting at Asheville BookWorks on Sunday, February 26th. Laurie Corral, Director of BookWorks, was delighted to facilitate the meeting, which focused on sharing works-in-progress and featured a group critiquing session. The Slow Book Salon has been meeting on a monthly basis since September of 2005, and the group has grown into a vibrant and active community of book artists / advocates. Over the past few months, Slow Book Salon activities have ranged from paper making to artfully journaling to gelatin printing. In addition, Slow Book Salon participants are pursuing several exhibition opportunities, both in the WNC area and beyond.

Each Slow Book Salon meeting presents a wonderful forum for participants to share information about upcoming events and opportunities in the book arts. If you'd like to join The Slow Book Salon mailing list, please send a message to info@ashevillebookworks.com with SLOW BOOK SALON engaged and explored without the need for a studio.

Colin and Micah are both very interested and committed to using recycled and natural fibers in their paper making. In addition, both artists are outdoor enthusiasts who enjoy spending as much time as possible outside of the studio, searching for materials and inspiration for their work. Hence, Colin and Micah will encourage workshop participants to actively engage their environments as a part of the paper making process.

Students in the Paper Making classes will be introduced to the theory and history of paper making while learning the basics of the process. Students will make their own moulds and deckles and prepare pulp from found, recycled and natural materials. The class will then cast sheets from their pulp, learn how to successfully dry their sheets and discuss possible uses based on the resulting hand made paper.

Paper Making will be offered by BookWorks on two occasions this spring, once in April and once in May. Both workshops are two-day, weekend-long courses. We invite you to visit our Workshop page for more detailed class descriptions, and we hope you will also visit our Instructors page to learn more about artists Colin Frazer and Micah Pulleyn and their work.

Dates, times and fees for the upcoming spring Paper Making workshops include:

in the subject line. We'll add your e-mail to the list and you'll soon begin receiving updates as to upcoming meeting as and activities. The next Slow Book Salon meeting will take place in March and will focus on developing content for and within the book form. Please contact BookWorks for details regarding the date, time and location of the next meeting.

A Farewell to Studio Artist Steve Godwin

Directly following the February Slow Book Salon meeting, we said a bittersweet farewell to Studio Artist Steve Godwin with a send-off soiree at BookWorks. Steve is heading to the Vermont Studio Center for a month-long writing retreat, after which he'll spend several more weeks in New England. Steve will return briefly in April to wrap up a collaborative broadside project that he is producing together with poet and Warren Wilson Professor Sebastian Matthews and BookWorks' Director Laurie Corral. The broadside project is made possible by a Regional Artist Project Grant from the Asheville Arts Council. Steve will once again return to Asheville in June to focus on his book work, though the length of his stay has yet to be determined. We will miss Steve dearly and wish him the best of luck for this next leg of the Adventure. We hope his June return will be a permanent one. Our best to you from BookWorks, Steve!

Studio Space Available at Asheville BookWorks

Due to Studio Artist Steve Godwin's departure, we currently have two vacant Studio Spaces available for resident Studio Artists at BookWorks. Studio Space is available at a rate of $275 / month, which includes 24-hour access to the BookWorks studio and an incredible array of book making equipment. Please scroll down to the BookWorks Opportunities bar below to read more about this opportunity. If you're interested in having your studio in our space, please give us a call at (828) 255-8444 or send us an e-mail at info@ashevillebookworks.com. We hope you'll take advantage of this opportunity and help us fill the space in our studio and in our hearts. We miss you already, Steve!

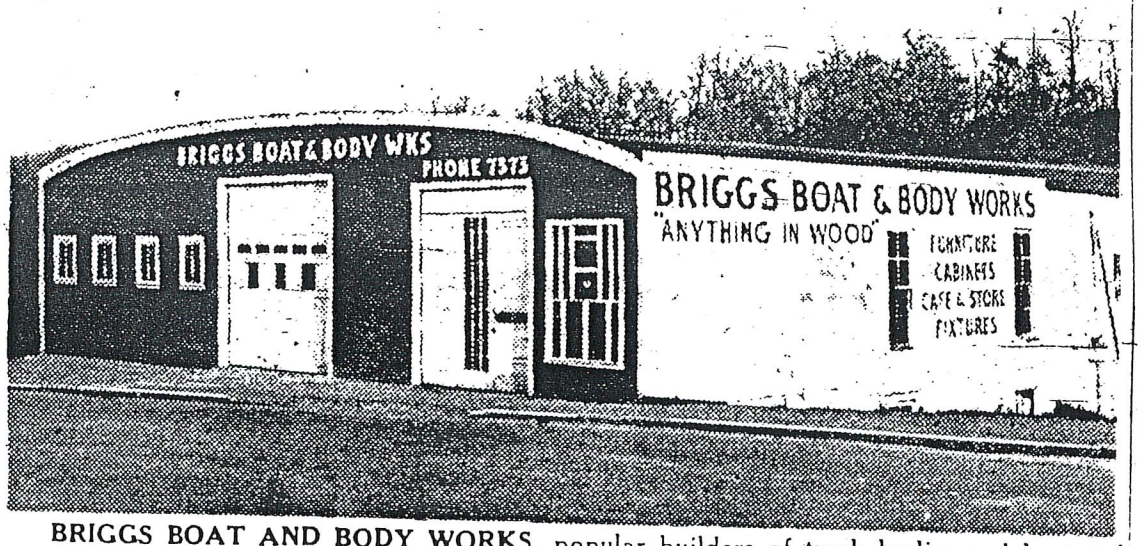
BRIGGS BOAT AND BODY WORKS



BRIGGS BOAT AND BODY WORKS, popular builders of truck bodies and boats of all kinds. This plant is owned and operated by L. D. Briggs, a man of 23 years' experience in woodworking of all kinds and the slogan is "Anything in Wood." Boat hardware, marine paints, varnishes, glue and all kinds of wood are carried, and wood turning, carving and moulding are done to special drawings.

Asheville Times January 10, 1942

BRIGGS BOAT & BODY WORKS IS POPULAR PLACE

The Briggs Boat and Body Works, 156 Haywood Road, builders of truck bodies and boats of all kinds, is one of this sections most popular places. It maintains a complete cabinet, store fixture and furniture service, as well as building the finest reproductions of solid mahogany, walnut, cherry maple and other woods. These are built to order at surprisingly low prices.

Repairing and refinishing of the better type is also featured. Stocks of cedar, walnut, mahogany and many woods hard to obtain, are stocked at all times, and the home-crafter can find just what he wants here.

The Briggs Boat and Body Works is owned and operated by L. D. Briggs, who has had 23 years experience in woodworking of all kinds. Every job is guaranteed to be as represented, and the "patron must be pleased" is the Briggs motto.

Remember this fact- when you need a truck body, boat, cabinet or furniture—fine wood turning, carving and moulding to your drawing—Briggs does it! He also carries boat hardware, marine paints, varnished and glues, stake irons and bolts for truck bodies. A complete woodworking shop is in connection the slogan, "Anything In Wood." Phone 7373 and get a real service all estimates are FREE!

more customers are asking for Pabst by name instead of ordering just beer. The public is rapidly learning the difference between Pabst and beers with not-so-fine flavor, Mr. Hendrix, proprietor of Hendrix's, pointed out.

Fast curb service as well as rapid home delivery are featured by Hendrix's.

Briggs Has Solution To Transportation Problem

"With the tire situation becoming more critical every hour, auto owners are giving thought to future transportation problems," said L. D Briggs, of Briggs Boat and Body Works, 156 Haywood Road.

"In the course of time there may and there may not be solutions to this problem, but we feel that we are in a position to offer a suggestion that might prove valuable to some. We suggest a large or small group get together and work out transportation problems . . . then consult with us.

"We can build a body on any chassis to hold a number of passengers. This would be admirable for a group of persons working in the same mill, plant, store or any other place of business. Think of the tire saving this would assure and how economically each person could obtain comfortable and efficient transportation to and from work. We urge any auto owners interested in this plan to consult with us at once."

Due to the fact that this plant is not in the heart of the business section, work can be done at lower figures . . . but this work is of the highest efficiency and materials used are the best. Farmers and truck owners are urged to investigate Briggs' truck body plans . . . have new bodies placed on old trucks, sturdy bodies that will give service until the time when it may be possible to obtain new trucks.

The Briggs Boat and Body Works also specializes in store fixtures, cabinets and furniture working of all kinds. Complete lines of mahogany, walnut, cedar, cherry, maple and other woods are carried at all times. Get their estimates before having any of this kind of work done.

Briggs Boat & Body Makes Custom Built Truck Bodies

If you do truck hauling, own a truck, or plan to have a new body put on the one you now own, the Briggs Boat and Body Works, 119 Haywood Road, can be of service to you. This firm is probably the largest builder of custom built bodies in Western North Carolina. They build or repair anything from the simplest wooden stake body to the elaborate, welded, all-steel insulated, streamlined van bodies and freight trailers.

All bodies are custom-built to your specifications at surprisingly modest prices. This company has built dairy bodies for practically all of the larger dairies in most of the Southern states. They are the oldest active body builders in the city, starting at the very bottom and, by hard work and honest dealing, are now nationally recognized as one of the South's better designers and fabricators.

Although Briggs does not stress boat building they have on hand a large stock of marine plywoods, paints and glues for the homecrafter for boat building and repairs.

Large or small orders are given the same courteous attention, and Briggs states that "nothing takes the place of courtesy and experience."

If you are in need of any of the services that this firm has to offer you are urged to contact Briggs at the shop, 119 Haywood Road, or call 2-1451.

New Clothing Store To Open

Byrd's Inc., a new "family type clothing store," has been given a tentative opening date of Nov. 1 by its owner, Grady Byrd Jr., of Asheville.

The new business at 805 Patton Ave., was chartered Aug. 1 under the state's articles of incorporation by Bryd, son of Grady Byrd Sr. who opened Efird's Department Store here in 1928.

Byrd is organizer, president and manager. His wife, the former Margaret Freeman of Asheville, is secretary.

The 10,000-square-foot store, which Byrd envisions as the first of several in the Asheville area, will be housed in a new one-story brick building constructed by H. M. Rice and Sons of Weaverville. J. Bertram King of Asheville was architect.

Construction has been completed and the building is now being stocked for the opening in time for the Christmas shopping season, Byrd said.

Initially, the store will be staffed by eight to 10 employes and will feature clothing for men and women. Plans call for the stock to be expanded next spring to include children's Byrd said the store will offer nationally advertised brand names in the medium price range.

Byrd prefers to call his business a family clothing store.

"It will not be a specialty shop nor a department store in the traditional sense although specialized service will be provided at moderate prices on family clothes," Byrd said.

Previously, Byrd was associated with Belk stores, having joined the Belk-Hudson stores in Spartanburg, S. C., following his graduation from Wofford College there.

Later he worked for Belk stores in Birmingham, Ala., and in 1964 returned to Asheville where he became assistant manager and merchandise manager for Belk.

He is a member of the Asheville Lions Club and resides with his wife and three children at 19 Brookside Rd.

COAL

Selling good coal may not be the most important work in the world, but we've found sentiment in every shovelful . . . and honesty DOES pay.

When we tell you our coal is clean and full-weight, you can rest assured it is so.

Children's Shop Has Birthday Party Tomorrow

Mrs. Betty Johnson is planning to celebrate the first anniversary of The Children's Shoppe, 643 Haywood Road, with an open house tomorrow. Guests will be welcomed between 9 o'clock in the morning and 9 o'clock at night. Mrs. Johnson announces that a substantial discount will be allowed on all purchases made tomorrow, March 16. It is planned to give hourly prizes and also favors for the children. Mrs. Alma Henry is assisting Mrs. Johnson with arrangements.

In the one year that The Children's Shoppe has been operating, it has made a name for itself the selling of children's clothes of all kinds, and customers are attracted from all sections of the county. Orders are also mailed to many distant cities. Many visitors in Asheville are so well pleased with the designs of dresses and suits on sale that they reorder from their homes.

Mrs. Johnson makes a special effort to study each prospective customer and select designs and colors most suitable to each child. special attention and courtesy She attributes her success to given each patron.

W. E. MICHAEL

Ed Michael Dies In City At Age Of 61

W. E. (Ed) Michael Jr., 61, owner and operator of Cobble's Department Store at 717 Haywood Rd., died at 4 a.m. Sunday in an Asheville hospital following a brief illness.

Mr. Michael had been active for many years in church, lodge, civic service club and business affairs in West Asheville.

A resident of Asheville since 1906, he was born Dec. 2, 1900, in Rowan County, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Michael Sr.

His first job was as a carrier for the old Asheville Gazette. Mr. Michael attended the Asheville city schools and studied accounting and was engaged in the drug business in West Asheville for 34 years.

Upon graduating from high school, he was for a time associated with Bilbro's Pharmacy, owned and managed by Quenton T. Bilbro. Mr. Michael was later associated for 18 years with Dan W. Foster in operation of the Palace Drug Store.

In 1948 he purchased Cobble's Department Store, one of the oldest department stores in West Asheville.

Mr. Michael was married in 1929 to Miss Margaret Frances Smith of Charleston, S. C., and resided at 19 Brucemont Circle

Since serving as District 31-A Governor of Lions Clubs in 1956-57 for WNC, Mr. Michael held the position of international counselor for Lions International.

He was a past president of the West Asheville Lions Club, a former Zone Chairman, Deputy District Governor, and District 31-A Cabinet secretary-treasurer for WNC Lions Clubs.

A charter member and first president of the West Asheville Club, Mr. Michael had compiled a perfect attendance record, was a Key Member and had received an extension award from Lions International.

Mr. Michael was a past master of the John A. Nichols Lodge No. 650, AF and AM, and had served as chairman of the West Asheville division of the United Fund of Asheville and Buncombe County.

He had been a member of the Review Board of the Buncombe County Committee on Public Solicitations.

Mr. Michael was an active member of the West Asheville Business Association, the Asheville Chamber of Commerce, the West Asheville Presbyterian Church, was a former member of the board of trustees and secretary of executive committee of the Asheville Orthopedic Hospital.

He had also served as a member of the board of trustees and finance committee of the West Asheville Masonic Lodge.

Surviving, in addition to the widow, are the mother, Mrs. Alda S. Michael Sr. of Asheville; one brother, Morris S. Michael of Asheville; three sisters, Mrs. T. A. Gamble and Mrs. Eulala Sluder of Asheville and Mrs. Clara M. Johnson of Alexandria, Va.

Services will be held at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday in the West Asheville Presbyterian Church. Dr. W. G. Thomas, pastor, will officiate. Burial will be in Forest Lawn Cemetery at Enka.

Active pallbearers will be Dan W. Foster, Elmer Blake, Norman Trueblood, Morris May, Dan S. Judd and Robert R. Barnes.

Honorary pallbearers will be Robert W. Easley Jr., Mike W. Brown, Judge Sam Cathey, F. Jack Cole, Troyl B. Dysart, Dr. S. S. Fay, Hubert Kanipe, Floyd L. Miles, Irwin Monk, Herbert Noble, G. H. Rhodes, Charlie Spencer, Roy A. Taylor, Dr. Paul Young, Judge W. A. Hart, Bill Shull, Lawrence E. Stoker, R. F. Moody.

Members of the District 31-A Lions Club cabinet, John A. Nichols Masonic Lodge, and past and present members of the N.C. State Lions Club Council also will serve as honorary pallbearers.

The body will remain in Groce Funeral Homel chapel until taken to the church to lie in state 30 minutes prior to services.

CD captures music scene of Asheville

Compilation taps several genres thriving in area

By Jedd Ferris
CITIZEN-TIMES CORRESPONDENT

Local music scenes can be fickle. Artists come and go. But Asheville seems to be riding a high point right now, burgeoning with a refreshing eclecticism that moves from folk to pop to funky Motown to rock and everything in between.

Two local producers recently decided to document the current period in a "best of" Asheville compilation. "Peaks and Curves: Music from Asheville" was organized by Aaron Price and Bill Reynolds (former bassist of the Blue Rags, now touring with Donna the Buffalo) of West Asheville's Collapseable Studios and features the music of 16 acts offering a sleek compendium of the wide range of genres that are filling local clubs and bars.

Inside

Profiles of musicians featured on "Peaks and Curves: Music from Asheville" are on Page D3.

"I have a good relationship with the bands in town," Price says. "I wanted to put something together that would be a good networking tool for them. With the increasing variety, I think the scene now is the best I've seen it. I came into the town knowing that it had a serious old-time preservation community, but now we have a hip-hop scene and some great rock is getting turned out. People are definitely working hard."

The artists on the disc include Black Eyed Dog, Granola Funk Express, Allison King, Menage, George Terry and the Zealots, Paperboy, Free Planet Radio, Abe Reid and the Spikedrivers, Drug Money, Stephanie's Id, Malcolm Holcombe, Hollywood Red, Tyler Ramsey, AP, Mad Tea Party and the Choosy Beggars. The latter seven will perform tonight at a CD release party for the album tonight at The Orange Peel.

Not going to the show? Price says the CD is available at many independent record stores around town.

12 ARRESTED IN WEST ASHEVILLE GAMBLING RAID

Operator Of Lunchroom Makes Bond Of $200

After about three weeks of watching and work, police last night reported they invaded a triple-doored room back of the Couch lunchroom at 495 Haywood road, West Asheville, and arrested more than a dozen men. Jack Couch, operator of the lunch room, was charged with operating a gambling game, Police Chief Dermid said.

All men taken in the raid were brought to police station. Couch made bond of $200 for his appearance in police court tomorrow morning. The other men were charged with aiding and abetting. Police confiscated a quantity of equipment in the room, including tables, chairs, and cards. A small sum of money was taken from one of the tables.

Police Chief Dermid said the department has had numerous complaints from West Asheville citizens in recent weeks relative to the place raided. He explained that, due to the barriers to the room in question, it was a hard matter to gain entrance without warning the players. This was successfully negotiated last night at 10:30 o'clock, however.

EWART BALL/CITIZEN-TIMES

Dave Harris, owner of Dave's Swap Shop on Haywood Road, stands under a sign in his store that explains his policy in detail. Harris buys, sells and trades the kind of items most folkswould throw away.

Storage purchase gave rise to Swap Shop

By Henry Robinson
STAFF WRITER

Dave Harris proved that one man's junk is another man's treasure nine years ago when he opened Dave's Swap Shop at 645 Haywood Road. But Harris wasn't really planning to open a business — it just happened.

Harris was looking for a place to store a lot of excess items he had acquired at flea markets, and when the building on Haywood Road became available, he took it.

The idea of a swap shop formed when he began moving his material into the building, Harris said.

"People were walking in asking the price on different items, and the rest is history. And I knew three weeks after opening the shop that I had made the right decision.

Harris, who formerly owned a television sales and service store, said he had a large inventory of televisions and VCRs when he first opened the store, but they were quickly purchased shortly after he opened.

Since childhood, Harris said he has always been fascinated by used items such as tools, fishing equipment, guns and other types of things one can find in abundance at flea markets.

"When I was a kid growing up around Asheville, I used to go to the old stockyard on Friday where large crowds would gather, and sell and trade household goods and tools.

Harris' shop is open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. He trades, sells and buys used and new goods including shotguns, rifles and hand guns.

An eyeball inventory of his shop produces golfing equipment, a 1930 Philco radio, hunting garments, hand tools, weedkleaters, chain saws, tool boxes, microwave ovens, jewelry, pocket knives, shoes and boots.

Harris loves every minute he spends in the shop, and the people who stop by seem to enjoy browsing around it too. "This place is the joy of my life," he said.

Harris is always on the lookout for stolen goods, and a large sign greets those who enter the business. It reads, "Sell me STOLEN property and I'll put you in jail."

Ball With Davidson Household Furnish

Emmett M. Ball, well known in West Asheville, is now associated with Davidson's Household Furnishings, 781 Haywood Road. Mr. Ball, who will have charge of electrical apparatus and electrical work, was born and raised in West Asheville. He has lately been in the Coast Guard reserve and was engaged in electrical work at various shipyards at Norfolk, Jacksonville, and other cities.

Mr. Ball, who was born and raised in West Asheville, and attended Vance school, is a son of the late B. F. and Katie Ball, who operated a grocery store on Haywood Road for many years. His wife is the former Robbie Meece, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Meece, of Fletcher. They and their twin son and daughter of six years reside at 71 Druid Drive.

Mr. Ball, a licensed electrician, will make repairs on electric irons toasters, ranges, washing machines and sewing machines. He can do house wiring when necessary.

Of special interest to home owners is Luminite, the new plastic window and door screen now handled by Davidson House Furnishings. Luminite screens never need painting, are non-staining and rustproof. In addition they are economic, easy to handle and streng. You can crumple this type of screen netting like paper without spoiling it. With Luminite, ugly streaking of window sills or sidewalls is impossible. It is highly resilient under pressure or impact and "gives" without breaking. It instantly snaps back to its original shape without trace of a bulge.

Luminite was tested for three years under toughest possible conditions of climate and rough use.

Company with a view: Builder of circular homes is expanding

Deltec moves into new digs, launches new products

BUSINESS EDITOR

ASHEVILLE — Deltec Homes Inc. held ribbon-cutting ceremonies Thursday at its sprawling new quarters in the former Trident Industries plant on Bingham Road.

Wayne Jewsbury

"At a time when many companies are contracting, we went from 20,000 square feet of space to 102,000. This is a multi million-dollar investment," Deltec President Wayne Jewsbury said.

Employees showed visitors the giant machines used to make the roof trusses and other components of its distinctive circular homes, which are shipped in sections to be assembled and finished on site.

Deltec is a home-grown success story that began in 1968 as a division of Kinco Corp., the door and window company operated by the Kinser family for many years until it was sold to Carefree Windows.

Deltec today is a separate company employing 55 people and owned by Robert Kinser and his children. The company ships 120 to 150 homes and commercial structures annually to customers throughout the U.S., Canada, the Caribbean, Asia, Europe and beyond.

"We have averaged 17 percent growth every year for the last five years," and deposits received for future orders indicate that pace is going to accelerate, Jewsbury said.

The company recently launched its first new products that are a departure from its traditional circular homes. The Kinbury Cottages and the Four Leaf Homes are rectangular homes manufactured in sections and delivered to the site just like Deltec's other offerings.

the new products and other growth that the company decided to move to a larger facility where it could consolidate all its manufacturing, marketing and administrative operations. Trident closed the plant in October 2000, and Deltec bought the facility last September. It completed the last phase of the move in December, 2001.

Deltec homes are particularly popular in the mountains and coastal areas, Jewsbury said, "Their best use is somewhere that you have a view."

The circular homes have acquired a reputation for their ability to resist winds in excess of 140 mph.

"Even after Hurricane Hugo we, have never lost a home to a hurricane even though we've got them up and down the East Coast," Jewsbury said.

> "We have never lost a home to a hurricane even though we've got them up and down the East Coast."
> WAYNE JEWSBURY, Deltec president

Deltec sells its homes directly to customers who respond to national advertising both in print and online. Homes are designed to customers' specifications and built in 8-foot panels, which are assembled on site to form the shell.

"Panelizing is a cross between stick-built and modular," Jewsbury said. "Stick-built homes are built completely on the site, and modular homes basically arrive as completed boxes,"

Deltec homes include the panels, roof and floor systems to complete the shell of the home, and the buyer hires a contractor to assemble and finish the home.

The average Deltec home costs about $50,000, and customers can expect to spend another $100,000 finishing it out.

"Ours is not a low-priced product. These are quality homes," Jewsbury said.

It costs about $100 to $120 per square foot to have a builder construct a new home in Asheville, he said, and the Deltec homes generally fall in that same price range when completed.

In addition to homes, Deltec circular structures also have been used for churches, schools, restaurants, shops and other commercial uses, Jewsbury said. He expects that sector to grow in the future.

Deltec homes have become popular as second homes for many years but are increasingly being purchased as primary residences, Jewsbury said.

Deltec's president declined to give specific numbers but said the company will definitely increase employment as the business grows.

"Panelizing is a very cost efficient way to build a home," he said. "You can have the shell dried in in four to seven days, and there is very little waste."

Hurricane-safe homes stand out 'round town

Asheville-based Deltec building circular houses that can stand up to high winds

By Emery P. Dalesio
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two Florida hurricanes huffed and puffed, but they couldn't blow Roy Laughlin's house down.

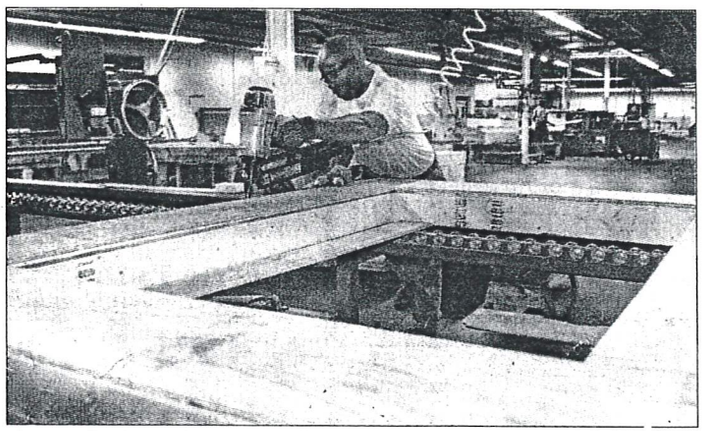
Laughlin has spent the last year and a half assembling a two-story, 2,000-square-foot circular home in Brevard County, Fla., near Cape Canaveral. The building, made by Asheville-based Deltec Homes, proved safe shelter earlier this month when hurricanes Frances and Jeanne roared ashore nearby.

"There's nothing wrong with a rectangular home, unless you live in a place where wind tears them apart," Laughlin said.

The circular shape of Laughlin's home allows a hurricane's high winds to whip around the sides rather than push on a flat wall. The extra-strength connections that bind roof to wall to foundation back up a design that allows Deltec officials to boast that none of the roughly 1,100 homes they have sold in the past 12 years has collapsed from high winds.

"People who are looking to build a safer home in high-wind or hurricane prone areas" now make up the fastest growing segment of the 36-year-old company's sales, sales manager Joe Schlenk said.

"Due to the fact that we've had so many storms this year ... we have had a lot of inquiries from Florida, the Gulf areas, the Caribbean," he said.



James Redmond uses a nail gun to build a wall panel for a circular home built by Deltec Homes inside the company's factory in Asheville on Tuesday.

Laughlin, 52, of Rockledge, Fla., said he and his four dogs not only rode out the recent storms, but did so in relative quiet — except for a Frances-spawned tornado that chewed through his neighborhood. Jeanne crumpled scores of trees on nearby land as it approached from the east with wind gusts clocked nearby at 120 mph.

Neighborhood homes lost shingles in Jeanne, leading to roof failure and internal water damage, but not Laughlin's home.

"I got a good night's sleep," he said Tuesday, after telephone service, but not electricity, was restored.

Laughlin built his Deltec home for just less than $200,000, not including his own labor. And construction did present some difficulties. The irregular shape of the interior walls made it impossible to get an estimate from a contractor, so Laughlin put the drywall in himself. Cabinets had to be custom ordered.

Since Hurricane Andrew wreaked catastrophic damage in south Florida in 1992, researching and building hurricane-resistant homes has been a priority for insurance companies and scientists from Johns Hopkins in Baltimore to Florida International University in Miami. Andrew destroyed more than 28,000 homes, damaged 107,000 and caused $15.5 billion in insured losses.

A circular house built by Deltec Homes is shown overlooking Asheville on Tuesday. The circular design along with extra-strength connections that bind roof to wall to foundation back up a design that means none of the roughly 1,100 Deltec homes sold in the past 12 years have collapsed from high winds, which is a big selling point for people who are looking to build a safer home in high-wind or hurricane prone areas.

Bill York, who conducts home inspections for property owners and insurance companies selling wind insurance, said a round structure is inherently wind-resistant.

"The aerodynamics of a round home make it difficult for very much wind to be blowing on it," said York, director of building evaluations for Applied Research Associates in Orlando, Fla. "When you have a round surface, the wind is deflected easily, so the loads are lower."

Deltec started in 1968 as one of a series of family home-components companies established by C. Clyde Kinser and his sons Robert and Wayne. For three decades, Deltec made circular homes that were marketed to the resort timeshare industry and to private owners. Now, every home Deltec builds is a custom job.

After moving into a new 100,000-square-foot manufacturing center in 2001, Deltec Homes diversified its product line and began to produce more conventional homes under the Kinbury Cottages name. All the housing lines are marketed directly to homeowners.

Most of Deltec's products come with windows and siding already installed on wall sections. Everything else needed to build the exterior walls and roof are shipped directly to the job site.

West Asheville's De Soto Lounge is Up and Running

November 5, 2009
by shewhoeats

There's a new classy joint to shoot pool, drink local brew and chill low-key with your friends. While walking my dog on Haywood Rd. last night, I came upon a brand new, dimly lit venue, the Desoto Lounge! In the kitchy El Dorado building, where West Asheville Minx used to be, next to the Blue Ribbon Salon, somebody has opened a clean yet divey little bar. Since I had the pooch in tow, I didn't enter, but I did notice a pool table towards the back and some laid-back, happy folks bellying up to the bar, and they looked like they didn't plan on moving for a long, long time. I cannot wait to try out this new neighborhood pub.

West Asheville is slowly but surely becoming Ground Zero for urban chic in WNC, and I couldn't be happier about it. Now cross your fingers for Vietnamese Pho on Haywood, and all will be well and I can live here forever. Cross them!

De Soto Lounge Keeps it Real

November 23, 2009
by shewhoeats

There's something pleasantly grungy about West Asheville's new De Soto Lounge. Low lighting, dark grey cinderblock walls and black ceilings keep the corporates away, while beckoning to the wandering townie. The place is long, sparsely and sweetly furnished with some arcade games in the back room, and I felt immediately at home. Mainly because I knew 60% of the clientele, but also because the service was familiar yet nonchalant like my mom when you come over to her house. Her motto is, "I'm not going to nag or fawn all over you, but you are welcome to all I have." It's more authentic hospitality, and makes one feel like family.

They certainly hold their own amongst Asheville's raging beery mania. They keep their drafts local and offer just enough variety. I went with my current obsession, Big Boss Brewery's Belgian Blonde, Hell's Belle outta Raleigh. Folks will find some of the old faithful options, like Highland's oatmeal porter and another local pale ale or two. It wasn't a wine night for me, but again I thought they offered an interesting array of choices, although a commitment to staying simple and not overwhelming. I was especially pleased to see a vinho verde included amongst the whites.

The food still needs some work, but I trust they are well on their way to an interesting and affordable pub menu of small platters. I thought the chips and chipotle salsa hit the spot perfectly with a nice sweet and smoky heat. But with gastropubs like the Admiral down the way, they have their work cut out for them. The menu pointed customers in the direction of pimento cheese, but I just can't muster up enough excitement to spend $8-$10 on it (even though it came with veggies or crackers or something). I tried the M and M platter, a Spanish-themed plate of Manchego cheese and Marcona almonds with quince jam and crostini.

My understanding of crostini is a cross between a crouton and a canape, and crostini is nearly always lightly toasted and topped with olive oil, pesto, tapenade or sauce to soften the crispy bread. This was hard tack, tooth-shattering bread, paired with Manchego, an equally hard and crumbly cheese. I did not find this pairing successful, I would rather have had a cracker with the Manchego or else a softer cheese or spread to pair with the crostini. My noshing companion felt the same way.

So many Asheville pubs offer very impressive versions of a cheese platter, and I would rather see the De Soto Lounge try something different like cheese puffs, or maybe a have a little fun and create a pu-pu platter of 1960's party snacks, dressed up and modernized.

From their website it looks as though De Soto is open to suggestions and still finding their way in the kitchen, but they've got the booze, the location, and the vibe just right. I plan on becoming a regular, and I hope to see you there.

   I went to D-Lounge last week GG and enjoyed the jukebox and pinball. Can't say much for the grilled cheese especially at that price but I loved the homey vibe at the bar. The backroom is nice for hanging out with the jukebox and I hear they're going to have music eventually. I'm looking forward to hanging out there again.

Desoto and me

Lounge combines music, exotic food and pingpong

Carol Motsinger
COLUMNIST

IF YOU GO

What: Desoto Lounge.
When: Ethiopian food every Tuesday, pingpong daily.
Where: 504 Haywood Road, Asheville.
For more: http://desotolounge.com or 255-1109.

I think the folks at the Desoto Lounge have crawled inside my brain.

Not in a creepy "Being John Malkovich" way — it's just that they seem to know everything that I would want out of a bar — even things I didn't even really know I wanted until I experienced them.

OK, that last bit does sound a smidge creepy, but what I mean to say is that the owners managed to invite features to the Haywood Road hot spot that I would have never anticipated being welcome at the bar.

The first — and most recent — surprising guest: Ethiopian food. Desoto Lounge is now serving Ethiopian food on Tuesdays.

It's never made sense to me that we don't have an Ethiopian restaurant in Asheville. This delicious African cuisine is such a natural fit for this town: It's exotic; we are into that. It's vegetarian-friendly, and we certainly have a lot of rabbits in this town. We are documented big fans of fermentation (See: local beer).

Instead of using utensils, you use a spongy, fermented bread to pick up Ethiopian dishes. How great an idea is that? You eat food with food!

The Ethiopian food addition is definitely the tastiest of all the new treats at the Desoto. But it's just one bite: It's also hosting live music now and is attracting some serious rising stars.

One example: Sub Pop's Dum Dum Girls, who played there in March. Their first album sounds like what would happen if a 1960s girl group decided to ditch the beehives for the leather jackets of punk rockers. Let's just say it's so good that next time they come to play in Asheville, they will have to be at a much larger venue.

John Coutlakis/jcoutlakis@citizen-times.com
DeSoto Lounge owner Lisa Gambrell, at far end, and Brandon Venable, of Asheville, play on the pingpong table in the lounge's game room, which Gambrell says is very popular.

And there is one final new addition that's a major daily draw. When Desoto debuted last fall, foosball and pinball were already offered. Now, there's a pingpong table every night, and it makes this bar something like your coolest friend's basement.

Desoto's only been open since November, but there seems to be no awkward, lanky teen phase for the people at this spot. No braces, bad haircuts or ill-fitting outfits forced on them by out-of-touch parents.

Growth suits them because every addition, although eclectic and unique, makes sense. They are consistently Desoto, and I can't wait see what's next as it matures into one of the best bars in Asheville.

This is the opinion of Citizen-Times staff writer Carol Motsinger, who writes an entertainment column every Friday for Take5. She can be reached at cmotsinger@CITIZEN-TIMES.com.

Retro done right

- Who she is: Corinne Kurzmann, owner of Diggin Art in West Asheville
- What she's wearing: Strappy 1950s heels, a black-and-white print dress from the '60s, Bakelite bangles, matching lucite bracelet and earrings from an Italian designer — all available in Diggin Art.
- Why we love it: While dressing all from one era can be too precious (poodle skirts should be worn with irony, not with saddle shoes), Corinne does retro right, mixing decades but sticking to a black-and-white theme. That, and her dress has a great floaty top layer that opens at the back to reveal a more fitted sheath.

This crop has been graded by USDA inspectors and awaits auction at the Dixie Big Burley warehouse. More than 8.3 million pounds of tobacco was expected to be sold in Asheville this year.

Despite rise in contract sales, most tobacco still goes to auction

By Tim Reid
SENIOR WRITER

ASHEVILLE — Leaf sales will open Monday at Planters and Dixie Big Burley warehouses in Asheville — North Carolina's only remaining burley tobacco warehouses.

The auctioneer's chant will signal the start of tobacco sales as usual, but little else is constant in an industry buffeted by health concerns, lawsuits, foreign competition and the prospect of even bigger changes ahead.

"Most farmers I know are in a holding pattern right now, waiting to see what happens about the buyout," said Terri Scruggs of the Cooperative Extension Service in Madison County.

Ten proposals are pending in Congress to compensate owners of tobacco allotments so growers can keep more of the proceeds from their crop and be more competitive on the world market.

No one knows when or if Congress will do away with the quota system that has guided tobacco production for generations, but big changes are already transforming the way farmers grow and sell their product.

A pilot program begun last year using Tobacco Trust Fund money to pay marketing costs at Asheville's two remaining tobacco warehouses was very successful for growers and buyers, said Bruce Briggs of the North Carolina Farm Bureau.

It was intended to preserve auction sales as an option for growers to sell their tobacco in addition to the new system of contracting directly with a tobacco company.

"We made changes (in tobacco warehouse sales) that allowed us to be more efficient and present better quality to the buyers," he said. "And farmers were able to keep everything they made at the sale."

The change did help preserve tobacco auctions, resulting in more growers designating their tobacco for sale at the warehouses in Asheville, Briggs said.

"We sold 5.4 million pounds in Asheville last year, and more than 8.3 million pounds have been designated to sell there this year," he said.

"We've also had more buyers (tobacco companies) on the Asheville market than any market in the burley region," he said.

This year at least six companies will send buyers to the Asheville market, he said. They include R.J. Reynolds, Philip Morris, Dimon, Brown and Williamson, Standard Commercial, and Universal.

Norman Payne of Weaverville, who has farmed tobacco all his life, waits for USDA inspectors to grade his crop at the Dixie Big Burley warehouse.

John Coutlakis/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER
USDA inspector Walter Greene grades the crops brought in by area farmers at the Dixie Big Burley warehouse Thursday. Leaf sales will open Monday.

Contracts vs. auctions

Most burley tobacco growers continue to sell their tobacco at auctions, but each year more farmers contract to sell their leaf directly to the tobacco companies.

"It works out great for me. To me it's just eliminating the middleman," said Harold Hunter, whose family has been raising tobacco in the Spring Creek section of Madison County since the late 1800s.

Hunter started contracting to sell his tobacco to Philip Morris three years ago. Instead of selling it in the warehouses in Asheville, he will transport it to Gray, Tenn., near Johnson City.

"They (Philip Morris) have been true to their word," he said. "You bring it like they want, and they buy it all. And they realize you're not going to have a perfect crop every year."

But for most burley tobacco growers, selling their crop to competing buyers is still the way to go.

Jerry Garland, a Yancey County farmer and president of the N.C. Burley Tobacco Growers Association, fears that contracting directly with the companies could make tobacco a commodity producing little return similar to other crops.

"I used to grow zucchini squash, and the only way I could make any money was if some other part of the country had a bad growing season," he said. "Their bad luck was my good luck. I don't like that."

Briggs said more than 60 percent of all North Carolina tobacco growers continue to sell their tobacco through traditional warehouse auctions.

The percentage is even higher for burley growers in this area.

Charlie Zink of the Farm Service Agency said that in Madison County, the state's largest burley tobacco producer, 87 percent of burley growers sell their tobacco at auction while 13 percent contract directly with the tobacco companies.

This year's crop

Drought conditions for most of the growing season, compounded by heavy rains toward the end of the season, have produced a crop that may be lighter weight with some moisture problems if it is not prepared properly.

Hunter said he grows his tobacco on hillsides, where the lack of water really hurt the crop. He estimated he will have only about 15 or 20 percent of the crop he normally produces.

"I've always fussed about high-cost insurance," he said. "This year I'm glad I've got it. I'm going to need it."

Future prospects

"Tobacco is not a dying industry, but it is a changing industry," said Larry Wooten, president of the N.C. Farm Burea, the state's largest farm organization.

What growers want most is a sense of stability and predictability about the tobacco program so they can make rational decisions about their future in it, Brigg said.

What that future will look like is anybody's guess until Congress makes a decision on the various buyout proposals that have been made.

Garland says farmers would like to see the quota holders compensated so they can avoid high lease costs, but preserving the price support system is the most critical priority.

"Without price supports we wouldn't have tobacco in Western North Carolina," he said.

Hunter believes the fate of growers is dependent most of all on what happens to tobacco companies as they face various legal challenges, skyrocketing costs and government regulation.

He said he has mixed feelings about the buyout proposals, but "We're slowly starving to death. Something has to happen."

Don Watson Radio Shop Produces Its Own Sets

The Don Watson Radio Shop, 422 Haywood Road, West Asheville, is selling a radio with several exclusive ideas introduced by Mr. Watson, who is a designing engineer. The new features incorporated in these new sets include a greater pick-up and a greater tone quality, which has been achieved through 21 years of radio servicing and designing.

Mr. Watson believes his repair department to be the most adequately equipped with testing equipment in this section. Mr. Watson believes that his new radio will be in quantity production within the next 30 days.

The Don Watson Radio Shop, which renders courteous service and greets each customer with a smile, extends one day service on all repairs made. The pick-up and delivery service enables quick handling of orders. The telephone number is 1470.

Artist transforms dry goods store into space for crafters

Jason Sandford
ASHVEGAS

Leigh Anne Hilbert is opening a new home for Asheville's crafting community. The Dry Goods Shop, in Hilbert's vision, will be a place for artists to work, learn, sell and generally just hang out and get to know one another.

"I want to make a place where people don't feel intimidated," Hilbert says, "a place you can come in and learn new skills."

She's well on her way. She's cleaned out the 1,400 square feet of space — including years of layered dust — inside the former Meadows Dry Goods shop on Haywood Road, right at the interchange with Interstate 240. The building is a West Asheville landmark that's been sitting mostly vacant for years.

Hilbert plans to create a studio space for herself — she's a seamstress — and studio mate Jean Potter, who makes books. Hilbert calls her studio Overlap Sewing Studio, and Potter will operate under the Rockpile Bindery banner.

Hilbert moved to Asheville about two years ago from the San Francisco area, where she worked as an art teacher and seamstress. Today, she's focusing her work on taking old T-shirts and adding vintage appliqués to spice them up.

Please see CRAFT on B3

Leigh Anne Hilbert is leasing the former Meadows Dry Goods shop on Haywood Road in West Asheville and has remodeled the 1,400 square feet of space into space for a studio, classes and consignment shop.

CRAFT: Grand opening set

The Dry Goods Shop is opening in a neighborhood that now rivals downtown Asheville as a destination for top-notch music venues, coffee shops and cool clothing boutiques. Aside from studio space, Hilbert envisions the space as a community art space.

"It's going to be an unassuming place where you can gain new skills," Hilbert says. "I feel that's a big part of my mission here. We've lost those hand skills that come with putting together things manually."

Right next door, another great artist has opened up a new studio. Dustin Spagnola, of 474 Haywood, was recently named one of the 10 best emerging artists in Western North Carolina by WNC Magazine.

Hilbert plans a grand opening celebration on July 3. You can follow the shop on Hilbert's blog, www.thedrygoodsshop.blogspot.com/.

ARTICLE 3. Any persons in good health who have passed their 1st. birthday and have not passed their 65th. birthday may become a member of this organization by the payment of the required membership fee of 25c.

ARTICLE 4. The annual meeting of this organization will be held at

Dunn-Groce Co., Funeral Home, Asheville, N. C.

AT 7:00 P. M. ON THIRD TUESDAY IN FEBRUARY

Each member shall have one vote at said annual meeting. The Board of Directors of seven members shall be elected by the membership. The quorum of the membership shall be fifteen members. The annual meeting of the board of Directors will be held immediately following the annual meeting of this Organization and it shall be the duty of the Directors to elect a President, Vice-President, and Secretary-Treasurer. The President and Vice-President shall be elected from among the Directors but the Secretary-Treasurer may be selected outside of the Directors. The Secretary-Treasurer shall be the only paid officer of this Organization and his remuneration is to be set by the Board of Directors. The duties of the Secretary-Treasurer shall be performed by the same person unless otherwise ordered by the Organization; and these officers shall constitute a "Board of Control," which shall have power to direct the affairs of this Company in accordance with these articles | or orders of the Organization as a body. The Secretary-Treasurer shall keep a correct record of the membership of the Organization, deaths, assessments made and collected, money received and paid out, and the books shall be open to inspection by the officers or members of the Organization, or the representative of North Carolina Insurance Commission at all times, upon request.

ARTICLE 5. Upon death of any Officer his successor shall be selected by the remaining officers for the un-expired time.

ARTICLE 6. Upon the death of a member, each member will be assessed as per the following schedule (or in multiples thereof) at the age of entry of the member except with those members joining at ages under ten shall be charged the assessment for age ten when they pass their tenth birthday.

Ages 1 to 9 years 5c Ages 10 to 29 years 10c Ages 30 to 49 years 20c Ages 50 to 65 years 30c

The Assessment shall always be based on the entire membership. The frequency of the assessment will reduce or advance as the membership, and | or death rate may decrease or increase. No benefits shall be paid or assessments levied in case of death within thirty days from date of this certificate, except in case of accidental death.

ARTICLE 7. Any member failing to pay assessment within thirty (30) days after notice shall be in bad standing, (notice shall be presumed when forwarded, postage paid to last known address of member; and any member changing his or her address shall notify the Secretary-Treasurer in writing giving the old address and the new). Any member becoming in bad standing for failure to pay assessment when due, may within one year, while in good health, be reinstated to good standing by paying a delinquent fine of 10c and all past due Assessments. No benefit will be paid on account of natural death until after thirty days from reinstatement. Benefits on account of accidental death is in force immediately after reinstatement. Any person desiring to discontinue this Certificate should either turn it in or mail to the office of the Organization.

ARTICLE 8. The benefits herein provided are for the purpose of furnishing a minimum funeral and burial service for a deceased member, in keeping with the service and casket sold at a similiar price by funeral directors of other like communities near the population of the community in which the service shall be rendered.

ARTICLE 9. It is understood that funeral services provided in this contract shall be rendered by designated in this certificate, and the benefits provided are payable to such undertaker rendering said service and not to surviving relatives or friends as death benefits. In the event a member of this organization, in good standing, shall die at a place so far removed from the home of this organization that it is not deemed practical by the officers of this organization to provide a burial or funeral in services and merchandise, the officers of this organization shall cause to be paid in cash, for the burial of member, the amount contracted for and stipulated in these by-laws, not exceeding $100, or shall cause such member to receive a burial or funeral service equal to that provided for in this contract.

ARTICLE 10. In event the proceeds of one assessment on the entire membership do not prove sufficient at any time to yield the benefit contracted for, then such benefits as the amount of the assessment, less the cost of collecting, made or levied on the entire membership, shall be paid or provided. In event the proceeds of one assessment on the entire membership produce more than enough for one burial the balance shall be placed on the treasury to apply on further burials. Assessments may be made in multiples of the assessments mentioned above so as to reduce the cost of collecting them. All legitimate operating expenses of the organization shall be paid out of the assessments but in no event shall the expenses exceed 25% of the assessments collected. The entire amount of the membership fee may be used for expenses.

ARTICLE 11. Special meetings of this Organization may be called by the Secretary-Treasurer when by him deemed necessary, and he shall call a meeting whenever requested to do so by 25% of its members.

ARTICLE 12. No person shall become a member of this Organization who at the time of his or her application for membership is not in good health.

ARTICLE 13. Any member may pay any number of assessments in advance in which case said member will not be further assessed until the Organization shall have levied an equal number of assessments.

ARTICLE 14. Articles of this Organization and its by-laws may be amended by two-thirds vote of the Board of Directors.

ARTICLE 15. Each year before the annual meeting, the Organization shall mail to each member (may be interpreted the head of each family to whom the assessment notices are sent), a statement showing the income collected, the disbursements and burials made, (giving names of each buried).

David McConville of the Elumenati works with an inflatable dome to project digital images at his West Asheville studio.

Digital artist builds on 'Bucky's' geodesic vision

By Dale Neal
STAFF WRITER

WEST ASHEVILLE — Buckminster Fuller built his first geodesic dome at Black Mountain College in the late 1940s. Half a century later, David McConville has built a business borrowing from Fuller's visionary ideas, filling inflatable domes with digital images of the night sky.

"Fuller often said that we perceive only about 1/10th of 1 percent of the electromagnetic spectrum," McConville explained at his West Asheville studio. "Fuller was adamant that learning is experiential. The most effective way to educate someone is to let them experience something."

McConville's company, the Elumenati, helps people see what only scientific instruments have been able to detect, from the far reaches of the universe to the inner workings of molecules. From a West Asheville studio and a partner studio in Minneapolis, the company custom-designs and develops dome projection systems for NASA, universities and museums, as well as the avant-garde Burning Man festival.

McConville first became aware of "Bucky" Fuller as a student in the early 1990s at UNC Asheville. As he's studied Fuller's career, McConville said, "I'm amazed at what I find. It helps me to put a framework around what I'm doing."

In his 88 years before his death in 1983, Fuller packed in a lifetime of inventions and new ideas, from the prototypes for the first minibus in the 1930s to energy-efficient houses.

Want to know more?

As part of the Media Arts Project's "Off the Map Series," David McConville of the Elumenati will give a talk "Making the Invisible Visible: Bucky Fuller and Immersive Media Environments" at 8 tonight at the Black Mountain College Museum + Arts Center, 56 Broadway. Admission is $5.

DOME: Fuller's inventions reflected vision

Decades before business and civic leaders started using the word "synergy," Fuller had a whole system of "synergetics." Fuller believed in "doing more with less" and was deeply concerned about economic and environmental sustainability.

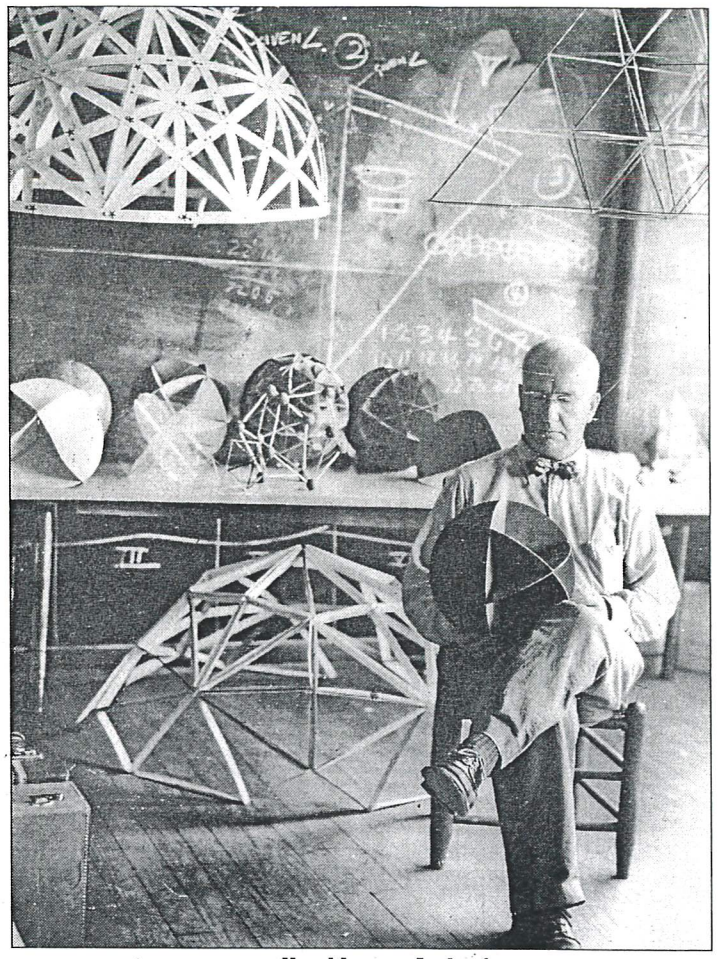
But Fuller is chiefly remembered for the geodesic dome, a lightweight but sturdy sphere assembled from basic geometric shapes. In his first attempt in 1948 at Black Mountain College, the dome collapsed since Fuller was using cheap Venetian blinds. He returned the next summer with stronger materials and successfully raised the geodesic dome. In 1954, Fuller patented his invention.

Fuller's career is explored in an exhibit at the Black Mountain College Museum + Arts Center on Broadway.

"He developed his Dymaxion Car back in the 1930s. It had excellent gas mileage, could seat 11 people and could turn on a dime," said Alice Sebrell, the museum director. Those are things we are desperately in need of, with gas prices over $2.50. As our resources dwindle, and our population grows, Fuller's ideas become more important."

The ideas and inventions that Fuller and others explored at Black Mountain College have a new currency around Asheville as economic leaders talk about the creative class and scientific visualization. With more digital artists moving here and the massive amount of data piped in by the Internet, McConville sees a universe of opportunities waiting to be visualized.

"Data is coming out of our ears. That's the problem. We're drowning in data," McConville said. "In visualization the most crucial component is to tell a compelling story with all this data."



Hazel Larsen Archer/SPECIAL TO THE CITIZEN-TIMES
Buckminster Fuller is shown in the summer of 1948 at Black Mountain College, where he experimented with geodesic domes. Fuller's first effort collapsed, but the following summer, he raised his first dome.

Buckminster Fuller

Born: 1895, Milton, Mass.
Died: 1983.
Inventor, architect, author, visionary.
Fuller invented the term "Spaceship Earth" to encourage people to see the entire world as one interdependent system. During his career, Fuller was awarded 25 U.S. patents, wrote 28 books, received 47 honorary doctorate degrees, circled the Earth 57 times, consulting and lecturing, and received dozens of major architectural and design awards along with the Medal of Freedom, the highest civilian award in America.
Fuller taught at Black Mountain College in the summers of 1948 and 1949, and he served as the director of the BMC Summer Institute in 1949.

Elumenati puts the universe in perspective

Jason Sandford
ASHVEGAS

Ever wonder what it's like to rocket into space and explore the universe?

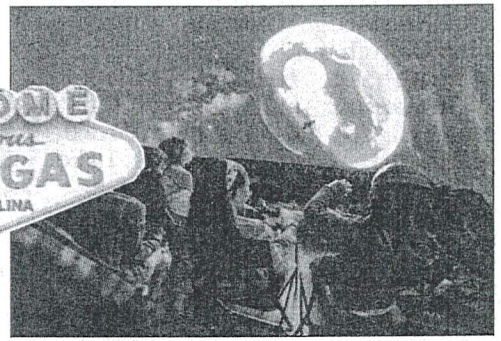
The folks at The Elumenati have. From their West Asheville design center, the minds behind the design and engineering company have contemplated big questions, and they've built a high-powered digital projector system to help us imagine.

The Elumenati was co-founded by David McConville and D'Nardo Colucci. Clay Hooker came on board after the company got up and running in an old West Asheville bank building about eight years ago.

With manufacturing offices in Milwaukee, The Elumenati designs and builds immersive projection systems. The one that's best-known around Asheville, especially to schoolchildren , is known as the GeoDome. It's inflatable, it resembles an igloo, and once inside, viewers can be treated to unique data visualizations.

The trip through the universe shows a starscape, then begins to pull back to show how the Earth is part of the solar system, which is part of the galaxy and so on.

"What happens is a perspective switch," says spokeswoman Hilary McVicker. "You take this journey to the edge of space, and you get a sense of your place in the world, and how miraculous it is that all the conditions are exactly right to support life on Earth."



JENNIFER SAYLOR/SPECIAL TO THE CITIZEN-TIMES

Viewers inside a GeoDome, the portable projection venue designed by The Elumenati, enjoy an outer space perspective on their planet.

The goal is to inspire "a sense of awe and stewardship."

It's working. A GeoDome was used at the global climate summit in Copenhagen, Denmark, last year to help two organizations explain their stories. A GeoDome was also used on the lawn of the White House last year as part of a "star party" hosted by President Obama.

The Elumenati's data visualizations can be used to illustrate more than just the starry skies. The company is working with the Renaissance Computing Institute at UNC Asheville to show geographic information system data. It has developed a flight simulator with a new panorama. And there's promise in interactive gaming, McVicker says.

The company's been so busy it hasn't had a "community night" lately, says McVicker, but there will likely be more tours on the docket. Come prepared for a mind-expanding exploration of the world around you.

This is the opinion of Jason Sandford. Contact him at jsandford@citizen-times.com. Find Ashvegas updates online at CITIZEN-TIMES.com/ashvegas and the full blog at www.ashvegas.com.

The sign of a good business

FASTSIGNS wins U.S. award for small business

By Anne Fitten Glenn
SPECIAL TO THE CITIZEN-TIMES

ASHEVILLE — Ever seen a sky-blue car sporting clouds and a FASTSIGNS logo zipping around town? If so, sales associate Tom Dieterly was probably behind the wheel, on his way to meet with one of FASTSIGNS' many clients.

If the car hasn't caught your eye, signs designed and produced by FASTSIGNS probably have. If you've been to Mission Hospitals, Earth Fare, Asheville Regional Airport, Asheville Mall, Asheville Savings Bank, Asheville-Buncombe Technical Community College or the Biltmore Estate, to name just a few, you've seen FASTSIGNS signs and graphic designs.

John Mark and Cindy Stroud opened the Asheville FASTSIGNS in 1995, offering a full range of custom sign and graphic products, including banners, window/vehicle/floor graphics, safety and identification signs and trade show displays.

There are more than 400 FASTSIGNS in the United States and the Asheville franchise is one of the top six in sales nationwide, John Mark Stroud said.

Just a few weeks ago, the Asheville FASTSIGNS was one of only two businesses in North Carolina to receive a Blue Ribbon Small Business award from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

"Winners of this award have served their employees, customers and communities with a consistent dedication that exemplifies America's spirit of enterprise," said Giovanni Coratolo, executive director of the U.S. Chamber Small Business Council.

The Asheville center also gained membership in The Million Dollar Club, for sales exceeding that amount during the previous year, at a recent convention hosted by FASTSIGNS International Inc. In addition, Dieterly won an award for Exceptional Achievement in Sales.

"This is a fun job," Dieterly said. "What's unique is that I'm not just selling a product, but I'm coming up with solutions to problems."

The FASTSIGNS store on Patton Avenue features some examples of the work that employees can do. "Signage is a very visual medium," Stroud said. "Our lobby is organized so people can touch, see and feel different sign materials."

When asked about the sky-blue cars, Stroud said: "Those cars are actually yellow underneath. We do a full vehicle wrap."

National Bank Plans To Erect Building For W. Asheville Branch

Tentative plans for reopening the West Asheville branch of the First National Bank and Trust company have been made and a lot on the southeast corner of Haywood road and Fairfax avenue has been purchased by the bank, it was announced yesterday by Burnham S. Colburn, president.

Transfer of the title was from C. J. Ebbs. The lot has a frontage of 109 feet on Haywood road and adjoins the property of the West Asheville Presbyterian church.

The branch, formerly operated by the bank at the corner of Haywood and Brevard roads, was discontinued in 1942 because of the loss of trained personnel to the armed forces, Mr. Colburn said.

He stated that with the possibility of an early return to the bank of some of its trained tellers and bookkeepers now in the army and navy the bank is making postwar plans to provide complete banking service to the community of West Asheville, provided that approval is given by the comptroller of the currency.

Provided approval is given by banking authorities for reestablishing the branch, a one-story banking house, equipped to render every service consistent with sound banking practice, will be ereteed when materials are available, Mr. Colburn said.

THE ARTS FORUM

West Asheville gets first contemporary art gallery

At right, sculpture, paintings and glassworks easily mix in the exhibit space at 520 Gallery.

WEST ASHEVILLE — It was bound to happen. With West Asheville filling up its storefronts with funky shops and eateries, the art world couldn't have been far behind.

So with the grass-roots flair this neighborhood often displays, 520 Gallery opened this summer with little fanfare but plenty of soul as West Asheville's first contemporary gallery.

Constance E. Richards

Slate gray with deep red accents, the building houses a sizable gallery space and the even larger studios of owners Julie Allen and Robin Van Valkenburgh. It is a chic reinvention of what was once an auto body shop. Now it only holds bodies of work, namely of the artist owners and their invited guests.

Following a trend that seems to be entirely Asheville, these artists have taken their fates into their own hands and opened a gallery in which they can display their own works, as well as the work of other local artists. River District artists have a strong showing here, for example.

Robin Van Valkenburgh, a mixed media artist who works predominantly with ceramics, cast aluminum and painting, had run the gauntlet of setting up for shows around the country and found the process daunting.

"As artists ourselves we know the energy it takes to do all that," says Van Valkenburgh. "We know so many artists who want to show their work and we wanted to help them out."

Although the gallery isn't a co-op, it's run in much the same way, with exhibiting artists pitching in to hang posters around town, hand out fliers, and hanging the shows together.

In beautifying the former garage, Allen and Van Valkenburgh have quickly made friends in a community that is also their home. The church across the street, for instance, welcomes visitors to use its parking lot during exhibition openings.

Terra Kirk, a young West Asheville business owner, only recently heard about the gallery. "West Asheville still needs more places like this but I'll go now that I know about it," Kirk said. "We need galleries, sushi bars — everything that downtown has — to make this another facet of our community."

The interior of the building at 520 Haywood Road offers prime exhibition space over about 1,200 square feet. What used to be black oil-saturated floors are now gleaming patina floorboards.

"It was so saturated with motor oil that we couldn't get it all off," said Allen, the gallery co-owner and a woodworker. "I sanded from nine in the morning until nine at night ... and finally we decided to go with the motor oil patina."

Allen designed the space, cutting the 2,400 square feet in half and creating a display wall between the studio and the gallery. A garage door, which is opened during warm-weather receptions, also allows for large-scale pieces to be moved in and out of the gallery more easily.

Exhibitions so far haven't been theme-based, but rather group shows — exhibiting blown glass vessels on hand-carved wood tables, abstract oil paintings next to graphite portraits, as well as smaller ceramic works that find a home in the gallery gift shop, at the front of the space.

Another opportunity for artists already under way is a tailgate art market on the last Saturday of every month.

"Artists need a venue to make some cash and show their stuff," said Van Valkenburgh.

The main criterion for anyone showing at the gallery is that they must be local. "There's so much local art here that doesn't get seen," she says.

520 Gallery has seen an influx of local artisans who have simply dropped by while passing the space for the first time. Van Valkenburgh says they prefer to show full-time artists who are making a living off their art.

"But we have shown people where art is not their job, but their passion," Allen offers.

Most of all, Allen and Van Valkenburgh hope to make collectors out of locals, particularly West Asheville residents.

"We show a lot of different art that's affordable," says Van Valkenburgh. "We want to do our part — you could just say the economy is bad, the market is bad ... but that's just not good enough."

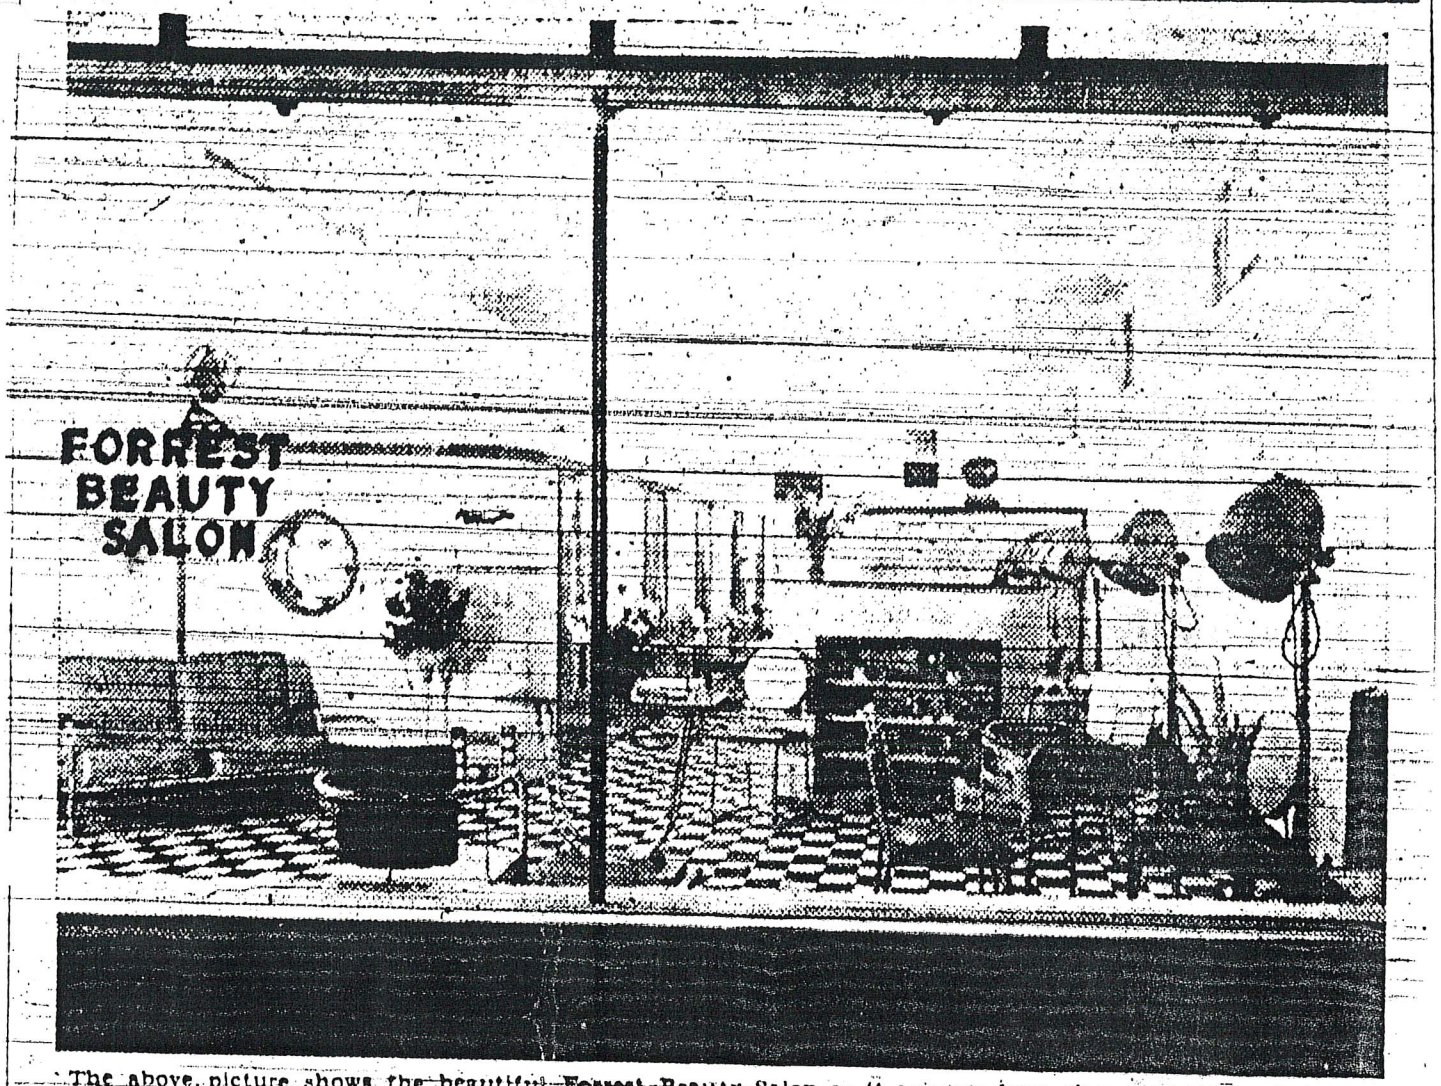
Equipped With Helene Curtis Products



The above picture shows the beautiful Forrest Beauty Salon as it appears from the street. This ultra-modern beauty establishment is owned and operated by E. T. Forrest who has had over 14 years of experience in beauty culture. Although Mr. Forrest has represented many national beauty supply houses, he says that he chose to completely equip his shop with Helene Curtis products because he knows they are the best. Incidentally Mr. Forrest also owns and operates the Enka Beauty Shop at Enka. Helene Curtis products are distributed throughout Western North Carolina by the Carolina Beauty Supply company at 14 Broadway in Asheville. These products will be demonstrated at the 8th annual convention of Associated Cosmetologists of North Carolina to be held at the George Vanderbilt Hotel, September 4, 5, and 6.

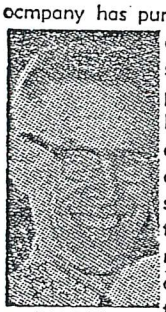
FORTUNE'S HAS SERVED WEST ASHEVILLE SINCE 1919

The story of Fortune's Paint and Hardware Company began in West Asheville in 1919 with S. J. Fortune, father of the present manager, Albert Fortune. "Mr. Jack" was able to combine his business with his pleasure and even now spins a good huntin' or fishin' yarn.

For these forty-odd years the ocmpany has pursued a policy of quality service specializing in paints, power and hand tools, builders' hardware, and tool rental servcies. If it's a tool, it can be rented or purchased at Fortune's. The present location was remodeled to provide for modern "check out" operation about two years ago and customers appreciate the opportunity for browsing among the do-it-yourself areas of the store. Of course, there is a competent, well-trained sales staff on duty to assist customers who desire it.



FORTUNE

Fortune's salesmen are given specialized training in factory schools and local sales training. They are now in the midst of a "Paint Salesmen's School" at Lee Edwards.

If you need help with a home repair problem, a decorating problem, a building problem, or want to know when the fish are biting at Fontana . . . go to Fortune's.

The Hardware and Sporting Goods departments are managed by Jim Banning. The Tool Department by Harold Knighten, and the Paint Department by Wayman Pritchard. Albert Fortune has been store manager for the five years since Mr. Jack's well-earned retirement.

WORK WAS COMMENCED ON NEW PLANT TODAY

Work on the foundation of the French Broad Granite-Brick company, whose plant will be located on the west side of the French Broad river, close to Riverside park, was commenced this morning. It is expected that the buildings will be completed, and the machinery installed in about six weeks. Mr. Hobart of the New York office of the H. Hunnekes company is the engineer in charge of the construction work. The French Broad Granite-Brick company will manufacture sand-lime brick that is now being used extensively all over the country for private and public buildings.

Asheville Gazette News August 20, 1904

Site Selected for French Broad Granite-Brick Plant

A portion of the machinery for the French Broad Granite-Brick company has arrived and other necessary machinery for the manufacture of sand-brick and tiling has been shipped. Portions of the machinery to be used in the manufacture of the bricks and tile is covered by patent and will not be here for several days.

The site for the location of the brick-making plant has been selected on the French Broad river, on the west side, near the rock quarry and between the river and the tracks of the Southern Railway company. Contractors are now looking over the plans for the foundation and other construction work and as soon as the bids are all in the contract will be let and active building begun.

The French—Broad Granite-Brick company propose to manufacture by patent process a sand-lime brick for building urposes, which has recently come very much into use throughout the country. Several handsome buildings in this state and South Carolina are now being built of this class of material and the government has adopted it in the building of its barracks in the west.

Asheville Gazette News July 1, 1904

French Broad Granite-brick Company Now Making Brick

The French Broad Granite-Brick company, located on the French Broad river close to Riverside park, was completed last week and put in operation. Since the starting of the works a number of brick have been manufactured daily to be used as samples, and with the completion of the side-tracking and the connecting of the tracks with the main line of the Southern Railway the plant's full capacity, 20,000 per day, will be turned out. The bricks being made by the French Broad Granite-Brick company are splendid specimens of building material and the output will be rapidly consumed. This style and color of bricks are being used extensively in different portions of the country in the construction of both residences and public buildings and the United States government has adopted the material for use in erecting government barracks.

French Broad Laundry Operated By Downeys

C. L. Downey, president and L. L. Downey, vice president and secretary, recently bought the French Broad Laundry and have spent approximately $19,000 on new improvements and equipment to bring the plant up to meet all modern demands for finer laundry work and dry cleaning.

The Downey brothers also operate laundry and dry cleaning plants at Lenoir and Hickory and are thoroughly experienced in rendering the highest type of cleaning service to their customers.

The public is assured that in the New French Broad Laundry, their clothes will receive the proper care that they deserve.

This plant now features the famous Sanitone method of dry cleaning as advertised in the Saturday Evening Post and Good Housekeeping magazines.

"We feel that the Sanitone method is the very best dry cleaning method on the market today," L. L. Downey. "It costs more to use than other methods, but we want to give our customers the best work possible and for this reason have selected Sanitone."

The French Broad Laundry is located on Brownwood avenue in West Asheville and maintains a fleet of trucks to call for and deliver work. The customer merely has to call telephone 5811 for prompt service.

TWO BURGLARS FAIL IN EFFORT TO CRACK SAFE

Load 600-Pound Safe On Auto And Then Run Afoul Of Cops

CAR AND SAFE ARE TAKEN AFTER RACE

Alleged Owner Of Auto Held Without Bond In City Jail

Failing to crack a 600-pound safe belonging to the French Broad Laundry company and containing $300 in cash and other valuables, two burglars loaded it on the back of an automobile early yesterday and proceeded to move it to a safer location.

Hardly 100 feet from the plant at Haywood and Brownwood roads, the burglars bumped into police, who gave chase. After a race which continued for a mile, ending at the rock quarry near Smith's bridge on French Broad River, the pursued abandoned their car and the safe and escaped in the darkness.

Jack Ernest Arrested

Jack Ernest, of Waynesville avenue who police say owned the abandoned automobile, was arrested yesterday and is held without bond for investigation.

Patrolmen Rector and Fox were sitting in a police car talking when they saw an automobile drive out of the alley by the laundry. As the automobile passed them they saw the safe, two legs of which were dragging the pavement. They gave chase.

The race led down Waynesville avenue to the river. At Smith's bridge the lights of the pursued automobile were turned out and the policemen for a time lost the track. Then they saw the sparks struck by the iron legs of the safe from the pavement. They renewed the chase but the two men had disappeared when they arrived at the halted car.

Lock Battered

The combination lock of the safe had been battered out of shape indicating the burglars had first tried to open it at the laundry.

Officials of the laundry were notified and a truck was sent to carry the safe back to company's building.

An investigation at the laundry showed the men had entered through a window they had "jimmied." In order to remove the safe, various pieces of machinery and furniture in the building had been moved to clear the way. The safe was rolled out on a trucker and was dropped on the rear end of the automobile from the carrier.

In addition to the $300, the safe contained about $300 in checks and various office records.

Rector said he turned his light on the face of the driver of the automobile and would be able to identify the man if he is taken. He said the chase started at 2 o'clock in the morning.

Police Chief Measer ordered Ernest held incommunicado. The register shows he is detained for investigation.

Everything From Eggs To Watches

Here and there throughout the city, sometimes hard to find, are little businesses still thriving in the tradition of country pleasures.

Many of those pleasures are to be found at the Friendly Grocery, 503 Haywood Road in West Asheville.

A quiet little store offering everything from watches to diapers to fresh country eggs sold in paper bags, the Friendly Grocery now boasts a relative-ly new business in "custom-made" sandwiches.

Don Russell, who bought the grocery in 1949 and has bustled up and down its aisles six days a week for the past 27 years, says the sandwich business was "something of an accident."

"When they started tearing down the block of buildings next door to build the Shell station about six years ago, the workers would come in looking for something to eat at lunch-time," Russell says.

"One day, one of them looked at the sandwich I was eating, which I had brought from home, and said, 'how much is that?' So, I sold him mine, made another for myself and that's how all this began."

"All this" includes a bill of fare with 85 different varieties of sandwiches, most of which are big enough for two hungry people.

"These aren't ordinary sandwiches," Russell points out.

The assortment of possible ingredients is amazing — ranging from the well-known reuben to double-deck banana, pineapple and cheese sandwiches laced with lettuce.

Other choices, which are advertised on cardboard signs behind the sandwich counter, include eight varieties of "king of the roads," which appear to be half a foot thick, and a two-foot-long "family submarine," which allegedly feeds five but would probably do for 10.

Russell attributes part of the success of his small business to "that touch of friendliness missing in the big supermarkets of the day."

"We like to do a little bit extra for our customers," he says. "There's just not enough of that human element left in business anymore."

Russell says he has customers who call in orders from Mars Hill, Hendersonville, Black Mountain, "and, of course, all through the city — bankers, construction workers, neighbors, all kinds of people."

The small business, run by Russell, his wife, Marian and his mother, Mrs. Annie Green, who contributes her homemade kosher pickles and pickled beans, provides "at least one meal a day" for Russell.

"I like people," he says. "And people like my sandwiches. We'll probably be here for awhile."

He's Sandwich Engineer

Highland Happenings By Nancy Brower

When customers make their way to the back of the Friendly Grocery to order a sandwich, Don Russell overwhelms them with 150 possibilities. The array of sandwiches offered by the neighborhood grocery at the corner of Haywood Road and Burton Street in West Asheville is so unexpected, customers usually stammer out some uninspired combination like ham and cheese on rye.

Russell stands ready to make German specialties like knockwurst and winekraut with melted cheese on a roll, pineapple, banana and cheese on bran 'n honey bread, every imaginable variation of the submarine sandwich and his own specialty, the King of the Road sandwich, a towering "Dagwood" which weighs in at a pound and a half.

On the wall behind the deli case are big color portraits of sandwiches. They were made by Russell, artfully arranged on blue velvet draperies like the crown jewels, accessorized with pickles and potato chips and professionally photographed. Cheryl Tiegs has not had more glamorous treatment than Russell's subs and sandwiches.

After some years with A & P stores, Russell bought the corner grocery in 1949. He has operated it 33 years, doing a big business in cigarettes and sandwiches, selling a full line of groceries and even some sundries

"The grocery business is getting difficult for the small businessman," Russell said. "He is having to come up with something else to help him stay in business."

For Russell, that "something else" was sandwiches. He was in the habit of making himself a deluxe sandwich of cold cuts for lunch each day. When the block of businesses across Burton Street from the store was being torn down some years ago, men from the demolition crew wandered into the grocery in search of something to eat.

"I had made myself a sandwich for lunch," Russell recalled, "and it was there on the counter. One of the workers asked, 'Where can I get a sandwich like that?' I sold him mine and, of course, it grew from there. The sandwich business has helped me stay here. The neighborhood grocery has been pretty hard hit."

The sandwich Russell had concocted for himself was a little bit of everything in the meat case that day, laced with fresh onion rings, lettuce and tomato. It became his King of the Road, now standardized as ham, cheese, corned beef, lettuce, tomato, onion and mayonnaise on a five-inch bun, topped with a wedge of Kosher dill pickle.

Equally popular are his submarine sandwiches, including a family-sized deluxe sub that weighs five pounds, sells for $12.99 and serves five or six persons. When Russell makes a BLT (bacon, lettuce and tomato) sandwich, his version of this longtime favorite is "the largest one you ever saw."

Subs and Such

"Subs, heroes, hoagies, po boys, they are all basically the same sandwich," Russell said. He prefers to call his subs. He has concocted his own oil and vinegar sauce to sprinkle them with, which, he said, includes 15 ingredients.

Russell, assisted by his niece, Cindy Russell, assembles the 150 sandwiches from a deli case filled with great loaves of cheese, yards of sausages and wursts, cold cuts of every persuasion and tubs of giant pickles. He can, from this palette, make anything but a meatball sandwich, an item he refuses to add to his menu. "I never saw a meatball sandwich," he maintains, "and I've never tried to make one.".

Otherwise, he aims to please. He will make a small sandwich for a kid, lavishing on the peanut butter and jelly. He once carefully followed an order for a ham and cheese that called for leaving off the ham.

He figures he sells about 100 sandwiches a day on a busy day. The busiest days are just ahead, he said. "Spring is good eating weather. It's not too hot and it's not too cold. You can get out and get the exercise that makes you hungry. It's just an appetizing time of year."

Wife Helps, Too

With wife Marian to mind the cash register at the front of the store, Don Russell can concentrate on sandwiches. He's outgoing, wears a butcher's apron and looks the part of the proprietor of the Friendly Grocery. He has even rigged up a place for people to lean as they munch away on the man-sized sandwiches. It is only a fancied-up plank of wood, but supplements the only other eating place in the grocery, the top of a chest-type freezer.

Most sandwiches are made "to go" and Russell provides a cone-shaped paper envelope to catch the overflow from his piled-high creations.

"Many of our sandwiches were designed here and all of them are custom-built here," Russell boasts, adding with a wink, "You need a degree in engineering to make some of these sandwiches."

Russell said a grocery store and a sandwich business go together like ham and cheese. "If somebody orders a sandwich with something I don't have, I just go to the grocery shelves and get it."

Anyway he slices it, it's time to retire

Friendly Grocery's sandwich man calls quits after 36 years

Don Russell, wife Marian and helper Carl Neff in deli at Friendly Grocery

In less than a month, a 36-year tradition comes to an end in West Asheville. The sandwich man is retiring.

The first thing you notice when you go in the Friendly Grocery at the corner of Haywood Road and Burton Street is the loud cowbell that rings right over your head.

Then you turn left down a narrow aisle and before you see it, you hear it, the sizzle of food on the grill. And you smell it, pungent and meaty.

It's Don Russell's deli, home of 149 different sandwiches, and after Dec. 31 the Russell magic will work no more.

"We just tried to live up to the name that was already here, Friendly Grocery," Russell said, perched companionably on a stack of milk carton cases. "You know what Wachovia's slogan is, don't you — we've got a million customers 'cause we treat 'em one at a time. That's how we do things here."

Russell's magic is many things, not the least of which is personal service. Since Jan. 8, 1949, he and his wife, Marian, married since 1942, and a scattering of helpers have greeted the patron with the kind of quick and easy "Can I help you?" that sounds a little warmer in the close confines of a small family business.

"The people of the community can call him friend," Carl Neff said. "Everybody that comes in, it's 'Mr. Don.'" Neff is a doctoral candidate in theology who has worked as sandwich manager for some months.

"I've eaten his sandwiches for years," Neff said.

"It was in April he came," Russell said softly, "about two weeks before mama died."

Annie Green contributed homemade kosher pickles, pickled beans and part of the family in the family business before her death this year.

Russell turns 65 on Jan. 8. He doesn't want to give up the store, neither does Marian, but since a heart attack five years ago Russell can't get health insurance and he fears a sudden financial blow.

"I'm considered a candidate for open-heart surgery now. That's 30, 40 thousand dollars, and the insurance companies don't want to carry me." A trace of bitterness shades into his voice and Marian's when they talk about their previous carrier, who they said dropped Don from the rolls after his heart attack.

"Some other company came along and bought them, and when they did that they dropped a bunch of people like me. Now I've got a pre-existing condition, and I can't get insurance. I'd like to work until I was 70."

Will someone carry on the tradition?

"It's debatable," Russell said. "We didn't set out to pre-sell because I wanted to work the full year, I didn't want somebody coming in and saying they wanted it in November. I just started to advertise this month.

"Whoever buys it can do what they want with it."

They will be hard pressed to keep the magic alive. It's in the spanking clean, freshly painted and scrubbed walls and floors, tended to by hands that love their work. It's in the small but carefully tended stock, kept just so for the needs of a neighborhood it has served for decades. It's the magic of daily rituals: old and comfortable customers; children to see Mr. Don; voices raised just right to reach any part of the store from any other part; movements of hands and feet that know their way around and the places of everything in the store without thinking; banter with a delivery man who has delivered and bantered longer than most couples today stay married.

"I guess I've walked enough miles on this floor to go around the world," Russell said.

And, of course, there are the sandwiches.

Subs beyond count, really, because if it isn't one of the 149 listed, it gets made anyway.

"If we can't make it, we'll fake it," Neff said, two-fisted sandwiches with as much meat and cheese and whatever hanging out the sides as between the bread. Sandwiches with verve, with moxie.

And then there are the big ones.

"We had a 6-foot sandwich on this block yesterday," Russell said, pointing to the top of a cooler covered in butcher paper.

The cooler is Russell's table, and it serves admirably.

The cowbell rings and two girls walk in. Marian is working the register. Neff runs up to help. "You dropped a quarter," Russell calls out, excusing himself in the middle of talking about catering hors d'ouevres to business meetings to run up and help the other two. "Have a merry Christmas," the girls call out in chorus, and the salutation is returned.

A sandwich eaten at the Friendly Grocery is a rambling meal, like the slower tick of a summer's day clock. John Keats would have liked to eat here.

"We've got what you call a variety store, three sections we kind of specialize in," Russell said. "That's our cigarette section, our deli section and our grocery section."

Yes, the cigarette section, somehow incongruous in this very proper establishment where no man shall buy wine or beer and no fly dare tread. The Friendly Grocery overflows with cigarettes, cartons stacked by the hundreds in what should be dairy freezers.

"When they built I-240 about 20 years ago, people would stop in and buy cigarettes," Russell said. "We've had people from all over the world stop in and buy cigarettes. We've kind of built up our cigarette business from that year.

"We're well known in West Asheville. We're well known through this part of the country. People can't wait to get one of our sandwiches," Russell said, becoming animated. He leans across the cooler. "They talk about it for miles before they get here, about the sandwich they're going to get."

Then the fact of his retirement intrudes and he settles back.

"I guess they say you can get caught up in 30 days. After that, after that I guess I'll just retire."

Russell pulls out a letter from what he calls "a rank stranger," an Atlanta man just passing through who just happened to stop and sit a spell.

"I'm no exception to the fast pace of current times," the visitor wrote, "but for a brief moment, you may not realize, you took my thoughts back to a time I much prefer, when people were just people. Friendly Grocery is everything the name implies."

Biodiesel Pump to Open in Asheville!

Starting July 16, consumers in WNC may begin purchasing B99 biodiesel fuel at the new pump at The Gas Up service station in West Asheville.

On Saturday, July 16 at 1 p.m., Blue Ridge Biofuels Cooperative will celebrate the grand opening of WNC's first publicly accessible biodiesel filling station at the Gas-Up located at 405 Haywood Road in West Asheville just off I-240 exit 2. The pump will be open daily from 6:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m.

The 3 product pump will initially dispense B99 (99% biodiesel, 1% petroleum diesel), but will soon offer various blends, such as B50 and B75. Biodiesel is a vegetable oil based fuel that can be used in any diesel engine without modification and in oil furnaces. Biodiesel is an important alternative fuel that significantly decreases emissions from diesel vehicles, decreases dependence on foreign oil and enhances the local economy.

The pump and storage tanks were funded in part through a grant from the NC Solar Center and the NC State Energy Office. To meet demand, Blue Ridge Biofuels will begin distribution of biodiesel produced in other states but plans to expand production of its own B100 using waste vegetable oil from area restaurants. Since Blue Ridge Biofuels intends to dispense biodiesel that is produced at its nearby plant, the company will be able to reduce transportation costs, offering the fuel at a more competitive price.

Before installation of the new fuel dispenser and storage tanks was complete, consumers were already excited about the opportunity to purchase clean fuel. "Public response has been phenomenal!" said Director of Development Paul Beaton. "There is a large demand for biodiesel in this area and folks can hardly wait until we are able to fully serve them."

A ribbon cutting ceremony will be held by Blue Ridge Biofuels along with Julian Agbala, owner of the Gas-Up. NC State Energy Office Director Larry Shirley will be speaking about Biodiesel. State and local elected officials have been invited along with representatives from Warren Wilson College and UNCA who plan to use biodiesel in their vehicles. Geer Clothing Company Showing Fall Styles

Offer Values By Being Out Of High Rent District

With the Fall season just a few days off thoughts turn to ones personal appearance in the latest fall styles.

The Geer Clothing company, located 717 Haywood road in West Asheville are showing a complete selection of Fall suits. According to Wade B. Geer, manager, these suits are all wool and a complete selection of colors are on display. Mr. Geer pointed out that due to the fact that his store is located out of the high rent district he can sell quality clothing for less. The customers get the saving. The Sewell Clothes are carried in stock and cost only fifteen dollars. You are invited to drop by the store at any time and see for yourself the fine quality material that these suits are made from. The management is quite sure that you won't be disappointed.

This pular firm carries the well known Piedmont and Roth shirts which are guaranteed for one year. Thoroughbred hats, trousers, leather jackets, sweaters, and a complete line of work clothes.

All spring and summer suits are being closed out for the small sum of nine dollars and ninety five cents.

Mr. Geer stated that many people are taking advantage of their lay-away plan which means that the customer may make a small deposit on a suit or any other item and the item will be put aside until the purchaser wants it. Mr. Geer has been in the clothing business for the past sixteen years and for the past seven years he has been located in Asheville. This wide knowledge of clothing makes it possible for Mr. Geer to get good values from the manufacturer and pass the savings on to his customers.

Why Wait to Buy a Cemetery Lot?

History

Groce Funeral Home, Inc. was founded in 1929 when the sons of the Reverend T.A. Groce joined with Dunn Funeral Home on Haywood Road in West Asheville. In 1932, the firm was renamed Dunn & Groce Funeral Home. Following the death of Mr. Dunn, three brothers, Bob, Bill and Fred Groce purchased his share and moved the firm to it's current location on Patton Avenue. Continued growth necessitated the building of a chapel in 1960, a new operating room in 1970, two large visitation rooms in 1985, redecoration in 1994, an expanded parking lot in 1995, and a cremation facility in 1996.

Following the deaths of Bob and Bill Groce, and the retirement of Fred Groce, the funeral home is currently owned and managed by Bill Groce's sons, W.H. "Bill" Groce, Jr., and H. Dale Groce.

Family Owned

Unlike some other funeral homes, the Groce's have resisted offers from national corporations to purchase the company, preferring to remain family owned. The Groce family believes that the community is best served when operating decisions are made locally, by members of the community, rather than by a board of directors in another state or country.

Funeral home proves there's a lot in a name

STEVE DIXON/SDIXON@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

Dale Groce, left, and Al Williams are now in business together at the new Tunnel Road location of Groce Funeral home. The company still has its location on Patton Avenue.

Groce, Williams — competitors to co-workers

By Josh Boatwright
JBOATWRIGHT@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

ASHEVILLE — The families behind two of the area's best known funeral homes are bringing life back to a facility that had languished under corporate ownership.

Groce Funeral Home is opening its third branch at the former location of Williams Funeral Service on Tunnel Road.

That site had been owned and operated by Haw Creek residents Roy and Earl Williams for 30 years before it was sold to Loewen Group of Canada, which later to sold it to Service Corporation International (SCI), of Houston, Texas. Williams finally closed two years ago because of declining business.

Though the new facility displays the Groce family name, it will once again be run by a Williams as second-generation funeral director Al Williams assumes management there.

"People like to work with people they know. No matter where you go, you like to walk in and someone calls you by your name and you're treated like a neighbor rather than just a business person," said Dale Groce, who runs the business with his brother Bill.

"There's more to this than just the business transaction, there's so much empathy that has to be shared."

Shared history

The Groce and Williams families have a long history together.

Brothers Roy and Earl Williams worked with the Groce family at their West Asheville home in the 1930s before going into business for themselves and opening their Tunnel Road facility in the mid-1960s.

"When the Williams family was operating over here and we were operating in West Asheville, if we needed something or vice versa we called each other up. We were competitors, but we were friends also," Dale Groce said.

Roy Williams died in 1992 and his brother decided to retire three years later, selling the business to a Canadian corporation.

Al Williams continued managing the funeral home and his namesake remained on the sign, though business practices changed as the facility changed hands from one corporate owner to another.

Williams became increasingly frustrated as company employees came and went from his location and he had to follow strict policies requiring him to collect full payment from families upfront.

That policy was a far-cry from the family's practice of making financial arrangements that fit the needs of their clients.

Haw Creek resident Clarence Dotson, who worked for a few years as an assistant funeral director for the Williamses, recalled how the family dealt with the subject of money after his wife's burial in 1994.

"About a week after that, I went up there and I asked Mr. Earl Williams, 'How much do I owe you sir?' He said, 'What's your hurry? I haven't got it figured up yet.' He said to come back in about a month," said Dotson, 84. Funeral and burial services average about $6,000.

Despite the company's focus on the bottom line, business waned in the late 1990s and Al Williams decided to quit and go to work for Groce in 2000. "When I left here it was hard to drive down the road and look and see the sign up and just knowing the business was going down," he said.

Personal preference

Many small, family-owned businesses have struggled in the past decade to compete with corporate-run stores that offer more selection and lower prices.

Not so in the funeral industry where about 88 percent of businesses are owned by individuals, families, or closely held private companies, according to data collected by the National Funeral Directors Association.

"We engage in what we firmly believe is a sacred trust with the family and our community," said Bob Biggins, a former president of the association who runs a funeral home in the Boston suburbs.

The total number of funeral homes in the United States has declined in the past six years and economic conditions have been less than ideal for expanding a business since the recession.

But the Groce family determined late last year there were enough families who needed their services in the East Asheville, Fairview and Swannanoa areas to warrant opening a new branch.

Ministers like the Rev. Gayle Brown of Oteen Baptist Church have greeted the coming of the Groce and Williams families with enthusiasm.

"When you contact Groce Funeral Home you become a personal friend with the owners and staff. You are not a number standing in line for needed service," Brown said.

Al Williams will act alongside his wife, Richelle, and J. Richard Gassaway as funeral directors of the new Groce home. He said the chance to return to work at his family's business is a "dream come true."

As the funeral home's sign was scheduled to be erected this week, Dale Groce noted that he had wanted to incorporate the Williams name into the title, but he faced a problem.

"We considered opening it as the 'Williams Branch' or 'Williams Memorial Chapel of Groce Funeral Home,' but that corporation bought the Williams name, they won't let us use it," said Groce.

"That won't stop us from telling people there's a Williams managing it."

ASHEVILLE — The arrest Wednesday of one of his potential assailants did not encourage robbery victim Hector Contreras, who said the future of his West Asheville convenience store is uncertain.

Contreras was attacked and robbed around 9 p.m. Dec. 3 as he left H&B Grocery, the store he and his thriving neighborhood business center worth almost $1 million and won the Minority Entrepreneur of the Year Award in 2002.

"I built the store, kitchen and Laundromat because that's what they needed in the community," Hector Contreras said. He drew on his experience operating Bonnie's Little Corner, a convenience store on Pack Square downtown. Since

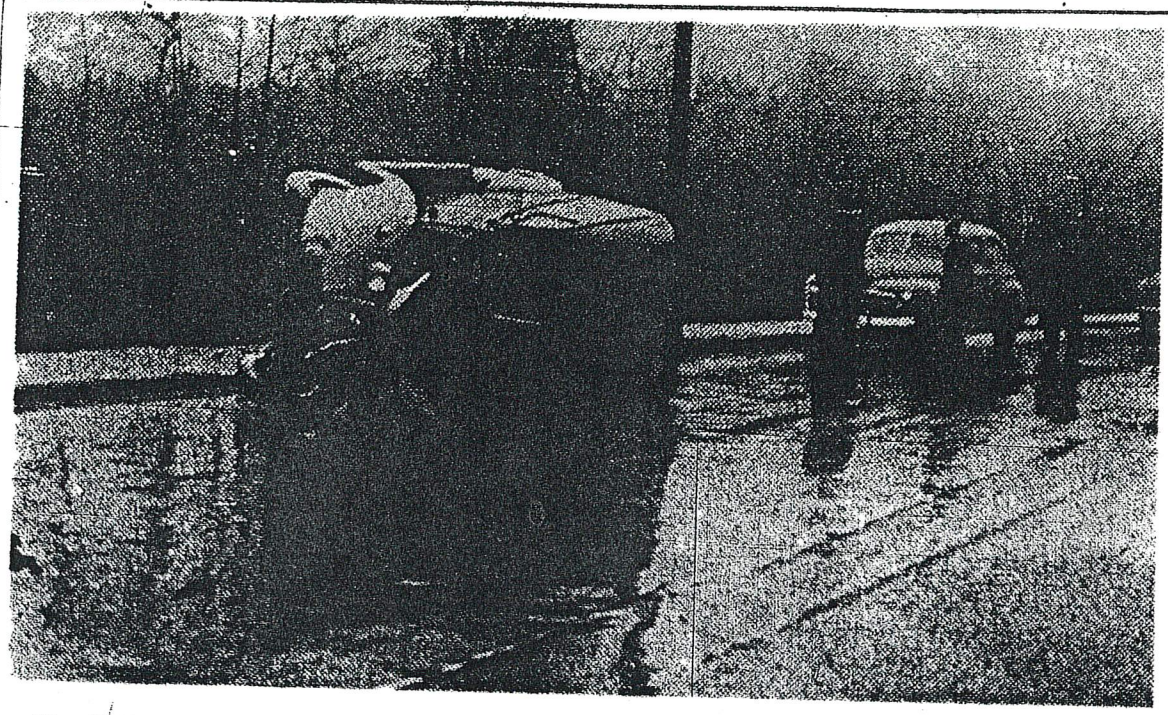
Milk Truck, Street Bus In Accident



The Half-Circle B ranch truck, shown resting on its left side here, turned over twice after sideswiping a city bus at the West Asheville end of the Haywood road bridge at 8:25 a. m. yesterday. Thomas Geter West, driver of the truck, told police his brakes locked at the Riverview drive intersection to Haywood road, police said today. The truck damages total about $500 and damages to the city bus were estimated at $350. R. B. Holcombe was driver of the city bus. No one was hurt although the driver of the truck was jolted around considerably, police reported today. The city bus continued on its trip and a wrecker was called for the milk truck, police said.

HAPPY HILL RESTAURANT

1400 Patton Ave.
253-5772
Open 6 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday

Enter the doors of the Happy Hill Restaurant in West Asheville and it's a good bet that a friendly waitress will immediately greet you with a big smile and an invitation to "grab any open table you like."

That could include a booth, a table or – if you're lucky and the place isn't packed – a seat at the counter. A friendly, comfortable atmosphere awaits diners to the well-established restaurant. Except for Mondays, the restaurant is open every day, when owner Andy Katsigianis is on hand to open the doors at 6 a.m. He has run the place since 1968, and personally cooks everything from scratch. This past year, Citizen-Times readers voted the Happy Hill an honorable mention in the Best of WNC family dining category. The restaurant offers a variety of home-style meals, including your choice of vegetables.

Daily specials are reasonably priced: breakfast, $2.75; lunch, $3.75; and dinner, $4.25. Regular customers appear at all times of the day, but to catch the flavor of a bustling, busy lunchtime counter crowd, visit around noon and try the house favorites – prime rib at $6.95 or the whole trout at $5.95 – with the many construction workers who make the restaurant part of their daily routine.

EMPLOYES of Harry's Cadillac-Pontiac Co. gathered in the George Vanderbilt Hotel yesterday for the firm's annual Christmas party. Harry D. Blomberg, head of the company, was host.

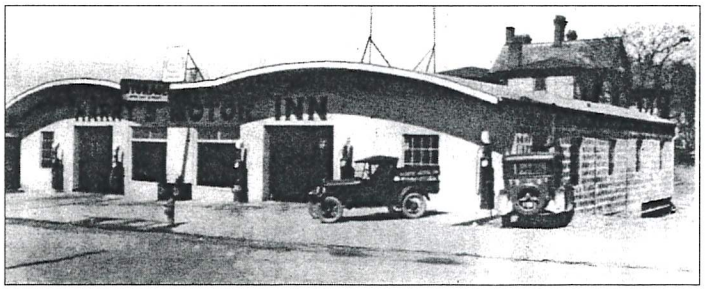
Asheville Citizen December 21, 1956

"You're wasting your time fooling around with cars. You ought to get a job and go to work."

Asheville High principal Andy Hutchins had no idea that in 1919, when he spoke these words to Harry Blomberg cautioning him about spending all his time tinkering with cars, that Harry's Cadillac, Pontiac, GMC would be standing on a hill on Patton Avenue eighty-six years later. What began as one of Asheville's first gasoline filling stations on North Market Street is today a third generation family business.

Initially, everything Harry did, had something to do with rolling wheels, gasoline stations, parking garages, and automobile sales. He sold used Appersons, Auburns, locomobiles, Haynes cars, anything that had an engine and four rolling wheels.

During the great depression of the 1930"s, when many of Asheville's automobile dealers went broke and even the city floundered financially Harry's business flourished. He was adiligent and honest. He correctly gauged the needs of automobile owners. He knew they needed fuel and service and because most cars were open air models with window curtains, storage for bad weather days. He called his places "Harry's Motor Inns" and located them strategically throughout the city— one on Market Street, another on Haywood Street, and a third at the Grove Park Inn, capturing the tourist trade at Asheville's most prominent hotels.



In 1937, Harry obtained the Cadillac franchise, the first in the Southeast. Four years later, in 1941, he acquired Pontiac. Harry's son-in-law, Buddy Patton joined the business in 1950. In 1967, Harry's Cadillac-Pontiac moved from downtown Asheville to it's current location on Patton Avenue.

In 1991, GMC Truck was added to the franchises and the company was renamed Harry"s Cadillac-Pontiac-GMC and nicknamed Harry's On The Hill.

Harry Blomberg died at the age of eighty-seven in November of 1991. The company is now owned by Buddy Patton, his wife Marilyn, and Harry's younger daughter, Barbara Blomberg. Two of Buddy and Marilyn's three children are operating the business. Pat Grimes is General Manager and her brother Harry Patton is in charge of Sales operations.

Harry would find it difficult to believe that today a top of the line Cadillac XLR sells for $76,000, that three of the company's managers are female, that cars are diagnosed by factory trained technicians with aid of computers, that the paint matching in the collision repair center is a science more than an art and that customers are greeted at the door by his grandson Harry's yellow lab, Shirley.

He would not be surprised that what started with his fascination with wheels over eight decades ago was developed into a multigenerational family business with more than sixty employees who continue to serve the automotive needs of Western North Carolina. Harry's message to his family- "Work hard, treat your customers and employees fairly, and always give back to your community"- is still heard at Harry's On The Hill.

Grocery co-op hosts potluck supper to celebrate opening of Haywood Road Market

Organizers of the new Haywood Road Market in West Asheville have been saying for months that it will be a true community grocery oriented to serving residents of the neighborhood.

And what better way to help launch a new community undertaking than a potluck supper?

That's just what the new grocery co-op's owners — the 220 or so people who have bought shares in the business — are hosting at 5 p.m. today at the nearby West End Bakery.

It will be a time of celebration as well as finalizing last-minute plans for the store to open its doors Saturday.

"It takes most co-ops two years to get funded and up and running, and we've done it in nine months. That's completely due to community support," said Sage Ramsey, who will manage the store.

TIM REID

The Bottom Line

About 25 people have been volunteering their labor each weekend for five weeks to help get the store ready for opening.

And that's just a small part of the effort that has gone into creating a store by and for the residents of West Asheville, Ramsey said.

"Our members got together and raised $60,000," she said. "That's in loans of $500 to $10,000 to help pay the capital costs of getting started."

The opportunity for a community grocery opened up when Go Grocery Outlet vacated its longtime space in the old Bledsoe Building on Haywood Road, leaving its equipment, freezers, cash registers, etc.

West Asheville Development, which is remodeling the building for several new tenants, could have developed the space for any type of commercial use but saw it as an opportunity to foster a true community grocery, she said.

The new store will be open to the general public like any other grocery, Ramsey said.

People who buy memberships, which cost $75 for an individual or $135 per household, will receive a discount at the cash register. Members also have the option of volunteering eight to 12 hours per month in order to get a 10 percent discount.

People at the French Broad Food Co-op have been very gracious in advising the new co-op development about policies and procedures, Ramsey said. The new store will be similar to French Broad in its emphasis on organic produce, bulk items and basic foods, she said.

Anyone is welcome to attend the meeting today and bring a covered dish, Ramsey said. Memberships in the co-op are still available.

The new store is just part of the good things happening in West Asheville, Ramsey said, as new businesses join long-established ones and more people discover the area's affordable housing and pleasant neighborhoods.

"I see a revival happening in West Asheville," she said. "I see the neighborhood coming together. I see people walking down the street knowing everybody. This is a great place to live."

Asheville's first OrganicFest opens Saturday

Asheville Citizen
September 20, 2002

By Melissa Williams
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — Buying organic food is like buying health insurance, says Debi Athos, a mother of five.

She credits a lifetime of "pure foods" with keeping her brood out of sick =beds and doctors' offices.

Now Athos has joined with local volunteers and farmers to host the city's first OrganicFest — a celebration of organic farming, food and fibers from 1 to 7 p.m. Saturday at City-County Plaza.

"This will be the first organic festival on the East Coast," said Athos, co-founder of Pure Food Partners, a volunteer nonprofit group that works to educate people on the controversy surrounding genetically engineered foods.

Genetic engineering is often used to extend food shelf life — such as adding fish genes to tomatoes — and has increased the yields of many foods in starving areas of the world. But it's also been called "Frankenfood" by people concerned about its possible effects on the human body, including birth defects, cancer and allergic reactions.

OrganicFest will highlight products grown free of engineering, irradiation and pesticides. It will also include entertainment by artists such as Dana Robinson and BenJammin', plus face painting and storytelling for children.

Athos said organic food may often cost more than other food, but most people can afford to add it to their diet if they know where and when to shop.

"Buying at tailgate markets directly from farmers and buying in season is a great option," she said.

Sometime-farmer Charlie Jackson, projects coordinator for the Appalachian Sustainable Agricultural Project, said farmers in Buncombe and Madison counties are planting more organic crops to help keep their farms afloat.

"Buying locally keeps us connected with local farms and lets people know we value having those farms in our landscape," Jackson said.

John Coutlakis/
STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Cat Noxon, a manager at the Haywood Road Market cooperative, waters the store's organic produce display Thursday. Co-op members and staff support organic goods, and many plan to attend Asheville's first OrganicFest from 1 to 7 p.m. Saturday at City-County Plaza. The event will promote and celebrate organic farming, food and goods.

And the local community has been hungry for more organic options, according to Cat Noxon, a manager at the Haywood Road Market cooperative in West Asheville. She said the main thing residents lobbied for at the new market was organic produce, and the market currently buys about a third of its produce locally.

"The organic market is consumer-driven," Athos said. "So we really have to let stores know we want and deserve this high-quality food choice."

Owner Discount Increased to 5%

After a successful trial period in October, the Haywood Road Market Board of Directors decided in November to raise the basic owner discount from 2% to 5%. That is quite the bargain for a one-time member fee of $75! Worker-Owners are now eligible for up to a 15% discount.

This is one of many changes Haywood Road Market has seen since opening its doors on August 24, 2002. Your community market has a new general manager, new products, a new look, lower prices over all and lots of new members.
West Asheville s newest market is slowly but surely growing and improving.

Worker-Owner Program Changes

We have slightly changed our working owner program so folks can work as little as four hours a month to earn an extra discount on their purchases. Individuals can work four hours a month for an additional 5% discount or eight hours a month for an additional 10% discount. Non-owners can also work up to four hours a month. Ask for details next time your in the Market and check out the job opens list at the check out area. A little time can lead to big savings.

Very Special Thanks

We wish to extend a heartfelt thanks to Craig White who has been President of our Board of Directors this past year. His term ends this January. Craig will be missed. He has been a valuable President, owner, community member, and friend.

Super-Special thanks go to Sage Ramsey and Elfy Kornfeld for all of their hard work in getting the Market started when it was all just a sparkle in our eyes. They made Haywood Road Market a reality by jumping right in when no one else could. They put the Market first and remained dedicated - day and night, utilizing a large quantity of their own time and resources. Thanks for a great job. The Market wouldn t be here without you.

Kona Inn Banana Bread

(Makes 2 loaves, 8 servings each)
Preheat oven to 350° Fahrenheit

6 very ripe and soft medium bananas
2-1/2 cups of all purpose flour
2 tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. salt
2 cups sugar
1 cup canola oil
4 large eggs, at room temperature
1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts, optional

1. Position a rack in the center of the oven and preheat to 350 degrees Fahrenheit. Lightly butter and flour two 8-1/2 x 4-1/2 inch loaf pans, tapping out the excess flour.

2. Mash the bananas in a medium bowl with a potato masher or fork until smooth, with a few pea-sized lumps. You should have about 2 cups.

3. Sift the flour, baking soda, and salt into a medium bowl.

4. In a large bowl, using a rubber spatula, mix the sugar and shortening well to make a stiff, gritty paste, about 1 minute. One at a time, beat in the eggs, mixing well after each addition until the egg is absorbed. Mix in the mashed bananas until well combined. Stir in the walnuts, if using. (Don t worry if the mixture looks curdled.) Add the flour mixture and stir just until blended. Don t overmix or be concerned about a few small lumps. Spread the batter evenly into prepared pans.

5. Bake until a long wooden skewer comes out clean and the batter in the cracks on top of the breads looks cooked, about 1 hour.

6. Transfer to a wire cooling rack and cool in the pans for 15 minutes. Run a knife around the inside of the pans to loosen the loaves. Protecting your hands with a kitchen towel, hold a pan in one hand and invert the loaf out into the palm of your other hand. Place right side up on the rack. Repeat with the other loaf and cool completely. (The breads can be baked up to 3 days ahead, cooled completely, wrapped in plastic wrap, and stored at room temperature.)

Organicfest to feature naturally grown foods, music, family fun

By Judy Ausley
CITIZEN-TIMES CORRESPONDENT

ASHEVILLE — Want to get new ideas for living naturally?

The second annual Pure Food Partners Organicfest, celebrating everything organic, will be from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday at City-County Plaza in downtown Asheville.

"This is going to be much greater than last year, we have more vendors and more entertainment planned for the entire family, it will be a funfest as well as organicfest," said coordinator Debi Athos.

The month of September is National Organic Month and the Asheville event is one of many that will take place in cities all over the country. Organic farmers in the region will be demonstrating the pluses for growing and eating organically grown products. Demonstrations about everything from organic flowers gardens, organic baked breads and organically grown apples will be featured among the more than 40 vendors expected to participate in this year's event.

Live music, a salsa street dance, clown show, organic clothing booths, arts and crafts tents, lots of musical entertainment and environmental speakers will be featured during the Saturday event. The event's mission, according to Athos, is to promote the many organic products in the region, from food and fibers to organically-grown Christmas trees. The organic food industry is one of the fastest growing industries in the country and the Western North Carolina region.

"Our area is filled with wonderful new organic farms with families bonding in harmony with nature every day," Athos said. "These mountain's backroads in Buncombe, Madison and Yancey counties are full of quaint organic growers producing everything from blueberries to natural soaps."

Some of the local and regional farms involved in this year's event will include Glen Ayre Tree Farm, Warren Wilson College Farm, Red Moon Herbs, Windy Ridge Farms and Blue Hill Farm. Organic food and beverages will be available during the day provided by Asheville restaurants including Rosettas Kitchen, Earth Fare and Lifestyle Breads. Speakers and co-sponsors for the event will include representatives of Carolina Farm Stewardship Association, Natural Lifestyles, Earth Fare, French Broad Food Co-op, Tree Huggin' Treats, Jubliee! and Earth Team. Entertainers include the Pinelli Family, Sue Ford & Xtreme, Dreamweb, Losgringos Salseros and Salsa Dance.

"This is a wonderful time for all of us who prefer living our lives naturally to get together, learn new methods for growing food from each other and using it in our homes while teaching our children the importance of having truly healthy lifestyles," said Dana organic grower, Melinda Hill, who will be participating in this year's festival.

There is no admission fee for the festival. For more information about the event, visit www.organicfest.org or celebrate@organicfest.org. Athos can be reached at 253-2267.

Hazel Green Mills.

Mr. A. E. Clarke, superintendent of the above excellent mills, located in West Asheville, informs us that new rollers are being added to the mills with purifyers, new cloths, etc., in fact a complete new outfit, making the mills equal to the best in the country. The owner, Mr. W. E. Logan, is determined to equip his mills throughout with the latest and best machinery for the best work. The work of improvement goes steadily on throughout our section.

ROAD BUILDING IN WEST ASHEVILLE

A force of the convicts are at work cutting a new road from the old Henry house near Smith's bridge and west of the river, to a point near where the Hazel Green mill stood. The building of this road will open up the Henry Property which for twenty years has been entailed, but recently a clear title was obtained and the property is now in the hands of real-estate dealers and has been divided into lots and quite a number already sold.

Hotel undergoes major face-lift

Great Smokies Holiday Inn SunSpree reopens as Crowne Plaza Resort

By Dale Neal
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — The Great Smokies Holiday Inn SunSpree gets a new name next week after a multimillion dollar face-lift to the Asheville resort.

Crowne Plaza Resort-Asheville, the first of its kind in North Carolina, will hold a grand reopening Wednesday, welcoming visitors to the city's second largest hotel with its 306 guest rooms.

"We wanted to give the public an affordable alternative to the Grove Park Inn (Asheville's largest hotel) with an 18-hole golf course, refurbished tennis courts and oversized guests rooms all within a mile of Asheville, but at affordable rates," said Dennis Hulsing, the president and CEO.

Crowne Plaza Hotels & Resorts is an upscale brand of Intercontinental Hotel Group, which also owns the Holiday Inn SunSpree chain.

Hulsing paid $9.1 million last year for the SunSpree near the Interstate 240 and Patton Avenue interchange. He also owns the Holiday-Inn Airport and Best Western Asheville-Biltmore under Hulsing Hotels NC Inc.

"We've completely gutted the property," Hulsing said. "Every ounce of square footage from the exterior to the interior has been transformed," he said, including the roofing, boilers and chillers, and inside the room, mattresses, carpet, drapes, lighting and bathroom counters.

Hulsing declined to give an exact figure for the renovation.

A multimillion dollar renovation of the Great Smokies Holiday Inn SunSpree — which next week will be known as Crowne Plaza Resort-Asheville — includes the refurbishing of rooms at the resort like the one pictured here.

The hotel now offers 306 rooms, including 29 villas along the golf course, which were originally developed as timeshare units 20 years ago. Hulsing plans to add an indoor swimming pool and fitness center later this year.

"The Crowne Plaza is a nice flag to add to the mix of properties in Asheville," said Marla Tambellini of the Asheville Convention and Visitors Bureau. "Crowne Plaza caters to a slightly more affluent visitor and the resort will meet the continued demand in this area for upscale properties."

In 1975, Wayne Kinser developed the property as the Asheville Hilton with 280 guest rooms on a 120-acre tract just a mile from downtown. In 1994, the name was changed to Holiday Inn SunSpree Resort. Kinser died in 2003 just before the hotel was sold to Hulsing.

Opening celebration

The Crowne Plaza Resort-Asheville will have a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday in front of the hotel. Tours of the renovated rooms will be from 5 to 7:30 p.m. during a celebration in the Overlook Ballroom. For information, call 254-3211.

It's 'all in the family' at this furniture store

YOUR BUSINESS NEIGHBORHOOD

For nearly 60 years, Home Furniture has been a familiar fixture among the businesses dotting Haywood Road in West Asheville. The Weddle/Nichols family has owned and operated the business since 1933.

Tim Nichols, grandson of the original proprietor, A.C. Weddle, currently manages the three-level store at 797 Haywood Road.

Sofas, loveseats, bedding and accessories appear at every turn throughout the 10,000 square-foot space. Matching art pieces, homey throw blankets, flowers and plants compliment each furniture group, lending ideas to customers making decorating decisions.

The luxurious surroundings are a far cry from the 2,000-square-foot store Weddle started with during the Depression, Nichols said. The original store space on Herron Avenue had a dirt floor basement, he added.

"We're the oldest business, yet we're the newest," said Nichols of maintaining current styles and trends. "You can't stand still."

Weddle took a gamble, said Nichols, when he decided to open up a business smack in the middle of the Depression. But Weddle's years as a manager with Sturkey Furniture gave him the experience to make a success out of the store.

"He started it with a $2,000 life insurance policy," said Nichols.

Wartime presented problems in that most folks couldn't afford to buy new furniture, so Weddle made profits from reconditioning used pieces.

Nichols' father, Paul, worked alongside his father-in-law for a number of years at both the original location and in the store's present location.

Now, though, Nichols' father acts as adviser.

Family businesses, according to Nichols, are a "dying breed," largely because of chain operations.

"The chains can many times gang up on you. Their buying volumes make a big difference," he said. Although, with the Rowe Furniture and Sealey City programs, Home Furniture has been able to compete with the bigger stores.

By selling those two lines exclusively, Nichols said the store can receive special attention from either manufacturer – as well as the benefits of being one of the only furniture stores that sells those lines.

"Even though I'm a little business, I have the buying volume of (a chain-operated store). We've had a 22 percent increase this year. We did as much in sales in June during a recession year as we did in the year 1986," he said.

Nichols attributes the store's success to the eight-member staff and their professional work attitudes.

Nichols complaints roll in Nearly 100 furniture store customers lodge grievances

By Mark Barrett
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — Complaints kept coming in Thursday to a local agency from customers who said they were hurt by the unexpected closing of longtime local business Nichols Home Furniture.

The local office of the Better Business Bureau had taken 92 closure-related complaints from Nichols customers by Thursday afternoon, President Norma Messer said.

Some said they had not received furniture they had paid for, some said they had gotten some furniture but were still missing pieces of a matching set and some had other problems, she said.

Nichols had been in business in the area for 73 years and had three Asheville stores until closing recently. Tim Nichols, president of the family owned business, said Tuesday the company has more than $500,000 in debt and will not reopen.

Local attorney William Loose said he is preparing a bankruptcy filing for the company.

In a typical case, a trustee would be appointed to oversee the liquidation of the company's assets and to notify creditors, Loose said. If there is some money left over to be distributed, "Then the creditors will share in some fashion, in a proportionate share of what they're owed," he said.

Loose said he does not know how a trustee would handle things if there were furniture in Nichols' warehouse that has been paid for but not delivered.

To file a complaint

The Asheville office of the Better Business Bureau is taking complaints about Nichols Home Furniture. Call 253-2392 or visit www.asheville.bbb.org.

"This case will not be easy to administer. There's a lot of things to get unwound," he said.

Messer called the number of complaints "larger than usual. Normally if a store goes out of business it's in a more orderly fashion."

She said the BBB has been unable to reach anyone with Nichols and that there is not much her organization, which serves 16 Western North Carolina counties, can do for customers other than notify them when it is time to press their claims in bankruptcy court.

Kristin Mills of Swannanoa is still waiting to have a housewarming after moving into her home June 1 because, she says, some furniture she ordered from Nichols in April never arrived.

Mills said she did get a couch from Nichols but a matching chair and love seat never came. The purchases were financed, she said, so she isn't out any money, "just a lot of aggravation."

"Now I have a couch that I'm not able to return and it's part of a set," she said.

PLAN NEW BUILDING IN WEST ASHEVILLE

Construction Will Start Within Next Few Days According to Announcement by G. A. Shieder; New Store Planned.

Plans for the construction of a new brick building at the entrance to Horney Heights, in West Asheville, were announced yesterday by G. A. Shieder in connection with the establishment of a new drug store.

Mr. Shieder has operated the West Asheville Pharmacy near the center of the business section west of the river for several years and the announcement that he contemplates the establishment of a second drug store to take care of the trade of this section of the city will be received with interest.

Guy E. Brookshire, well known druggist of this city, will be in partnership with Mr. Shieder and will be in charge of the new establishment as manager, it was stated.

Work on the new building will start within the next few days, it was stated.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., THURSDAY MORNING, JANUARY 1, 1931

THREE MASKED BANDITS HOLD UP DRUG STORE

Horney Heights Place Robbed Of $200 By Three Armed Men.

FIVE PEOPLE IN STORE AT TIME

Police Believe White Men Blacked Faces For Bold Holdup

Three masked bandits, armed with a Winchester rifle and two .38 calibre revolvers, last nigh held up the Horney Heights Drug Store, 1288 Haywood Road and escaped with $200 in currency taken from the cash register.

Dr. E. E. Brookshire, manager, and five other persons were in the store when the bandits entered, shouting a command to "stick 'em up." Dr. Brookshire and other employes of the store and customers complied with the bandit's orders. Two members of the band herded the six persons into the rear of the store, made them face the wall, as the third member rifled the cash register.

Dr. Brookshire last night stated that he made two attempts to secure a pistol which was concealed under a nearby counter and two of the bandits warned him that a third attempt to secure the pistol would result in death.

Warned Victims

Warning his victims to remain standing with their faces to the wall for five minutes after their departure, the bandits left the store. Dr. Brookshire informed police officers that he did not hear a motor start after the bandits left and that he believed they were not traveling in an auto.

F. J. Austin, F. J. Austin, Jr., S. G. Wood, Hal Franklin and Bill Jacobs, the latter two employes of the store were in the establishment when the bandits entered. Opinions differed as to the color of the bandits. Dr. Brookshire insisted the bandits were white men with their faces blackened. He was supported in this by one of the customers in the store. Others contended the men were negroes.

Five members of the Asheville police department answered the call from the drug store and for more than an hour searched that vicinity for traces of the bandits. At an early hour this morning no arrests had been made.

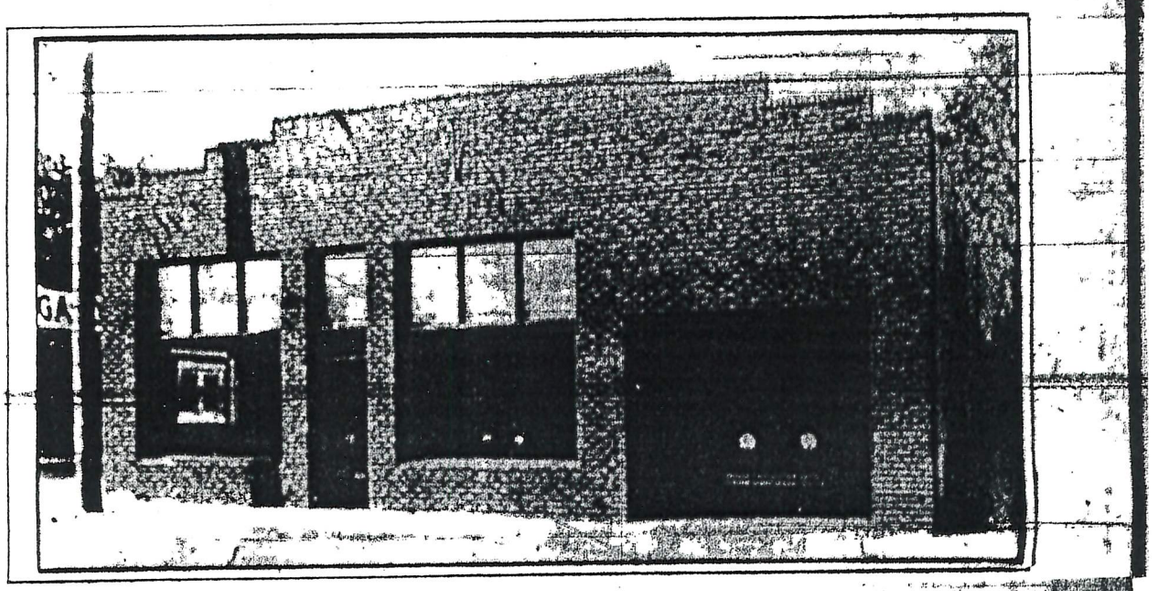
Believe in West Asheville



Our Pledge

We believe in the future greatness of West Asheville. We confidently believe that within the short space of a few years West Asheville will be twice its present size.

With the erection of our fine new building we have undertaken a large financial responsibility. May it serve to assure every person in West Asheville that we are here to help this community grow and grow with it.

It shall ever be our duty to offer to the best of our ability a service and a product that will make a permanent and outstanding success justified.

Today's Greatest Buy in a Car!

HUDSON

Based on limited output, Hudson prices would have to be advanced many hundreds of dollars. That is why you nowhere find comparable quality, performance, and reliability. The exclusive Super-Six principle has given more than ten years of mechanical supremacy. In everything that counts—fine workmanship, materials, riding ease and smoothness—prices can buy no more.

The Coach now delivers at your door for $1225

ESSEX

In the low priced field Essex shares all of Hudson's honors—in design, quality, workmanship and riding ease. For little more than low-priced "Fours" you can get six-cylinder performance—smoothness and good looks. Price—low first payment and easy terms make it easy to own. Why be content with less?

Delivered at your door for $830

In pledging our good will to the citizens of West Asheville we wish to emphasize that we are going to maintain the very best of service for Hudson and Essex owners.

We have at our command the best mechanics available. Our new shop equipment will make possible only the best of repair work.

By reason of our facilities for handling repair work we shall also give service to any distressed motor besides a Hudson or Essex.

IDEAL DRUG STORE

The Ideal Drug Store of 733 Haywood Road in West Asheville was purchased in 1954 by L. G. Crouch, owner and operator. Mr. Crouch's friends and customers will remember him from his previous employment at Goode's and Eckerd's Drug Store on Haywood Street, and from his activities in certain community affairs.

Ideal Drug Store has professional Pharmacists on duty at all time. The firm features a complete soda fountain service as well as a sundry department selling famous brand merchandise, ideal for Christmas gifts.

CROUCH

Although the company is dedicated to serving West Asheville's medical needs, they offer city-wide delivery at no extra charge. Their motto, which has entrusted them to their customers for over six years, is: "You can depend on us the same as your doctor does." There is a large free parking lot in the rear of the store for customers' use at all times, as well cation on this weekly page.

'SUPER-STORE' IS PLANNED IN WEST ASHEVILLE

Excavation Work Under Way For $30,000 Building

Establishment of Asheville's first "super-store" and plans for the construction in West Asheville of a $30,000 building to house it were announced here yesterday.

Excavation already is under way at Haywood road and Louisiana avenue for the building and plans call for its completion by April 1, 1940. A five-year lease on the new building has been obtained for the operation of a super-service store as a subsidiary of the Dixie Home Stores company of Greenville, S. C.

Superstores are now being operated in seven North Carolina and two South Carolina towns by chain store concerns. Reports have been current here for some time that one or more chains planned the establishment of a super-store here.

The building, which will be 75 feet by 110 feet, is being erected by the City Investment corporation on a portion of the Gwyn Edwards estate. The building will have a 15-foot ceiling, with the roof supported by steel arches, and will have a concrete floor.

It is being built on a lot fronting 168 feet on Haywood road with a 150-foot depth. The size of the building will allow considerable parking space both behind and at the sides of the super-store.

The super-store, which will be operated on a self-service, cash-and-carry plan, will be known as the Ideal Super market.

ATTEMPT MADE TO LOOT SAFE

Offices Of Life Insurance Company Entered By Yeggmen

Police last night were making an investigation of the attempted safe robbery at the Imperial Life Insurance office, 32 West College street. Nothing of value was taken.

Two small holes were drilled in the door of the safe Thursday night. One of the holes was a quarter of an inch from the combination tumbler box. The safe contained about $800. Other safes in the office, which did not contain money, were not molested.

The insurance offices are on the third story of the building. The front door of the building was "jimmied" and a pass key was used to open a door to the inner office. An electric drill was used to make the holes.

Officers believe the person who drilled the holes became frightened and abandoned his efforts.

A revolver was taken from the office of the American Optical Company, on the second floor of the building. The door to this office was "jimmied." Nothing else was missed from the optical company office.

IMPERIAL LIFE HAD BOOM YEAR

17.5 Per Cent Gain In Business In 1933 Reported

The Imperial Life Insurance company, organized in 1905 with home office in Asheville, reports a banner year in 1933, showing a 17.5 per cent gain in total amount of life insurance in force, increasing their assets over the required reserves, paying all obligations promptly within a 24-hour period, and adding a total of over two and one-half million dollars of life insurance within the twelve-month period.

Operating 19 main district offices and 27 sub-district offices, the Imperial Life covers the state of North Carolina thoroughly, having a field force of 237 representatives covering all territory from Murphy to Manteo.

Officers of the Imperial Life are: Gay Green, president; J. N. Jarrett and Sam Atkinson, vice presidents; A. W. Ek, secretary; J. Warlick; manager; Dr. John A. Watkins, medical director; John H. Coleman, actuary; and Leslie T. New, agency supervisor.

The Imperial Life carries a complete line of ordinary and industrial contracts insuring risks from ages one hour to 65. The Imperial is proud of the fact that all their policy obligations are promptly paid within a period of 24 hours, a service which they feel is greatly appreciated by their many thousands of policyholders throughout the State.

Home offices of the Imperial are located on the second and third floors of the Imperial Life building situated at the corner of College street and Rankin avenue. Twenty-three are employed in the home office. District offices of the Imperial are located in the Imperial Life building fronting on Rankin avenue. E. B. Roberts is district manager, M. M. Ramsey and J. B. Arrington, superintendents; Miss Edith Garner, cashier. There is a field force of 13 representatives in the Asheville district or agency.

The theater is air-conditioned and is heated with a furnace equipped with an automatic stoker. The lounge and the mens' and ladies' rooms are modern in every respect.

The design of both the interior and exterior is modernistic, and provides an unusual variety of color.

The Isis theater will operate on the basis of one matinee and two night shows on five week-days and on Saturday will show continuously after 1 p. m. The Palace theater operated in West Asheville for a number of years, will continue to be used on Saturdays and other days for special showings.

It is planned by the management to provide West Asheville with a variety of entertainment, particularly on Saturdays. One of the theaters will offer western entertainment, while the other will have some other type of show.

Carl R. Bamford, general manager of the Publix-Bamford concern, was in Charlotte during the past week arranging booking for the Isis and Palace theaters, as well as the other theaters in Asheville, which are operated by the same concern.

Howard H. Jackson is manager of the Isis and Palace theaters. Mr. Jackson has prior to this time been employed by the Publix-Bamford concern at the Plaza theater and in Canton.

The Isis theater is located on Haywood road between the intersections with Dunwell avenue and Herron avenue. The Palace theater is located on Haywood road just beyond the intersection with Mildred avenue.

W. Asheville's Only Theater Is Shut Down

Permanent closing of the Isis Theater on Haywood Road, only movie house in West Asheville was announced yesterday by Frank LaBar Jr., district manager of Publix Bamford Theaters.

LaBar declined to make any statement on reasons for closing the Isis beyond saying that there are no plans for reopening the theater.

Publix Bamford also operates the Imperial and Paramount movie theaters here. LaBar said operation of the two remaining theaters will be continued.

Theater Was 'A Little Gaudy, But Quite Nice'

By SUSAN GAMBRELL
Staff Writer So. Neigh 9-21-88

It was considered "modernistic" — a wonder in its time. It had air-conditioning and a furnace equipped with an automatic stoker. And the bathrooms, well, they were "modern in every respect," according to management of the old Isis Theater on Haywood road in West Asheville.

"A little gaudy, but quite nice," is how Roy Gibbs described the old Isis Theater at 745 Haywood Road, which is now the site of the Daisy Queen.

Gibbs managed the Isis when the 800-seat motion picture theater first opened its doors at 2:45 p.m. Dec. 27, 1937. Its first motion picture was "Varsity Show," starring Dick Powell and Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians.

Most memorable to people today is the theater building's grand marquee, still erect but coming down soon. The theater kept the 27-foot marquee brilliantly lighted, according to the late Carl R. Bamford, organizer and president of Publix-Bamford Theaters Inc.

Within a couple of weeks, that marquee will be as much a part of history as the theater itself, which closed in November 1957. It was the only theater in West Asheville.

Some people attribute its closing to parking problems. Others say the grand cinema just didn't get enough business.

"We're planning to put up a 38-foot awning with a 5-foot overhang," said Parnell Carter, owner of the Model Barber Shop next door and co-owner of the building which has housed the Daisy Queen for the past 10 years.

"Everybody's talking about why we're taking it down," Carter said. "It's rotting. We're going too have to take it down or spend money to repair it. We decided to make it look like a business building instead of an old theater building.

"It's been hanging there 50 years, so I guess a lot of people will talk about it," Carter said. "It should be an improvement."

The 75 parking spaces behind the Daisy Queen provide free parking for West Asheville customers, Carter said. In 1964, he and other business people got together and bought the building.

"A whole group of us got together and chipped in and bought it in order to keep free parking in West Asheville," Carter said.

Luke Atkinson, owner of Atkinson Furniture Company down the street, said he'll miss the marquee which now flashes "Daisy Queen" in tattered lettering.

"That old marquee's been up there so long some people are attached to it," Atkinson said. He remembers the Isis as a pretty fancy place to go on a Saturday. It was a place to "pass away the time," he said.

"Gosh, it's been so doggone long ago, I just forgot all about it," he said.

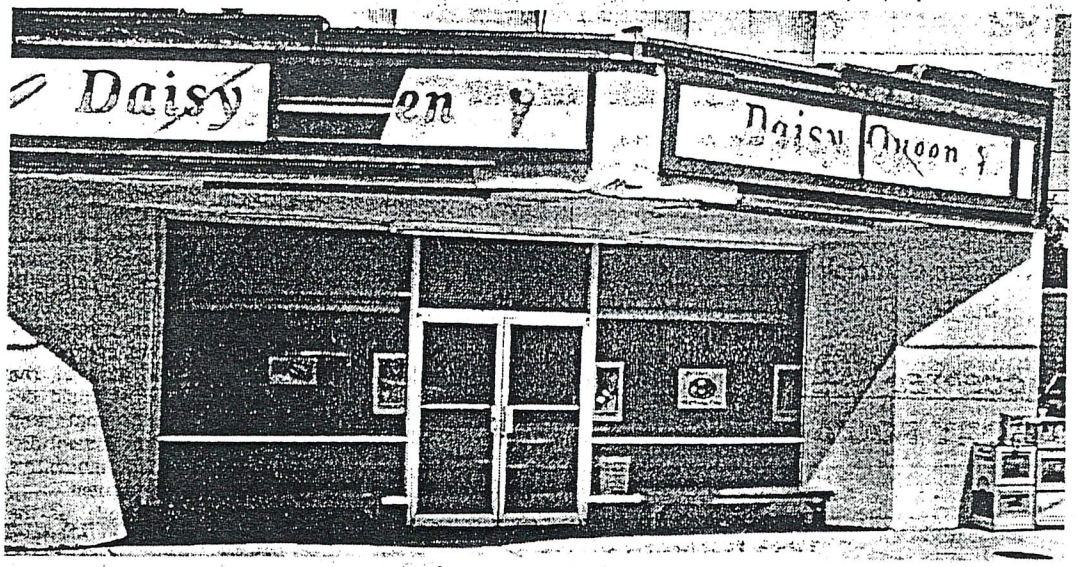
The Isis cost $75,000 to build and was modern for its time. It featured a lobby section extending 100 feet to the auditorium, which was 175 feet deep and 89 feet wide.

The theater had microphonic sound equipment and lounges for both men and women. The lobby featured a decorative tile floor.

"It was pretty then," Carter said. "There was a booth out front, velvet down the sides and across the stage. It was an old-timey theater."

Gibbs, who was the Isis's first manager and also managed the Plaza Theater for 25 years, remembers it as a "nice little theater" but "It didn't do so well businesswise."

The crumbling marquee, like a fading movie queen, is the last visible reminder of the once-grand Isis Theater.



OLD THEATER — The marquee of the former Isis Theater, a once-grand cinema built in 1937. It will be replaced with a white awning. Daisy Queen on Haywood Road hangs from the

Big Savings On New DuMonts And Emersons At Jack's TV

Jack Couch, owner-manager of Jack's TV and Appliance Co., 495 Haywood Road, West Asheville reports sales of new Emerson and DuMont TV's were exceptionally high during past month. He attributes this to the thirty to forty dollars advance in price to be made soon on all television sets when the new ruling goes into effect requiring sets to have UHF.

JACK COUCH

At present Jack's TV has a good selection of brand new Emerson and DuMont Portables, Consoles and Hi-Fi-Radio-TV combinations in stock but reports that all his next shipments of TVs will probably be priced $30 to $40 higher. The firm also has Emerson and DuMont Stereos and radios of outstanding quality and priced to suit your budget.

Another specialty of Jack's TV is Channel Master radios and antennas. They sell, service and install car radios and television antennas. If you are not now receiving CBS Channel 7, since the channel's recent improvement, Jack's TV will install for you a Channel 7 Channel Master antenna on your present antenna post, for $19.95. They have lightning arresters priced from 98c. Jack Couch says, "Many television owners could save themselves a large repair bill from damage to their TV sets caused by lightning with the installation of these lightning arresters."

Convenient terms are available at Jack's TV on any television set, Hi-Fi or radio you select, or you may purchase it through your 1st Union Charge Plan. Exceptionally good trade-in allowances are given you at Jack's TV and Appliance Co.

Jack's TV and Appliance Co. has Norge electric ranges, washers, and dryers. The firm also sells electric water heaters and vacuum cleaners. Hours at Jack's TV are from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Their phone is AL 2-6182.

G. R. LACKEY BUYS JAX-PAX STORES FROM EBBS BROTHERS

G. R. Lackey, of Sylva, has purchased the group of six Jax-Pax stores in Asheville from Cauley J. and Plato Ebbs, it was announced Wednesday. Mr. Lackey, who has been county farm agent in Jackson county for twelve years, took charge of the stores this week. The new owner, who will make his home on Westwood Place, West Asheville, said that the Jax-Pax stores will continue to operate under the same policies as in the past, and that managers and other help would not be changed. The two Jax-Pax stores in West Asheville, 401 and 703 Haywood road, were involved in the sale.

Mr. Lackey has been engaged in merchandising for a number of years, operating a retail dry goods at Taylorsville and another at Granite Falls.

The Jax-Pax stores have been under management of the Ebbs brothers for the past 17 years. The grocery chain was organized by Packer Smith. The Cody Realty Company negotiated the deal by which the Jax-Pax stores were transferred to Mr. Lackey.

No business plans for the future have been completed by the Ebbs brothers, who January 1 sold their wholesale grocery department to the Thomas and Howard Company, of Greenville, S. C.

The West Asheville News February 2, 1945

WE — — the Retailers and Consumers of America — are in the very front lines of the greatest battle on the home front . . . the fight against inflation.

This week, patriotic women throughout Western Carolina will be working in the interest of our government's "Home Front Pledge Campaign," the idea being to make us all more price conscious, to rally our fullest support behind the government's anti-inflation regulations — however difficult, trying and confusing they may have proved to be.

The Jax-Pax organization is definitely and wholeheartedly committed to this price-program and we ask your enthusiastic cooperation in making it a real and lasting success—to the end that final victory in the war can be achieved without weakening our business structure and threatening the peace that follows victory.

If we win this battle, as we must, the others that follow will be just tha much easier and earlier.

ASHEVILLE – Krispy Kreme doughnuts have been a well-kept Southern secret since 1937.

A few years ago, makers of the glazed delights started sharing the secret by building 130 stores in 17 states, including New York, St. Louis, Omaha, Neb., Las Vegas and California.

Continuing to spread the wealth, the Winston-Salem company announced last week it is considering an underwritten initial public offering of shares of its common stock.

Company officials said they plan to file registration papers for the possible public offering during the fourth quarter of this year and to complete the offering in early 2000.

The McAleer family owns 50 percent of the company. The local franchise is owned by Sam Moore and operated by his son, Robert.

Last year Krispy Kreme announced it wanted to build 400 stores in five years. However, Asheville will be unaffected by the expansion.

"At this time there are no plans to build another Krispy Kreme in Asheville," said Marcie Snell, assistant manager in Asheville. "We are still remodeling the store on Patton Avenue and plan to upgrade the machinery, which is over 20 years old."

Leonard Kaminski of Leicester enjoyed a lemon-filled doughnut with his coffee Tuesday – a weekly treat, he said.

"I've been coming here the last couple of years. I usually come once a week," Kaminski said. "I've been eating Krispy Kreme doughnuts for a long time."

The Krispy Kreme located on Tunnel Road near Asheville Mall was demolished a few years ago to make way for an intersection.

The Patton Avenue doughnut shop, which opened April 29, 1979, is the only one left in Asheville.

Snell said the Asheville shop is the only Krispy Kreme in Western North Carolina. It produces 57,600 doughnuts a day and supplies most local grocery stores and 22 convenience stores. The doughnuts are delivered from Banner Elk to parts of Georgia, she said.

The company started putting doughnuts in convenience stores about nine months ago. Snell said it has been a successful selling technique and a good way to expand the local business.

The true believer can also buy Krispy Kreme T-shirts, mugs and whole bean coffee.

Since 1987, Krispy Kreme's annual sales have nearly doubled from $114.2 million to $203.3 million.

Hola, La Hacienda

While saying goodbye to Dolores and Jose was hard, saying hello to La Hacienda is a tasty treat.

DINING OUT

By Susan Parke
CITIZEN-TIMES CORRESPONDENT

ASHEVILLE — When Dolores and Jose gave up their place on Haywood Road after 20 years of homey Mexican food, many diners felt bereft. The place had become an institution and those are always hard to lose.

However, no need for despair. I just checked out the new restaurant, La Hacienda, and it is excellent. It is owned by two couples — Carlos and Nancy Padilla and Alberto and Alejandra Padilla. The Padilla brothers hail from Mexico City. The family and the servers are friendly and welcoming, as are the two cooks: Jose Alvarado from Baja, Calif., and Teresa Vidal Arroyo from Puebla, Mexico. And the food they are sending out of their kitchen is pretty good.

Once again, I took my guests the Brits with me for their first taste of Mexican fare. They loved it. We started out with the traditional chips and salsa, plus a side of the extra-hot sauce. Both were fresh and very tasty. Those of us that were old enough (it's been years since anyone asked me for my ID) had a Pacifico cerveza (beer) with a slice of lime.

The menu is significantly larger now and the choices are varied. There is a children's menu and a vegetarian one as well. We picked a number of dishes so that we could try out lots of tastes. Between us we ordered the Alambre Especial la Hacienda (grilled steak and seasoned pork with sautéed onions, bell pepper, topped with melted Monterey jack cheese); Enchilados Rancheros (cheese enchiladas with special sauce); Chicken Fajitas (broiled, marinated chicken with sautéed squash, zucchini, onions, bell peppers); and Chicken with Mole Sauce and Enchiladas Poblanas (chicken enchiladas served with mole sauce, onions and cheese). Everything was accompanied by rice and refried beans, and most menu items had lettuce, tomato and guacamole as well.

Word has it that the tamales and the chiles rellenos (both homemade) are terrific. I tried to get side orders of both of these, but unfortunately on this occasion, they were out of both items. They told me, in fact, to call a day before if I wanted one of these menu choices because they take at least a day to prepare. Rather than using canned chiles for the rellenos, Teresa Vidal roasts and peels the peppers individually, stuffs them, batters and fries them and then bakes them in a special sauce. I'm definitely doing back for these.

The Alambre and the fajitas were both big hits. The accompanying rice was moist, the refried beans were creamy and delicious, and the guacamole was wonderful. The only thing that didn't go over well with anyone except me was the mole sauce. I'll have to admit that a good mole (pronounced molay) sauce is an acquired taste. Most moles contain more than 20 ingredients and this one was no exception — it was rich, containing unsweetened chocolate, ground almonds, ground peanuts and a number of different chiles, just to mention a few of the components. I found it to be delectable. The only shortcoming to my chicken dish was that it was not served with lettuce, tomato and guacamole. The lightness and crisp texture of these additions would be a good accompaniment to the richness of the sauce.

All in all, our meal was outstanding. I took all the leftovers home to the Faithful Companion who chowed down for dinner and enjoyed everything thoroughly. One of the best parts of the lunch was the excellent service provided by Juan, who helped us with our Spanish (such as it is), and was endlessly helpful concerning the different sauces and seasonings. He even brought out samples of other sauces so that we could try them out.

La Hacienda has a lunch buffet on Fridays and Saturdays from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m., which readers have told me is great. Good reviews have also come in about their Mexican breakfasts.

They have live music, in Spanish, from 7 until 10 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays.

This is a terrific addition to the Haywood Road area as well as to the Asheville restaurant scene. It is sad to say farewell to Dolores and Jose, but very pleasant to say "Hola" to La Hacienda.

J. L. LAWRENCE REMODELS AND ENLARGES STORE

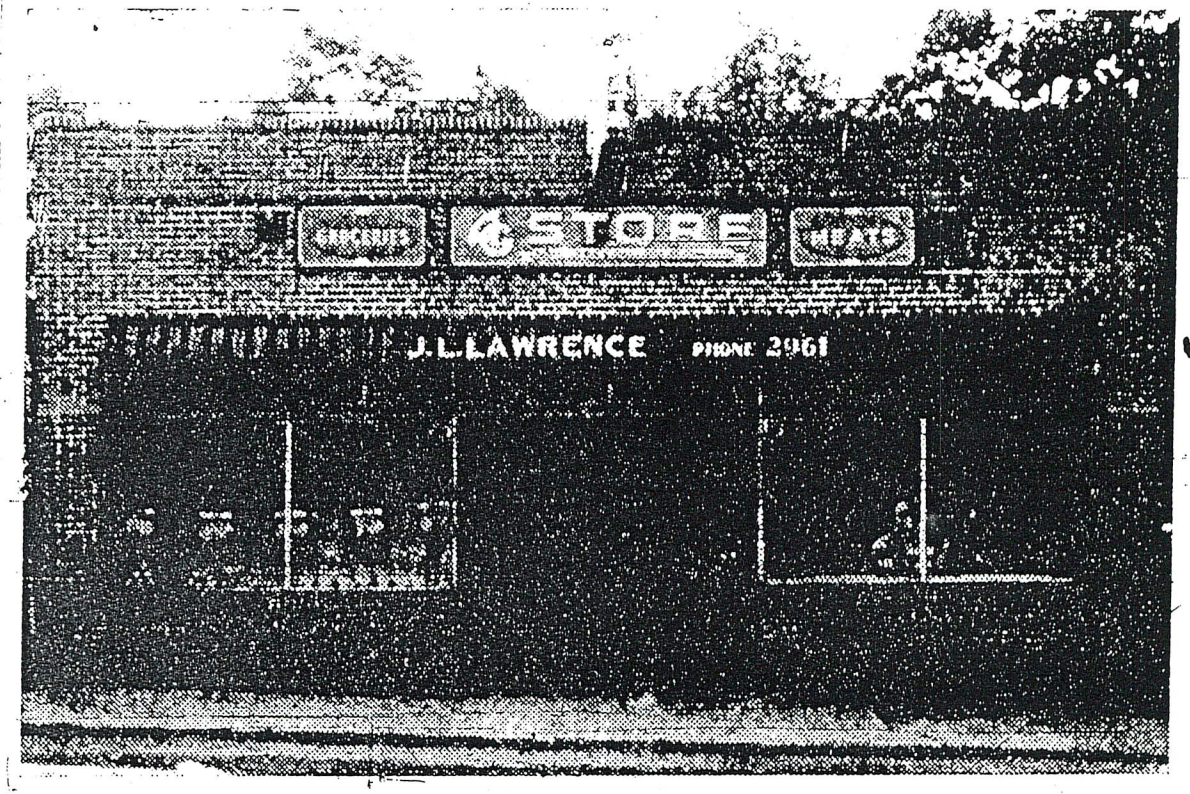
Tonight the J. L. Lawrence Grocery will celebrate the formal opening of their newly remodeled and enlarged store at 219 Haywood road. The public is invited to attend from seven to ten o'clock.

J. L. Lawrence, owner and manager of the J. L. Lawrence Grocery, started in business at his present location in July 1928, in a much smaller building. In the past ten years Mr. Lawrence has increased his business to many times what it originally was, and made his remodeling and enlarging necessary to take care of his increasing business.

His store is now one of the most up to date and modern groceries in Asheville, with all modern equipment. He carries a complete stock of staple and fancy groceries, fruits, vegetables and finest quality meats. He employs four people beside himself in his business and operates a truck delivery service for the convenience of his customers.

J. L. Lawrence Grocery is a member of the A-G Stores and Mr. Lawrence is an official of this organization in Asheville. A-G Stores are locally owned and operated.

New Store Opens On Haywood Road



This handsome new store building houses the enlarged J. L. Lawrence grocery. A formal opening Tuesday night, with the public invited, is planned by Mr. Lawrence, owner and manager.

NO TENDENCY TO HOARD, ACCORDING TO LAWRENCE

So far as his customers are concerned there is no tendency to hoard food items, according to John Lawrence, operator of J. L. Lawrence Grocery at 219 Haywood road, West Asheville. "Patrons seem to be buying what they need, and no more," Mr. Lawrence observed.

"If the consumers continue to use their head and buy wisely and patriotically, there will be enough to go around," Mr. Lawrence continued.

Despite the necessary restrictions on travel facilities, Lawrence's still maintain an efficient and prompt delivery service.

The store is a unit of the A-G system, a cooperative organization of independent merchants. Lawrence's phone number is 2961.

LAWRENCE STORE

John L. Lawrence, who has been operating the AG Food store at 219 Haywood Road since July 12, 1928, sold the store to William Hood, also with many years in the grocery business, to open the Lawrence Realty which will be located next door to the store on Haywood Road.

Mr. Hood, who needs no introduction, took possession of the food store yesterday. He has made Asheville his home since the age of six months when his parents brought him here from Henderson, North Carolina, and received his preparatory education in the city schools.

He began his career in the grocery business at the age of 12, as part time job after school, as delivery boy with Jax Pax.

Upon graduating from school he accepted a position with the Dixie Home Stores, and 17 years later he resigned to go in with Giezentanner grocery and remained with this firm until he purchased his own AG Store at 219 Haywood Road.

His wife, the former Miriam Candler, is also an Asheville girl. Mr. and Mrs. Hood have two children, John Gregory, 8 years of age, will be in the third grade at Newton this coming term. He likes swimming, stamp collecting, and has fup playing with his beautiful Beagle, Shorty. And Paula Jean age four, who likes to play with her dolls.

Mr. and Mrs. Hood are active members of the Christian Missionary Alliance Church. He teaches the Jr. high boys Sunday school class.

John L. Lawrence, now operating the Lawrence Realty at 223 Haywood Road, prior to his opening the above store July 12, 1928 with two crates of cantalopues and 11 watermelons, operated a store at the corner of Waynesville and Tremont in West Asheville from 1921 to 1925. He has also had experience in Real Estate business.

He has been a member of the Calvary Baptist Church since 1912, and teaches the Men's Bible Class now.

BAGWELL OPENS HAYWOOD ROAD EATING PLACE

New West Asheville Refreshment Center Will Have Formal Opening.

Leo's, an unique wayside restaurant and refreshment center, will hold its formal opening at 1043 Haywood road, West Asheville tomorrow and Sunday, Leo H. Bagwell, proprietor, announced.

The new restaurant is located in a grove of trees and sets back from the street far enough to allow plenty of parking space. Curb service to motorists will be a specialty, Mr. Bagwell said.

LEO H. BAGWELL

The dining room of Leo's is made from three of the street cars formerly used by the Carolina Power and Light company on the streets of Asheville. Kitchen and storage space have been built on the back.

The restaurant opened several days ago with an announcement that $15.00 in cash would be paid to the customer suggesting the best name for the new place. R. J. Shook, of Asheville, won the prize with the suggestion of Leo's.

Leo H. Bagwell, the proprietor, is well known in this section. For the past 10 years he was a member of the sales force of the Haverty Furniture company. Prior to joining Haverty's Mr. Bagwell was connected with several restaurants in the eastern part of the state. He also served as steward in several hotels in this state and Virginia.

The restaurant will maintain a complete menu service including all kinds of sandwiches, barbecue, soft drinks and beer.

Women launch organic baby store in West Asheville

Allison Walker, left, Sonja Hernandez and 19-month-old Grover in the play area of The Littlest Birds

When Sonja Hernandez gave birth to her son and uldn't find a store that carried the baby products e wanted, she did what any new mother would do she partnered with a friend and opened her own op.

The Littlest Birds joined the bustling scene on ıywood Road in West Asheville in March, offering ganic clothing, bedding and accessories for infants d toddlers, along with cloth diapers, maternity ›thes, slings and other baby-wearing products, ın-toxic toys and books, and other whimsical and actical equipment for young children.

The shop, co-owned by Hernandez, a potter, and lison Walker, a former nanny, is a longtime dream Hernandez's and something of a fluke for Walker.

"I'd wanted to open a natural baby store for a ıg time, because when Grover (now 19 months d) was born there were tons of great products I ınted, but they were only available online," ernandez said. "And trying to figure out cloth dia- ring online is like trying to learn cooking without ;tove."

Her dream was little more than a fantasy until Walker called one day.

"Allison called me and said she needed a new career," Hernandez said. "I jokingly asked her if she wanted to open a natural baby store. She laughed, and then called me back the next day and said, 'Yes, let's do it!'

The pair, with the help of Hernandez' partner and Grover's father, Joseph Patteson, fixed up the space formerly occupied by Smoker's and Players, "and it took off from there and really manifested itself; it felt like we were just along for the ride,

"We serve everybody in the community on some level," Hernandez said. "The organics are more expensive, but we have the consignment and the gently recycled items, so there's something for everybody's pocketbook."

Hernandez said there has been a high demand for their organic products and cloth diapers, which are a relative rarity for a retail shop in these modern times of disposable diapers.

"A lot of people don't want their children, especially little babies, exposed to the chemicals in non-organic diapers and clothes," Hernandez said. "Some kids have a sensitivity to them, especially in crib products and clothing, and all of our organics are made with low-impact dye. Organics overall are better for the environment and better for children."

The products are also unique, Hernandez said.

"Our clothing is not something you'll see at J.C. Penney or Wal-Mart, and we're very educated about our products," she said. "And we have a lot of toys that are safe, including German toys; overall, Europeans have higher standards for their employees and toy safety."

Connecting with community

The shop itself, in the block on Haywood Road with Pineapple Jack's and Flashback retro furniture store, is a welcoming place with a play area for children and a couch where moms can nurse their babies or take a breather.

"We also periodically offer free classes on subjects like cloth diapering and baby-wearing, things people are interested in but may find overwhelming or intimidating," Hernandez said.

Workers put finishing touches on the new Lowe's building at 95 Smoky Park Highway. It will open Wednesday.

STEVE DIXON/CITIZEN-TIME

New Lowe's opens doors Wednesday

FROM STAFF REPORTS

ASHEVILLE – The traditional "board-cutting" ceremony at 10 a.m. Wednesday will mark the opening of the new Lowe's superstore on Smoky Park Highway.

The 120,000-square-foot store is part of a strip shopping center called Patton Station. It has about 35,000 feet of lawn and garden space and a permanent glass greenhouse. The store will also feature bath accessories, including towels and washcloths.

Following the board cutting, store manager John Mehaffey will present a $1,000 check to Eliada Home for Children.

In addition to Mehaffey, other Lowe's officials attending the ceremony include co-manager Sam Kilby, district manager Dwight Cabiness and regional vice president Frank Beam.

OPENING WEEK EVENTS

The new Lowe's on Smoky Park Highway will open Wednesday. Some of the special events planned this week include:

$1,000 SHOPPING SPREE: Customers 18 and older will be eligible to register for a $1,000 shopping spree at the new Lowe's.

RACE CAR SIMULATOR: Customers can test drive the Lowe's No. 31 NASCAR Winston Cup simulator from 10 a.m. to noon Friday.

WATER TEST: Bring a water sample Friday from 10 a.m. to noon and a Waterboss representative will test it for iron and hardness.

BROKEN FAUCET?: Bring your broken faucet and parts between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. Saturday and a Danco representative will fix it for free.

PINK PANTHER: Sunday, Aug.1, from noon to 6 p.m. get a photo made with the Pink Panther.

STORE HOURS: 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday-Thursday, 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday, 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

The grand opening will continue with safety events held on Saturday, Aug. 7. The first 100 customers will receive Safetyscope Yard & Garden Tips booklets from Homelite.

Lowe's representatives will also be on site to conduct a fire safety patrol from 1 to 1:30 p.m.

Lowe's will open its new store on Tunnel Road in the fall. The Tunnel Road store will be about 150,000 square feet.

Lowe's Companies Inc. is the second largest home improvement retailer in the world, serving over 4 million do-it-yourself retail and commercial business customers weekly through 533 stores in 37 states.

Lowe's is headquartered in North Wilkesboro. The 53-year-old company employs more than 70,000 people.

Man shot at Asheville restaurant

Another charged with shooting girlfriend in face in Weaverville

By Lynde Hedgpeth
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — Police investigated two separate shootings Friday that left two people seriously injured.

A man who was shot several times at Margarita's Town Mexican Grill and Seafood on Friday afternoon was taken to surgery at Mission Hospitals, Asheville police Capt. Tom Aardema said.

A spokeswoman for the Buncombe County Sheriff's Department said the victim in the other shooting, which happened in Weaverville, was not expected to live.

Maria and Humberto Rodriguez bought the Patton Avenue restaurant about a year ago with the goal of turning it into a family Mexican restaurant.

A year and a half ago, two people were killed in a shootout outside the restaurant, which was then the Patton Avenue Pub.

Margarita's Town owners Humberto and Maria Rodriguez wait outside their restaurant as police investigate a shooting inside.

"Since we opened, everything has been fine," Maria Rodriguez said. "People love it."

On Friday afternoon, they waited outside with other employees while police investigated.

Aardema said the shooting followed an argument between two men. A manager warned them to calm down or leave, so the victim started to leave. But the argument continued, and the suspect pulled out a handgun and shot the victim two or three times.

The suspect fled the restaurant in what police said might be a gray Mercury Mountaineer sport utility vehicle. Neither the suspect's name nor the victim's was released.

The other shooting happened around noon in the victim's mobile home at 15 Brandon Lane.

Charles Lee Davis, 38, was arrested at the scene, said Julie Kepple, spokeswoman for the Sheriff's Department. He was charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, causing serious injury.

Davis' girlfriend, Reba Faye Glenn Robinson was shot in the face.

Emergency personnel prepare to load the victim of a Friday afternoon shooting into an ambulance in the parking lot of Margarita's Town Mexican Grill and Seafood restaurant on Patton Avenue. The shooting occurred during an argument between two customers inside the restaurant.

Kepple had no information about what led to the shooting. She could not be reached late Friday to give updated information about Robinson's condition.

GOING DOWN—Service stations on Tunnel Road apparently started a price war several months ago when they began selling gasoline below the standard figure that had prevailed before that time. One by one cut rate signs went up until today the price of regular gasoline had been pared from 31.9 cents to 25.9 cents per gallon. Premium grade motor fuels have been similiarly reduced. This picture was made at Marshall's Service Station in West Asheville. All of them still follow one custom—they put the fraction of a cent in very small figures.

Mary Carter Gives Away Five Million Gallons Of Pain

Asheville Citizen-Times
September 12, 1960

Charles F. Collins, Manages Store, 791 Haywood Road

Van Worp, founder of Mary Carter Paint Factories said "Free Paint policy began as a mistake in our first newspaper advertisement. It was supposed to read, "Get a free can of paint with all the paint that you buy", insead it read "get a free can of paint with every can you buy". Since then every quart or gallon of Mary Carter Paint sold has been matched with another quart or gallon, free of extra cost.

Here in Asheville Charles F. Collins operates your Mary Carter franchise store at 791 Haywood Road, West Asheville and in Hendersonville he has a Mary Carter store located at 511 South Church Street.

Mary Carter Paint Industry began with Robert Van Worp mixing his first batch of paint in his two-car garage in Matawan, N. J. Since then Van Worp has seen his Mary Carter Paint Factories develop into a chain of 500 retail outlets in 25 states, Puerto Rico and the British West Indies, with manufacturing centers in Tampa, Matawan and Conroe, Texas. Another factory is soon to be constructed in the Los Angeles area. Mary Carter Paint Factories maintain a large fleet of semi-trailers to haul its products from factories directly to retail outlets. The trucks make weekly deliveries, usually hauling raw materials from suppliers back to the company's manufacturing centers on return trips. "There is no multiple transportation cost in the operation" Van Worp points out. "No middlemen's commission or profits and no spoilage of the product — Mary Carter paint is always factory fresh." This system permits our company to manufacture top quality paint at competitive prices and to 'share the profit' with customers in the form of free extra quart or gallon with every quart or gallon that they buy."

"The reason why I will not cut the price in half is that my paint is worth every penny of its price tag — the free gallon or quart with every gallon or quart you purchase just dramatizes what can be done with a streamlined operation" said Van Worp.

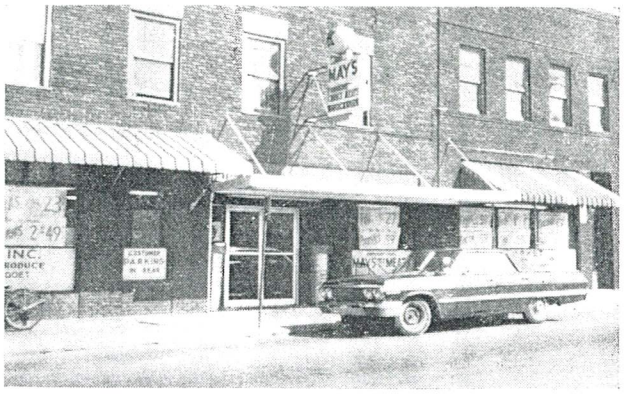
A FAMILY OF GROCERS!

By Margaret M. Clayton



Exterior view of May's Market, a small urban market in Asheville, N. C.

In a day of giant discount stores and huge supermarkets, it should not be forgotten that there are still small family stores that are filling an important need in their communities.

Such a store is May's Market, Inc., at 747 Haywood Road, Asheville, N. C., owned and managed by Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Leppert, Jr. Mrs. Leppert is the former Nancy May, whose family has been prominent in the food field for two generations. Her father, the late John B. May, and her brother, R. Morris May (recently deceased), both served as president of the North Carolina Food Dealers Association and her husband, Frank Leppert, is presently on the Board of Directors.

Frank T. Leppert, Jr.

The then 1600 sq. ft. May's Market was founded in 1928 by John B. May. His daughter has helped in the store since 1943 when Uncle Sam took all her brothers and husband off to war. Nancy still works there constantly, keeping books and running the store along with her husband Frank Leppert. Frank has been at the store since his return to civilian life.

He was in the field artillery corps in active service during World War II, arriving home on Christmas Day in 1945 and going into business with his father-in-law. At this time the store was expanded to 5,000 sq. ft. and remodeled.

Frank Leppert says he likes being a grocer "just fine" and his wife seems to enjoy being the wife, daughter, and sister of grocers, in addition to being one herself!

May's Market is an urban market with brick exterior and a yellow plastic sign and parking for 12 cars. The ceiling is of white metal with fluorescent strip lighting, the floor of wood, and the walls of painted plaster.

The store gives special attention to meats—and no wonder, the butcher, Ralph Pittillo, has been with them for 43 years! Everybody knows him; and he knows just what everyone wants. There are nine full-time and nine part-time employees. Hours open are 8:30 a.m.-9:30 p.m., six days a week.

There are three 25′ gondolas, 20′ of self-service meat counter, and 15′ of non-foods. Also 20′ of refrigerated produce, 16′ of dry produce, 34′ of frozen foods, 16′ of dairy, 12′ of bakery and 10′ of ice cream. There is also a separate 10′ x 12′ space for tobaccos.

Produce center does double duty with sundries on two shelves above.

Interior view of May's Market.

Meat counter is short but stocked full with meat.

Customers are treated well—given credit, delivery for a $1.00 fee, and flowers and food in sickness and bereavement. They even have a special 2′ x 5′ bulletin board, given to the store by a customer, which is covered with pictures of the customers' children. The store also furnishes a poster advertising community affairs.

"Many customers who have moved out of the neighborhood still come back here to shop," Leppert says.

The store gives to and participates in civic and charitable drives. They hire handicapped persons where possible and have helped boys in trouble—even given them jobs when no one else would, and work with them to rehabilitate themselves.

"One who was brought in by a detention officer," Leppert observed, "is now vice-president of a bank."

The store uses no advertising in the newspapers, radio or TV, but does circularize handbills and use bag stuffers. They have a profitable service whereby they sell meat and some groceries to restaurants, to army and national guard reserves, and to city schools for home economics courses.

They believe in "Promotions on Specials." Formerly, they used to give away appliances, but no longer. They also used to give free poinsettias to all at Christmastime, but the plants got to be to expensive. Now the store just features groceries with a special price tie-in.

Frank Leppert is president of the Lions Club of West Asheville, vice president of the Heart Association of Buncombe County, on the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board of the City of Asheville, on the Board for the Civic Arts Council, and the Board of Better Business Bureau of the Greater Asheville Area. As mentioned before, he is currently on the Board of Directors of NCFDA. He has been twice president of the West Asheville Business Association, and is a member of St. George's Episcopal Church.

Frank Leppert attends the NCFDA Management Seminar at Chapel Hill every year, feeling it is very important.

"It brings out the things you ought to do," he explained, "An example in our case is that one seminar emphasized the delegating of authority. We followed this idea and it was a good thing we did because it was important to us when my late brother-in-law, Morris May, who operated one of our other stores. Stoney Knob Super Market, passed away suddenly with a heart attack.

Frank and Nancy Leppert have one daughter, Nancy Ellen, who is the mother of their three grandsons, Frank, aged eight, Bryan, aged five, and Phillip Morris, aged one.

Asked what, in his opinion, is the chief problem facing the food retailer of today, Leppert replied,

"Trying to make a profit. Since the wage and hour law, we have to pay the minimum, whether the employee is worth it or not. The new safety law (OSHA) is quite a problem, too."

THE CAROLINA FOOD DEALER SALUTES THE MAY FAMILY, CONGRATULATES THEM ON THE OUTSTANDING CONTRIBUTIONS THEY HAVE MADE TO THE FOOD INDUSTRY AND WISHES MR. AND MRS. FRANK T. LEPPERT, JR. CONTINUED SUCCESS IN THE FUTURE.

Bare Bones Bargain

Meat prices are high and May's Market on Haywood Road is making no bones about it. Butchers at the market decided there was no use being glum about prices and posted this sign. They report customers do a double-take "then start grinning." A Times staff member was alerted to this sign when he was invited to a T-bone dinner with no mention of steak. He did some boning up and discovered the joke. (Staff Photo by Malcolm Gamble)

W. Asheville appliance store ends 38-year run

McCarson's on Haywood closing

By Jason Sandford
JSANDFORD@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

ASHEVILLE — McCarson's Used Appliance Store, a fixture on Haywood Road in Asheville for 38 years, will close its doors in coming months, store owner Lucille McCarson said Monday.

Joe McCarson opened Western North Carolina's first used appliance store on Emma Road in the Emma Community in 1968. He moved the store to its current location at 725 Haywood Road in 1973. Over the years, the store stocked thousands of freezers, washers, dryers, refrigerators and electric and gas ranges in two adjacent buildings. McCarson died two years ago.

"That was his dream — to start his own business," Lucille McCarson said, recalling how her husband worked long hours on repairs and delivery.

"I had to come out of retirement to keep it going after my husband died," McCarson, 72, said, "and I'm at the point now I want out."

JASON SANDFORD/JSANDFORD@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

McCarson's Used Appliance Store at 725 Haywood Road in West Asheville will close in coming months. The store opened at its current location in 1973.

The store, with its rows of appliances, creaky wooden floors and tin ceiling, harkens to a time when Haywood Road featured homegrown businesses such as Ideal Drug Store, Fortune's Hardware Store and Demos Appliance Store. Those stores have been replaced by an eclectic mix of thrift shops, restaurants and bars, which in turn has attracted a new vitality to neighborhoods around the length of the thoroughfare.

"It's a sad thing to see them go," said Mark Atkinson, owner of Luke Atkinson Furniture Co., a nearby business that opened on Haywood Road in 1981.

"Old Joe McCarson was a hard-working rascal," Atkinson said.

Please see STORE on B3

STORE: McCarson's closing

"He just wrestled those appliances around. He really worked hard."

Atkinson, the son of Luke Atkinson, said he was unsure about what would come next.

"There's a certain amount of revitalization going on, but in a way, I'm not sure it's a good thing," Atkinson said, noting the lack of new retail shops. "I think what really need is to get more retail in here."

Greg Garrison, co-owner of the The Hop West ice cream shop next door to McCarson's, said he, too, was sad to hear about a business closing.

"We hate to see that," said Garrison, who opened his shop last October. "But at the same time, it's a chance for a new business to come in and add their personality to that section of Haywood Road that hasn't been rejuvenated. So, it's exciting to see what West Asheville might bring."

Lucille McCarson said it will likely take months for her to sell out her stock of used appliances, many of which sell for $75 or $85. She, too, noted the changing face of the neighborhood, and said she hoped a vibrant new business would eventually move in.

"I don't know how to describe it. It just makes you feel old," McCarson said.

"Just I thank the Lord who has seen us through all this, and I want to thank all our loyal customers through the years."

Feeling spicy?

Mercado Mexicano dishes up a flavorful lunch

By Susan T. Parke
CITIZEN-TIMES CORRESPONDENT

WEST ASHEVILLE — Asheville has a variety of spots specializing in unique cuisine. Haywood Road is home to a number of Mexican establishments including the Mercado Mexicano, which bills itself as Asheville's Latin Market.

Jose deLeon Robles opened this little place about four years ago and decided to offer Mexican food in a little taqueria attached to the main store. Several friends told me it was pretty good — Mexican food for Mexican people — so a buddy and I trotted over there to check it out.

The fare is simple but tasty, and very filling. There is a steam table with a number of meat entrees plus rice and beans. A side buffet has the condiments: a chunky pico de gallo with onions, green and red peppers and lots of cilantro, a (very) hot red salsa and a fresh-tasting salsa verde.

You tell the cook, Leonardo Osornio, how many tacos you want, what fillings, corn or flour tortillas and whether you also want arroz and frijoles (rice and beans). He dishes out the food while you choose your drink from a small cooler. The drinks are also Mexican — Jamitos sodas in flavors such as mandarina and sangria (non-alcoholic) and Jumex fruit nectars. True to what you would find in Mexico, the drinks are very sweet and not particularly cold.

Like a visit to a small Mexican village, those who know some Spanish can better appreciate the experience (some of the staff do speak English). But don't expect your typical American-style Mexican food.

On the day we checked it out, the meat dishes were Porc Carnitas (a flavorful shredded pork), Pollo in Adobo (chicken stewed in a rich smoky sauce), Porc in Adobo (tender chunks of pork in the same sauce as the chicken), Carne Asada (strips of beef with onion), Porc Pastore (small chunks of pork in a darker rich sauce) and Bif with Peppers and Tomatoes and Lingua (small chunks of beef tongue in yet another sauce). My friend ordered two corn tortillas filled with the Porc Carnitas and sides of rice and beans. I chose one corn tortilla with the Porc in Adobo and one of the Carne Asada, also with rice and beans. After a little thought, I added a side taco of the Lingua.

MERCADO MEXICANO

WHERE: 747 Haywood Road
HOURS: Taqueria open 10 a.m.-8 p.m. daily. Mercado open 9 a.m.-9 p.m. daily.
PHONE: 285-0266
SMOKING/DRINKING: No smoking/no alcohol
PAYING FOR IT: Cash only

The Porc Carnitas was definitely the star of the meal. It was rich, succulent and tender. Topped with a healthy dollop of the Pico de Gallo and a judicious bit of the red salsa, it was delicious. The Porc in Adobo came in a close second with its terrific sauce, and the pork chunks were as tender as the Carnitas shreds. We also enjoyed the Carne Asada, although the beef was tougher than the pork dishes, and the sauce was not as interesting. And the Lingua - in all fairness I have to say that it just didn't work for me, but this had to do with the texture of the meat and not the flavorings, which were quite good. If tongue is a dish you enjoy, then by all means this is a dish you should try.

The side dishes were fine, serving primarily as foils for the rich sauces served with the meats. The beans were especially tasty when combined with a healthy splash of the salsa verde.

Stuffed to the gills, we cleared our plates and then perused the items in the adjoining shop. There are an amazing assortment of dried peppers, salsas and Mexican canned goods along with a dairy case containing sodas and different Mexican cheeses and puddings. Corn husks are available for tamales and there are a number of Mexican CDs for sale. There was even a selection of egg chow mein with Spanish writing on the can.

I purchased a can of chipotle peppers in adobo sauce for my friend and the grand total including the meal came to $9.32. It's definitely good value for a delicious lunch.

Modern Range Of Greenhouses, Second Largest In The State, Are Being Erected Near City

Contract was closed during the past week for the erection of a modern range of greenhouses, comprising, when completed, 60,000 square feet of glass. It was announced last night by [illegible] manager of the Middlemount Gardens. The range of greenhouses will be built on the outskirts of the City, near Sulphur Springs, just off the highway leading to Canton from Asheville. All told, the expenditure will be around $50,000.

When finally completed, this plant will be by far the largest in the City, and the second largest in North Carolina, Mr. Buseck declares. Construction work will be done by the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, Ill. Preliminary work has all ready started.

The largest greenhouse in this State is located at Greensboro and is owned by the Van Lindley Company. This plant has 75,00 square feet of glass.

The Sulphur Springs location is considered excellent. Some 10 acres will be devoted to the work of growing flowers for the market. Middlemount Gardens belong to Mrs. Charles A. Webb. Mr. Buseck has active charge of the work.

Mr. Buseck states that the climate here is wonderful for growing roses and carnations, and is even better than Canada, where some very fine specimens of these flowers are grown. Western North Carolina has sunshine practically all the year around, Mr. Buseck points out, and is better suited for a greenhouse business than any other part of the United States. Mr. Buseck states that the great bulk of hot-house plants and flowers have been shipped here from Northern markets, but that with the completion of the plant now under way, Asheville's needs can be supplied locally

According to plans as announced seven houses are to be constructed under one roof. Three of these will be finished by the end of October, it is thought. These three will comprise about 25,000 square feet of glass. It will take fully a year to complete the entire plant, Mr. Buseck states.

The gutters will be seven feet high. Six of the seven houses will be 33 feet wide and 175 feet long. One will be 20 feet wide and 175 long. The boiler room is to be 24 by 24 feet.

All preparations have been made to take care of the Winter crops. It is stated that with the completion of this new structure, Asheville people will be able to "Say It With Flowers," with home grown flowers from local greenhouses.

Mr. Buseck, who has been in this City since 1918, came here from Philadelphia, Pa., where he was engaged in the florist business. He is a native of Germany, and a graduate of the Geisenheim-on-the-Rhine Horticultural College. He was for some time employed at the famous Palm Garden at Frankfort-on-Main.

Otto Buseck To Attend State Florists Meeting

Otto Buseck, manager of Middlemount Gardens, leaves for Raleigh Tuesday to attend the annual meeting of the State Florists Association, of which he is the secretary-treasurer.

Clowns 'n Everything Will Be On Hand For Fete At Middlemount

Clowns 'n everything!

The day of the carnival is not over. It's a mistake to think so. In one form or another they appear on the scene, dazzle the multitude for a moment, and then move on for something newer. But always the newer thing passes out and the carnival, with the eternal youth of Puck, comes back in garb that lures the weary throng and lightens the burdens of care.

A Carnival at Middlemount!

Could there be a lovlier setting for this age-old entertainment? Surely not. The spacious grounds of Mrs. Charles A. Webb's home fit perfectly into the scheme of this Carnival, which is being given for the benefit of the Asheville Clubhouse for Women. Nature here lends itself to the scheme of the artist who has designed the show, and he can arrange every attraction so that it will fit snugly into the surroundings.

For children and grown folks!

There will be donkeys and ponies, trick mules and other tricks, grab-bags and fishing pools, shooting galleries and every imaginable form of entertainment that belongs to the Carnival. What fun it will be to see some fat man riding the trick mule with a clown, a real honest to goodness clown, coaching the donkey with his bag of tricks. What joy for the little one to ride the ponies. What exquisite pleasure for youth to expend himself in the tortuous maze of fun-making scenes.

But this is just a part of this Carnival. The Little Theatre will produce the play Liliom which it gave with such eclat some weeks ago. This is a carnival play and it could not find a better setting for its humorous scenes.

Remember the dates!

Friday and Saturday afternoons of this week, beginning at 4:30 o'clock. At Middlemount on Haywood Road. This will be the show of the year. Of course you will not miss it. The public is invited. The proceeds go the to Asheville Clubhouse for Women.

The appointment which was made by Henry Penn, national president, is to become effective immediately.

OTTO BUSECK IS NAMED TO OFFICE

Middlemount Official Is Given Position By Association

The appointment of Otto Buseck, general manager and treasurer of Middlemount Gardens, Inc., as vice-president of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, in charge of the North Carolina division, was announced yesterday.

The appointment was made by Henry Penn, of Boston, Mass., who is president of the national organization, and is to become effective at once. The principal undertakings of the organization this year, Mr. Buseck said yesterday, is the promotion of the national flower appreciation contest which opened February 14 and closes April 15. The purpose of this event is to create a wider appreciation of flowers and floral beauty among school children. Prizes amounting to $5,000 will be awarded in connection with the contest. The Middlemount Gardens are participating in the contest and have issued tickets to all sixth grade teachers for distribution among their pupils. Booklets on the contest can be obtained by presenting the tickets at the Middlemount Gardens offices at 30 Haywood street.

Through the courtesy of Middlemount Gardens and the medium of the National Florists Telegraph Delivery Association, every patient at the U. S. Veterans' hospital at Oteen was presented with a gift of flowers yesterday morning. The flowers were ordered delivered by Mayor Wilson, of Cincinnati, O., in connection with the opening of the 12th national flower show and the fifth florists telegraph delivery week.

Thousands Will View Floral Offerings At Middlemount Gardens

Appropriately timed to Palm Sunday will be the showing of hundreds of thousands of flowers in the Annual Pre-Easter Flower show of Middlemount Gardens, the Flower Shop today at the greenhouses on Haywood road in West Asheville.

The Annual Pre-Easter Flower show is a drawing card for several thousand people each year. The public is invited to attend the "open house" for display of numerous beautiful flowers, Otto Buseck, manager has announced.

The entire nine greenhouses of Middlemount Gardens will be thrown open to the public from early morning until night to see the thousands of beautiful blooms which have never been prettier Mr. Buseck said. Guides will be on hand to lead visitors through the maze of beauty. Souvenirs will be given those attending.

6,000 Easter Lilies

Six thousand Easter lilies will be displayed in the show while row upon row of carnations making more than 10,000 of these flowers will practically fill one greenhouse. Middlemount Gardens expect to ship a quarter of a million of carnations throughout the country this year.

All the other plants to fill flower lovers with delight will be spirea, geraniums, begonias, hydrangeas, cinerarias, genesta, hyacinths, tulips, schizanthus, cyclamen, sweetpeas, pansies, bogulanvillea, roses, cineraria, snap dragons, calendulas, stocks, azaleas, gardenias, lilies-of-the-valley--all attractively displayed.

Double Snapdragon

A double snapdragon which has been originated by Mr. Buseck will also be among those shown. This plant will be exhibited at the national convention of the Society of American Florists and Horticulturists in Hartford, Connecticutt next month.

Especially interesting to flower lovers is a jet-black pansy grown from German seed which has bloomed. The large display of carnations is further enhanced by the showing of six new varieties of this flower.

Steady streams of visitors annually visit the greenhouses during the show, Mr. Buseck said. Plenty of parking space is available for many, he said.

"There is much sentiment attached to flowers and we want people to see these beautiful plants and to learn of them", Mr. Buseck said. He also pointed out that the greenhouses of Middlemount Gardens are always open to visitors, and a number of people take advantage of this each spring.

WHO'S WHO AND WHY IN ASHEVILLE

Ash. C. & Tim 12/10/33

OTTO BUSECK, general manager of Middlemount Gardens, has devoted most of his life to the culture of flowers. He was born December 21, 1868, at Frankfort on the Main, Germany.

After completing his public school education, Mr. Buseck served three years as an apprentice to a florist and then spent two years at a horticultural college in Germany—at Geisenheim, on the Rhine, where famous wines are made.

Following completion of his college course he traveled over Europe seeking further knowledge of his chosen profession. On March 1 of nevt year he will have been following it 50 years.

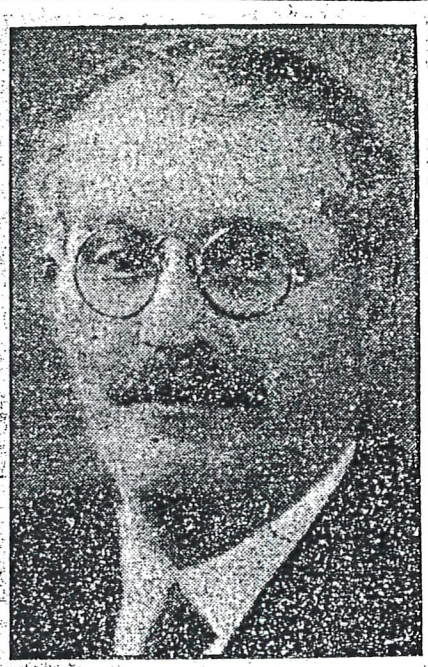
It was in 1893 that Mr. Buseck came to the United States, landing at New York. Shortly thereafter he went to Omaha, Nebr., where he had charge of the public gardens.

Mr. Buseck's work next called him to Memphis, Tenn.—two years after going to Omaha—where he laid out Raleigh Springs, a resort. In 1897 he returned to New York to lay out the gardens of Jacob H. Shiff, one of the Kuhn, Loeb partners and later planned the gardens of H. Kemp, at that time the world's sugar "king."

A year after reaching New York Mr. Buseck became superintendent of public parks at Paterson, N. J., where he remained a year and a half. Leaving there, he returned to Memphis, to enter business as a florist, where he remained until 1909.

Upon leaving Memphis, Mr. Buseck went to Hawthorne, N. Y., where he grew cut flowers for the wholesale market for nearly 10 years. He came to Asheville in 1918 and was employed by Karl von Ruck for one year. He then became private gardener for Mrs. Charles A. Webb, laying out and landscaping her grounds. In 1921 Middlemount Gardens was begun, and has grown to where it now has the largest greenhouses in North Carolina. The gardens' Asheville store is located on Haywood street.

Middlemount Gardens ships flowers over most of the South—as far away as Jacksonville, Memphis and Birmingham. At present it is specializing in carnations.



OTTO BUSECK

On January 2, 1909, Mr. Buseck married Miss Emily Nathan, at Memphis.

He is a member of the B. P. O. E., is a Scottish Rite Mason, a Shriner, member of the Southeastern Florists association, the National Florists association and the Florists Telegraph Delivery association. He was one of the recipients of the German Red Cross, given to a few Asheville persons who participated in raising a monument in Riverside cemetery to German sailors who died here while interned during the World war.

Mr. and Mrs. Buseck live on Sulphur Springs road.

Nothing pleases him better than to have visitors at the gardens located on Sulphur Springs road, about six miles west of Asheville. He especially likes to have the school teachers bring their pupils for a tour of the greenhouses. It is part of the children's education that should not be neglected, he believes.

Middlemount Carnations In Great Demand Here

Blossoms Are Said To Be Among Finest Sold In South

The demand for high grade carnations has reached a new high peak this year among the florists of the South according to a statement made by Otto Buseck, manager of Middlemount Gardens, incorporated, greenhouses. "It is practically impossible for us to fill our wholesale orders and our cultivation benches are taxed to the limit in an attempt to avoid disappointing the Southeastern retail florists who depend on us for their supply of carnation blooms." Mr. Buseck said "We have had to increase our carnation cut practically twenty-five per cent this season. Our Asheville retail store, The Flower Shop, too, has noticed a substantial increase in the demand for carnations locally; naturally our first consideration is for the local trade."

"Our rose plants have also developed a very noticeable advancement in the quality of the rose blooms which is most gratifying," Mr. Buseck continued. "Longer stems and larger buds together with an improvement in the coloring, will place our roses among the best in this section, we are sure. It is our intention to continue our experiments in an effort to produce the finest flowers in the South," he concluded.

Middlemount's greenhouses are located on Route 10 (Canton road) approximately five miles out from West Asheville. The public is cordially invited to view the flowers in the process of growing and blooming and open house is maintained every Sunday. Wholesale and retail departments are maintained at The Flower Shop, 38 Haywood street.

Middlemount Gardens Moving To New Store

Separating Wholesale And Retail Departments Here

"A Shop of Complete Floral Gifts" will be the slogan at the new location of The Flower Shop of Middlemount Gardens, incorporated, 27 Haywood street, which opens for business Monday morning. The uptown store is being moved from 38 Haywood street and an entirely new merchandising plan is to be inaugurated, according to a statement made by the management.

The retail and wholesale departments, which have formerly been operated from the Haywood street store, will be separated and the entire wholesale facilities will be conducted from the greenhouses of the floral firm. The change in business methods has demanded more adequate space, the management declares.

Mrs. Ida Middlemount Flowers and Otto Buseck, manager, and Max Crohn, secretary, feel that this move will expedite the services on both retail and wholesale orders. In addition, a retail department will be maintained at the greenhouses where customers may place advance orders for holiday flowers and plants. It was pointed out. The greenhouses will be open to the public at all daylight hours, including Sunday, and a cordial invitation has been extended the public to visit at any time. The Flower Shop will feature a large and varied line of flower and plant containers as well as a complete line of cut flowers and plants for immediate delivery.

MAX CROHN

The Middlemount greenhouses are located on route 10, the Canton highway, about 5 miles from the city. There is plenty of parking space off the highway for visitors.

Middlemount Shows Wide Variety For Easter

The greenhouse of Middlemount Gardens, incorporated, is a veritable bee-hive these days. With Easter but a few weeks away the plants and blooms require special, careful attention. Expert handling is required in order to maintain the high standard of flowers that has been the outstanding policy of this concern every year. Thousands of Easter lilies are being carefully attended and will be featured in the annual Easter flower show which is scheduled for Sunday March 25th at the greenhouse, according to Otto Buseck, manager. An open invitation is extended the public to visit the greenhouses any time. They are located

PLANS COMPLETED FOR FLOWER SHOW

Thousands Of Gorgeous Blooms Will Be On Exhibition

All preparations have been completed for the annual Easter Flower Show which is staged each Spring season by Middlemount Gardens, Incorporated. This year's main showing will be held at the greenhouses which are located on the Canton highway just a pleasant drive from West Asheville.

Thousands and thousands of gorgeous blooms will be on parade Easter lilies will, of course, hold the center of the stage and visitors are promised a sight that will be long remembered.

A cordial invitation has been extended the general public. Special arrangements have been made with the West Asheville bus operators who will drive up to the gate of the [illegible] make the trip for 25 cents, it was announced.

Orders can be placed and selections made tomorrow if it is desired. Choice selections are offered at this time and the stock is fresh and will be properly cared for until the time of delivery when it will be appropriately decorated and promptly delivered.

Easter plants and decoration will also be on display at the uptown store, The Flower Shop, Woodfin street beginning Monday.

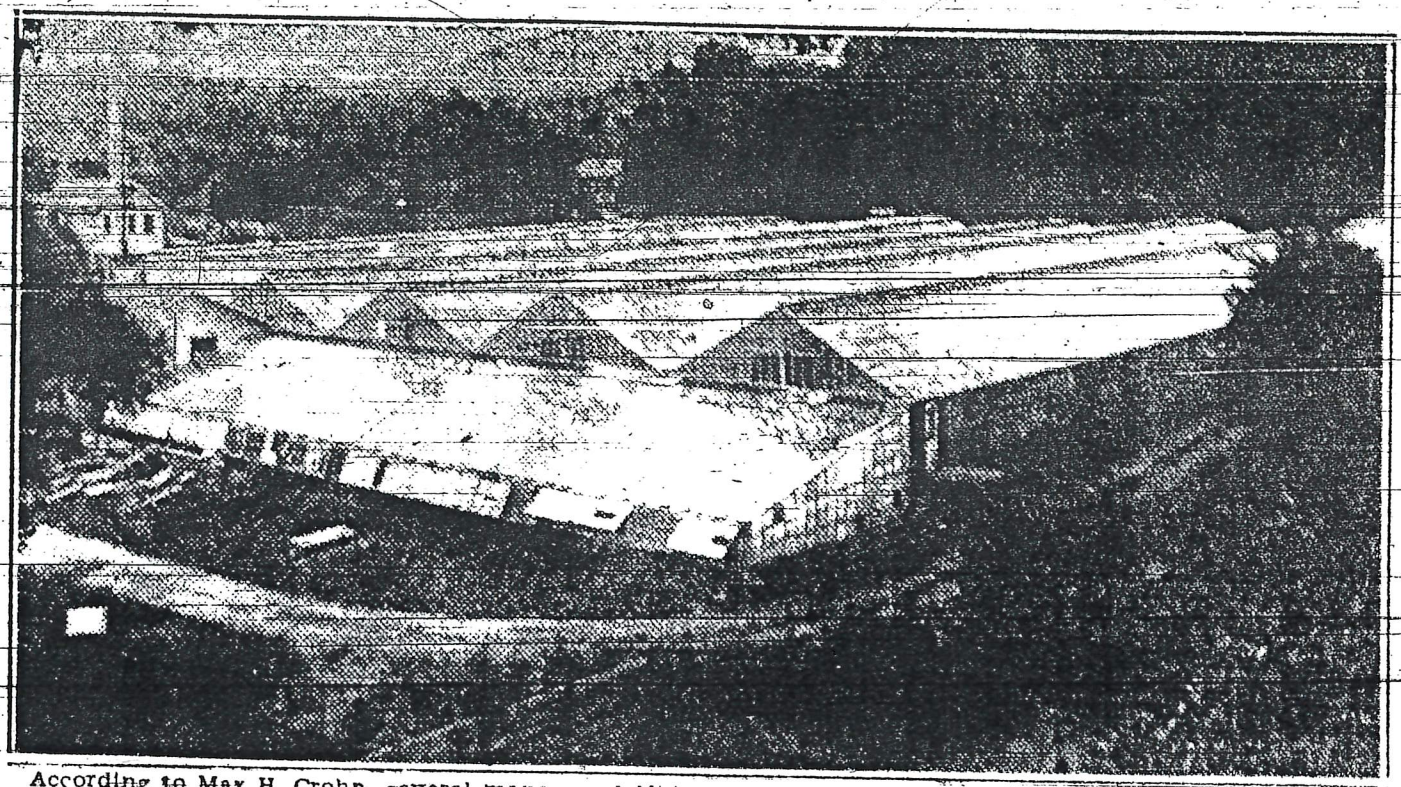
Immense Greenhouses Of Middlemount Gardens



According to Max H. Crohn, general manager of Middlemount Gardens and The Flower Shop, on Haywood street, they expect one of the largest flower seasons of the past several years. While not as plentiful this year, indications are that blooms of many varieties will be more perfect.

FLOWER SHOP RIOT OF COLOR

Middlemount Greenhouse Also Invites Public Out

Now that the frost has about destroyed all the flowers in your yard, there is no reason you should be without them during the fall and winter months.

The Flower Shop of Middlemount Gardens, 29 Haywood street, are showing hundreds of the fall flowers and they are beautifully displayed in the windows of the retail store.

Many new and rare plants never before shown in Asheville are on display at both The Flower Shop and at the Middlemount greenhouses. Dish gardens, and plants for them are here in profusion. They are most acceptable for gifts or for your own home.

Max H. Crohn, manager for both The Flower Shop and Middlemount Gardens greenhouses, is enthusiastic about the outlook for flowers for the coming season. Mr. Crohn said, "While flowers this year will not be as plentiful as in some years past, the blooms are more perfect as to coloring and shape than I have seen them in some time."

To insure perfect service, Middlemount Gardens have both the retail store and the greenhouses. It is a magnificent sight at the greenhouses this time of year and the public is cordially invited to come out and see the thousands of 'mums' and other flowers in bloom. It is only about five miles out to the greenhouses through West Asheville on routes 19 and 23. Mrs. Otto Buseck is always at the greenhouses, and it will be her pleasure to welcome you.

Nothing adds more to the home than beautiful flowers, whether they are potted plants or cut flowers and the most excellent varieties shown at The Flower Shop and Middlemount Gardens makes it easy to choose for gifts or your own home.

POTTED PLANTS FOR THE HOME

Now Is Time To Make Ready With Bright Flowers

According to Max Crohn, general manager of Middlemount Gardens and The Flower Shop this is the time of the year to be getting your sunshine flower garden ready. In other words make ready for the plants for the interior of your home that do so much to brighten things.

They have on display all the plants that you will want for your home. One in particular that has a strong appeal is the self branching ivy in pots. Mr. Crohn reports that the florist association says this plant is most popular in thousands of homes throughout Europe.

Football season is at hand and of course everyone knows that "mums" go with football. The Flower Shop is showing the seasons first in the windows and the selection is unusual.

Cut flowers in profusion for every occasion are always on hand at this popular store and prices are as low as will be found anywhere. Mr. Crohn still insists that flowers are not expensive and invites the public in at any time to find out for themselves.

MIDDLEMOUNT TO HAVE EXHIBIT AT THREE-DAY SHOW

Flowers And Pottery To Be Shown At Radio Exposition

One of the most attractive displays at the Radio and Home Appliance show, will be the one of The Flower Shop of Middlemount Gardens.

Max Crohn, general manager of Middlemount Gardens and the Flower Shop at 29 Haywod street, announced yesterday that he had just received by express a beautiful assortment of pottery most suitable for flowers. "Lovers of flowers will find dozens of pieces of pottery for flowers and the selection is most unusual. These as well as beautiful plants and other household articles will be displayed," said Mr. Crohn.

Middlemount Gardens, located on Haywood road in West Asheville is one of the finest greenhouses in the entire south. Here exquisite flowers are raised and shipped to florists in many different sections of the country. Potted plants by the thousands are raised. One plant in particular that is proving popular is the self branching ivy. Potted and ready to take home, it will add beauty to any room.

The Flower Shop at all times carries a large stock of cut flowers. flowers that are not shipped but raised in Middlemount Gardens and cut fresh each day for the retail store.

Mr. Crohn says that flowers are not expensive. "Many people seem to think that because flowers come from a florist they must be expensive," said Mr. Crohn. "This is a mistaken idea and I wish at all times that the public would come in and find out just how reasonable flowers are priced."

FLOWER SHOP TO MOVE SHORTLY

Middlemount Gardens Is Moving To Larger Quarters

Announcement was made earlier in the week by Max Crohn general manager of the Flower Shop and Middlemount Gardens that the Flower Shop would move to new and larger quarters at 64 Patton avenue.

Plans are now being put into effect that will give the Flower Shop one of the finest retail flower stores in the country. Extensive improvements are now being carried out in the new building that will not only allow more space for window display but will facilitate the handling of all delivery orders.

No matter what your desire in flowers may be, the Flower Shop is in a position to meet your demands. For Middlemount Gardens the greenhouses were all blossoms and plants are grown have one of the finest greenhouses in the entire south. Flowers from Middlemount are shipped to many southern states.

Mr. Crohn recently was responsible for the statement that flowers are not expensive. He invites the general public to stop in at the Flower Shop, price the blossoms and plants and find out for themselves how reasonable they are priced.

Now is the time to start an indoor garden, the home can easily be brightened by the addition of a few blooming potted plants. The Flower Shop is in a position to handle with promptness all needs for weddings, banquets and funerals.

PUBLIC INVITED TO SEE FLOWERS

Sunday, December 19 To Be Open House At Greenhouses

Max Crohn, general manager of Middlemount Gardens in West Asheville, stated yesterday that Sunday, December 19, would be open house at the greenhouses and that the public was cordially invited to come out and see the Christmas flowers. Middlemount Gardens have more than seventy thousand feet of flower growing space under glass and that thousands of plants are expected to be in bloom on that date.

The retail store at 64 Patton avenue is a riot of color with Christmas flowers of every kind on display. Prices are said to be very reasonable for both cut flowers and potted plants. Christmas wreaths are also on display and they have a large number of most colorful ones for easy selection.

A gift that is most attractive for the home is one of pottery and at Middlemount they are showing hundreds of pieces of lovely Roseville pottery, beautifully packaged at very reasonable prices. The public is cordially invited to come in any day at the retail store to see the flower display as well as the pottery and by all means to come out to the greenhouses on Sunday, December 19.

MIDDLEMOUNT FLOWER SHOP IS REMODELED

FEB 25 ~~1940~~

New Fixtures, Equipment Are Installed In Building

CITIZEN

Remodeling of Middlemount Flower shop, at 64 Patton avenue, completed yesterday after two weeks of work, has converted the establishment "from a store to a shop", Max H. Crohn, president of Middlemount Gardens, Inc., said yesterday. The work was done mainly at night, and business was carried on daily.

Beauty and an effect of spaciousness has been attained by the removal of counters and rearrangement of displays in the shop, giving maximum visibility to every object. Pottery, tables, and shelves are used to advantage and all counters and other obstructions have been removed.

Knotty white pine, coated with clear varnish to bring out the grain, lines the wall, forming an attractive background for the flower displays. The ceiling of white bevelboard is an excellent aid to the indirect lighting, which closely resembles daylight. The floor has been recovered with new Dupont Kolorfloor.

The refrigerator is the outstanding addition to the equipment of the Middlemount shop. A Friedrich floating air, draftless model, it utilizies neon lighting to accentuate the colors of the flowers. Modern heating units have been installed which speed circulation of the air and eliminate irregular heating.

MAX HENRY CROHN

Max Crohn was starting from town to his Middlemount Gardens greenhouses on Haywood road at Sulphur Springs one cold winter night. A not-too-warmly clad man standing at the curb signalled him for a ride. Max stopped and the stranger got in the car.

As he drew near the end of his trip Max asked the stranger where he was going.

"I live up Spivey mountain a little piece."

"Well, that's not much further. I'll take you on home."

The passenger did not say a word until he signalled Mr. Crohn to stop. As he got out of the car, "Thank you, Mister. You're a Christian gentleman. I needed that ride."

"You're welcome," Max Crohn said, "but I'm not a Christian. I'm Jewish."

"Mister, I'm a minister of the Gospel, and I still say you are a Christian." He offered his hand, then walked off into the night.

In the basic sense of the word "Christian" that preacher was right. For above everything else, the Nazarene taught consideration for people less fortunate than ourselves, and true brotherly love. In Asheville I have many Jewish friends who practice markedly Christian charity. Max Crohn is one.

Thinking that Max might be a nickname, I asked my friend what his full name was.

"Max Henry Crohn."

"Then you are not orthodox. You are Reformed Jewish," I said.

"That's right. I'm a past president of the Beth-ha-Tephila congregation here, and also past president of Asheville Lodge 714, B'nai B'rith. But how did you know I was a Reformed Jew?"

"Because you have a middle name, Max. My now departed but no less beloved friend, the world famous impressario Roxy, told me no orthodox Jew ever had more than one given name."

"That's right, Tom. I'd never thought of it."

Max Crohn, for so he is widely known among the first citizens of Asheville, was born in Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 7, 1902. His black hair and flashing, black eyes, coupled with a charming boyishness, make him appear much younger than his 42 years. The enthusiasm which is a major characteristic of Max Crohn has proved him a valuable worker on such worthy civic duties as need to be done. There are few major local movements for good that have not benefitted by his abilities.

We were talking in the down town shop of Middlemount Gardens at 64 Patton avenue, Max and I. From time to time customers would enter, and Max would excuse himself to wait on them. Mr. C. S. Fletcher came in to return some huge jars borrowed by the Men's Garden club for their flower show. Then a lovely young lady entered to ask Max to help her decide the flowers for her coming wedding. "My mother will wear blue and the groom's mother will wear lavender," I heard her say. Max reached into the big glass-front refrigerator containing a myriad of blooms and took out a delicate, pure white flower, dainty as the girl herself. "This is a very rare blossom," he said.

At this point Mrs. Otto Buseck, aunt of Max Crohn and widow of the fondly-remembered founder of Middlemount Gardens, came in the store. Her affectionate greeting to the nephew who is no less than a son to her, was beautiful to see. She joined me and we chatted while Max was busy.

"Max is a good boy, Mr. Cushing," she said proudly. I learned that his father died when he was one year old. Young Max attended the public schools of Memphis, then went to work with a big plate glass company of that city. When he was 19 he came to Asheville to be associated with his uncle, Otto Buseck, at Middlemount. He has been there ever since; and on the death of Mr. Buseck in March, 1934, Max Crohn assumed full management of these famous greenhouses, which grow carnations for distribution to the entire southeast. Middlemount has developed one magnificent blossom in the carnation known as the "Middlemount Red." It is a dark red bloom, and very popular wherever it is shown.

Leadership ability is an inborn talent of Max Crohn. He is past president of the Southeastern Florists association and acting president for the duration of the war. It is interesting to note the system under which this association rotates its officers. The immedate past president automatically becomes first vice-president; so that, in an emergency, the organization has available a man of experience to take the chair. This happened in the florist group when its president went to war: Max Crohn became acting head again, and all runs smoothly. The system might well be borrowed by other organizations.

Mr. Crohn is past president of the Temple Brotherhood. He is a Kiwanian, an Elk, a member of Mt. Herman Lodge, Mason, and belongs to the Asheville Consistery of the Scottish Rite. A member of the Asheville Country Club, golf is his favorite recreation. I asked him how he played.

"Well, Tom—if a man plays under 80, they say he is neglecting his business. If he plays over 80, he is neglecting his golf. I guess I'm neglecting my golf," he said with a grin.

Certainly Max Crohn will neglect his personal pleasure if it interferes with what he should do in either business or civic interest. Or with his beautiful home life which, at 75 Mt. Vernon Circle, he shares with Mrs. Crohn and the children, Miriam and Max H. Jr., both students of Asheville schools.

MIDDLEMOUNT IS OBSERVING ANNIVERSARY

CITIZEN DEC 2 1945

In celebration of the 25th anniversary of the opening of Middlemount Gardens, Inc., the firm presented $50 to the Salvation Army Christmas Cheer dime board and 25 employes will adopt 25 children in the Santa Pal project, it was announced yesterday by Max Crohn, president of the company.

Middlemount Gardens opened for business Dec. 1, 1920 with a small counter space at 45 Patton avenue in the Lowenbein Rutenberg store. Middlemount Nurseries, as it was then named, moved to more spacious quarters at 33 Haywood street in 1922 and 11 months later moved to their present location, 64 Patton avenue.

Mrs. Charles A. Webb was president of the company from its opening until 1938 and Otto Buseck was manager until his death in 1934. Mrs. Buseck and Mr. Crohn purchased Mrs. Webb's interest and have been operating the company since. At present Middlemount greenhouses are known as the largest in Western North Carolina and among the five largest in the state.

Middlemount Sells Gardens To Jarrett

AUG 16 1949

Middlemount Gardens, Inc., has sold its greenhouse properties just outside the West Asheville City limits to Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Jarrett and will continue in the retail business only at the Middlemount Flower Shop at 64 Patton Avenue, it was learned today.

Mr. and Mrs. Jarrett, for nearly 25 years identified with the growing of flowers here and as authorities on hardy perennials, with their son, Victor M. Jarrett, have already taken over the Middlemount Greenhouse properties, consisting of nine acres of land, an eight-room residence and approximately 50,000 square feet of greenhouse area. Tax stamps on the real estate transfers show the property was an outright purchase at approximately $25,000.

Max Crohn, president of Middlemount Gardens, Inc., said today that the Middlemount Flower Shop will have no further operating connection with the greenhouses and will continue in the retail business at the same Patton Avenue store. The Middlemount Greenhouses will be known as Jarrett's Greenhouses, No. 2.

The Jarretts have approximately 15,000 square feet in greenhouses at their home on Monte Vista Road. Acquisition of the Middlemount properties gives them approximately 65,000 square feet of glass-covered gardens, one of the largest plants in the country, with possible exception of the Shelby greenhouses.

Mr. and Mrs. Jarrett began growing flowers, with emphasis on perennials, as a hobby here about 25 years ago. They developed one of the largest perennial areas in the country, three acres, on the Monte Vista Road. They then built their greenhouses and expanded in the wholesale and retail business.

The Middlemount Greenhouses were erected about 1925 by Otto Busick and Mrs. Charles A. Webb. Mr. Busick died about 13 years ago. Mrs. Busick and the greenhouse staff continued on with the work. Mrs. Busick still resides in the Middlemount residence. Crohn has supervised the entire industry for several years, but said he wants to concentrate on the retail business here.

Jarrett said today that the Jarrett's Greenhouses will soon be open to the public, an announcement of which will be made as soon as some changes have been made. The greenhouses will serve florist shops here and elsewhere, as well as cater to retail trade.

At the present time, Jarrett said the greenhouses are planted about 80 per cent in carnations, 45,000 plants being developed for next year's crop. The greenhouses will also specialize in potted plants.

DINING OUT

Food for the soul

Pork chops and service good at Ms. Kasey's

By Susan Parke
CITIZEN-TIMES CORRESPONDENT

WEST ASHEVILLE — There are not many places that bill themselves as purveyors of genuine soul food, so when a friend and got wind of the new Ms. Kasey's Soul Food we made a beeline straight for West Asheville. The restaurant has only been open for a few weeks and is located just past Ingles on Haywood Road in a brick building that at one time housed a small Korean grocery store.

The interior (which has been significantly refurbished) consists of one spacious room with booths and tables. Modern paintings depicting jazz musicians adorn the walls, and soft R&B music plays in the background.

It was around 1 o'clock when we arrived and the place was pretty busy — the crowd ranged from young people to old, from kids to businessmen in three-piece suits. We were shown to a booth and checked out the menu while our server, Inez, went to get our iced tea. The menu is fairly small — smothered pork chops, oven-roasted top round, fried chicken and fried fish with an assortment of vegetable sides. There are also several hot sandwiches and desserts.

Service was quick, friendly efficient — and our iced tea was fresh brewed, which is always a good start.

My friend ordered Ms. Kasey's Famous Smothered Pork Chops with sides of fresh green beans, real mashed potatoes and homemade cole slaw. I went for the oven-roasted top round with macaroni and cheese, pinto beans and fresh ed greens. Our meals arved in record time, accompanied by buttermilk biscuits. One bite told us that the pork chops were the signature dish of the meal. They were thick, and so tender they were almost falling off the bone. They had been dredged in flour seasoned with what tasted like sage, thyme and cayenne, and the same seasonings were in the excellent gravy with which said chops were smothered. The cole slaw was creamy and very tasty, while the biscuits were very light and fluffy. My top round was thinly sliced and very tender as well, and the gravy was quite nice, but lacked the homemade flavor of the sauce served with the pork chops. The macaroni and cheese was good with lots of melted cheddar on top, and the pinto beans (although I'm not sure they were home-made) were well-seasoned and savory.

The rest of the side dishes, however, were somewhat disappointing. The 'real' mashed potatoes had the unmistakable taste of coming out of a box — and although there are some relatively good varieties on the market now, they are no substitute for the real deal. And the 'fresh' green beans clearly came from a can. The 'fresh' mixed greens didn't really taste fresh-cooked to us, although they were very good with a little spicy vinegar on them. In fact, our favorite condiment was a small bottle of vinegar containing slices of what appeared to be Scotch Bonnet peppers. It was extremely hot and had a great flavor.

This is a pleasant restaurant, and we certainly got plenty to eat, but our meal ($25 with tip) struck us as a little pricey for what we got. It also seemed as if the menu descriptions in several cases were a little less than accurate. Still, there are always a few kinks to work out in any new business. The people running Ms. Kasey's are very friendly, the service is excellent and the pork chops are awfully good.

Munchie Machine rides, Slow Food prez visits

Getting the munchies: The Munchie Machine (piloted by Bethany Evens, at left) delivers everything from beer to sandwiches from West Asheville businesses.

What to do when you're hungry (or thirsty) on the West side

You're sitting at home, drinking with friends. You need more beer. And maybe a seven-layer burrito — or maybe a cheese pizza would hit the spot. Who do you call so that you don't have to hit the road after tying one on? Call Bethany Evens, who owns the Westside Munchie Machine, a West Asheville delivery service, and Sweet B's, the Machine's late-night counterpart. "We stay sober so you don't have to," says Evens.

Evens, a former accountant, kick-started her delivery concept after spending some time assisting West Asheville's Favilla's Pizza with its high delivery volume. The Munchie Machine grew somewhat organically out of that enterprise, taking on more and more West Asheville businesses — now Evens will deliver from any West Asheville restaurant.

Delivery service includes the Magnetic Field, Westville Pub, The Hop West (including the almost-famous ice cream for dogs), Viva Deli and more. If it's open, says Evens, you can order from it. "We want to offer delivery of the unique foods of West Asheville to help the small businesses grow," says Evens. "The point is to market to the local community to advertise and support the local businesses — to put them out there so people think to choose local restaurants when they purchase food."

But the delivery service is not limited to food alone. The West Village Market and Deli lies within the delivery area, says Evens. Could someone conceivably order a box of maxi-pads, a bottle of wine and a bar of chocolate, I ask? "Absolutely," says Evens. "We try to limit it to five items or less, especially if we have other deliveries to make."

Though the business model is designed to focus on and promote independent West Asheville businesses, both the Munchie Machine and Sweet B's will pick up just about anything, including tobacco products, beer and fast-food drive-through fare. Sweet B's, says Evens, specializes in delivering late-night party essentials. "Pretty much anything that's legal and available for purchase. It was really started with the intention to try to limit that amount of drunk drivers that are on the streets out here at nighttime."

For now, only West Asheville-dwellers can use the service (the Munchie Machine website has a helpful map so that you can determine whether you qualify). "For now, we deliver to West Asheville and the River Arts District. We're not sure how long it will take, but the intention is to bring the West to the rest, eventually. We're starting out small for now, and growing in our local community before we get too big."

Late-night delivery is available from Sweet B's Thursday through Saturday, from 10 p.m. until 1 a.m. The Munchie Machine is available Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. until 9 p.m. and on Saturdays from 10 a.m. until 8 p.m. Visit the website for payment details and delivery charges: westsidemunchiemachine.com. For more about Sweet B's, visit sweetb-delivers.com or call 458-5993.

"WE MAKE WARM FRIENDS"

Forty-three years ago we moved to West Asheville very much against my wishes. I didn't like living in the country. There were few houses, well scattered, and one four-roomed school house with big long hall down the center where we played on rainy days.

Eighteen years ago I moved back to West Asheville as a chosen spot to establish the home of my boyhood dreams. Lots of changes have been made in the community and most of them for the better. There are plenty of improvements yet to be made and it is my sincere desire to take part in each and every one of them.

NEW HOME FOR CLEANERS—The National Cleaners have been serving residents of West Asheville for 23 years, and have recently moved into their new building at 548 Haywood Road. W. F. Hensley, owner, opened his first office and plant at 540 Haywood Road 23 years ago next month. The new building is of brick and concrete block with a modern glass front. It is 32 by 90 feet, and contains the office, assembly and finishing rooms for the dry cleaning establishment.

Dry cleaning calls for more painstaking skill and knowledge than most of us realize or appreciate. Unfortunately, among those who don't seem to know it or care are a great many cleaners themselves.

Most customers are aware that dry cleaning is not dry cleaning. It is cleaning with fluid solvents to which a soap or detergent is often added.

Both petroleum and synthetic solvents are equally efficient. But the solvent treatment itself is one of the comparatively inexpensive and easy parts of the dry-cleaning process. It is more important to understand what should be done before and after the solvent is used. You will then know what you have a right to expect from the cleaner and what demands are unreasonable (as many are). And you can get better work for your money.

When your garment arrives at the cleaner's, an inspector examines it for tears, for trimmings that will not withstand the solvent process and must be removed and for stains that should be taken out beforehand. Some stains, like coffee, tend to become set by the heat of cleaning, drying and pressing, unless the cleaner removes them first.

The inspector sorts all garments according to color and material so that those of the same nature can go through the solvent together.

A worker removes the customary collection of lipsticks, matches, chewing gum, candy, razor blades, fountain pens, pencils, jewelery and small change from pockets and cleanses the pockets and creases of lint, tobacco and powder, sometimes by a special machine using brushes or vacuums. Lipsticks left in pockets and linings are the bane of the cleaning industry. They often dissolve in the solvent and spread damage through a whole batch of clothes. Plastic fountain pens dissolve too, with a supply of ink to complicate the damage.

With thirty to two hundred and fifty pounds of other clothes, your garments then go into a dry-cleaning washer (somewhat like your electric washer at home) that revolves and agitates them for about twenty minutes in the cleaning solution. This should remove all dirt, oil, fat, grease, wax and tar. Although the same fluid is used over and over again, machines constantly filter or distill it to keep it clean and pure.

Next the load goes into a whirling extractor to remove all solvent. Warm air chambers dry the clothes and remove odors.

From there they go to the most highly skilled worker in the plant, the spotter. His job is to remove the more stubborn stains. He should be able to recognize the cause of most stains, know the chemicals that will remove them and determine in advance how each fabric will react to his chemicals.

The bugaboo of the spotter is tannin, an acid in fruit juices, soft drinks, tea, coffee, beer and whiskey. Tannin is the same substance used in making dyes and preparing leather and is extremely difficult to get out of woolens without damaging the material. Chemical manufacturers have offered rewards for the discovery of a harmless eradicator. Often tannin stains do not show up until after cleaning and pressing, so if you've spilled anything from the tannin group on woolens, it's best to let the cleaner know. Liquor stains are doubly hard to remove because, in addition to the tannin, alcohol damages color.

The spotter decides whether a garment is to be washed. Many customers grow indignant when they learn the cleaner has washed their clothes. They could have done that themselves, they think, or had the laundry do it cheaper. For that reason, cleaners prefer to call it wet cleaning rather than washing and the difference between what they do and ordinary washing justifies the term.

After they have set unstable dyes with special agents, they wet-clean many articles individually on a table or board, with gentle soaps and hand brushing. Even when they use a washing machine it is slowed down to a gentle agitation at controlled temperature. Careful cleaners measure a garment before wet cleaning and stretch it back to the original size afterward with a treatment. They hardly ever wet-clean an article without first dry cleaning and the additional work costs the establishment about twenty percent more.

If a manufacturer cheats the customer with shoddy materials or workmanship, it generally shows up in the cleaning. But it is the cleaner who gets the complaint. Knowledge of some of the commoner manufacturing faults helps you to recognize the truth when your cleaner tells it. And you may be able to get satisfaction from the store where you purchased a defective article. Many cleaners will help you prepare your claim. Here are some of the more important:

Fancy buttons made of an inferior plastic often dissolve in the cleaning solvent, marring all the clothes around them. Poor dyes on buttons run. Paper backing disintegrates. One customer demanded seventy-five dollars from a cleaner because color spots ruined a well-tailored beige coat. What had happened was that when the spotter tried to steam out stains around the buttons, the color in them ran over the coat.

Belts, even on expensive costumes for women, are often backed with paper or artificial leather that disintegrates in the solvent. Often too the backings are fastened with a glue that may dissolve. Rubberized and poorly dyed interlinings dissolve and stain through. Decorative trim, poorly fastened, comes off. Most good cleaners won't attempt to clean such belts. It costs them two to three dollars to rip apart and repair a damaged one. Look on your belts for labels that say "Wash or dryclean."

Sequins made of gelatine dissolve in water, color often wears off easily and sometimes numbers of them are held on with a single thread that cannot withstand the mechanical action of the cleaning machines.

Draped dresses also are sometimes gathered with a single thread that breaks easily.

Interlinings of light-hued garments have appeared lately with a cheap black dye that runs through during cleaning. They are used mostly in collars for stiffening. The cleaner has no way of knowing about them without ripping the garment apart. When the black runs through, the only way he can save the garment is to wash out quickly all of the dye in the interlining. If it's still there when you get the article back, it's too late to do anything about it other than make a claim to the manufacturer for damages.

Cotton dresses, as they become finer, are being sent to cleaners more frequently, yet many manufacturers use colors that run together in cleaning, usually leaving a pinkish effect.

Poor dyes aren't always apparent after the first cleaning. Analyses have showed many women to be wrong when they complained to the cleaner, "It must have been your fault it didn't fade when it was cleaned before." Some of these dyes will hold up for four or five cleanings then wash out.

Unavoidable shrinkage may result when you buy without a guarantee against it. Many raincoats, of all things, shrink when wet, yet the light-colored ones have to be wet-cleaned. When buying, translate the shrinkage precentage on the label to inches. Five percent shrinkage means two and a half inches shorter on a fifty-inch dress and one inch narrower for a twenty-six-inch waist. Garments that contain sizing sometimes begin to shrink, after several cleanings have gradually dissolved the filling.

Price of a costume is no guarantee against such defects. You must rely on the reputation of the manufacturer and retailer. Some of the most expensive costumes contain some of the shoddiest materials and workmanship.

Unwittingly, we the customers may be responsible for a lot or damage blamed on cleaners. For instance:

Cold-wave permanents, if carelessly handled, can eat dye on garments they touch, although you may not know it until the heat of the cleaner's drying process brings it out.

Perfume can remove color and leave dye rings. Sometimes it leaves a resinous stain that cannot be removed. Keep it off your clothes unless the maker specifically recommends it for such use.

Dentifrices may spatter unremovable spots on your dressing gown if you brush your teeth without protecting it.

Dirt tends to set in neglected materials, particularly if they have been hung in a warm closet.

Moth damage doesn't always show until after cleaning loosens weakened fibers. Virtually nothing in the cleaning process can make a hole like a moth's, so when garments come back with such holes it isn't fair to blame the cleaner.

Ironing a stained garment may set the stain permanently. If deodorants are ironed in without washing, the acid may weaken the fabric to the point where it gives way at the cleaners.

If you have a claim against your cleaner set a fair price allowing for the use you have already had out of the article. If it is lost, give him thirty days to find it. Then if he refuses an adequate settlement, see if your Better Business Bureau can help you.

Remove everything from pockets by turning them inside out—they'll clean better that way too. Even if the cleaner's staff inspects, they may be careless, so it's a good precaution to remove fancy buttons too. Few cleaners ever remove shoulder pads but you'd do well to take them out, because some shrink and harden, ignite and burn or disintegrate in the cleaning process.

Some fabrics won't wash, some won't clean. Find out when you buy them. And don't throw away special instructions addressed to the cleaner that come with many garments—give them to him.

If your husband likes his sleeves without creases and the cleaner's staff forgets, try turning up the bottom of each sleeve. Most pressers understand this sign. If you don't indicate otherwise, they'll press the sleeves with creases because it's easier.

You can remove pure grease, fat, wax or tar yourself with household cleaning agents (noninflammable for safety's sake) but remember, a spotter never rubs a stain hard and neither should you—you may chafe the fabric or damage the color. The fresher the stain the easier it is to remove.

If you have tried to remove stains unsuccessfully yourself, tell the cleaner what you used.

It pays to keep on patronizing the same cleaner if his work is satisfactory. Regular customers get better treatment and prompter fuller settlement of claims.

Examining the financial statements of average cleaners, I found that their profits are not excessive by modern standards and prices are generally moderate, frequently even too low to allow decent work. The average price per garment is around a dollar in the north, eighty cents in the south and a dollar-twenty on the west coast. Some cleaners charge extra for difficult jobs and often that is justified and will assure you more careful work.

Of course, you shouldn't expect much individual care or attention for your clothes at cut rates. Generally the cheap cleaner gives them little more than a solvent bath and quick pressing. However, price is not a certain indicator of quality. Some cut-rate cleaners try to do a thorough job and some de luxe cleaners chisel abominably.

When you've found a good cleaner however, you need have little fear for the life of your finest clothes. Iowa State College experiments revealed that the cleaning process is remarkably easy on garments. In fact, a hundred cleanings will take less strength away from woolen fabrics than the sharp cutting edges of unnoticed dirt.

HOW TO REMOVE STAINS

BANKING TABLES
Rules For Computing Interest

The following is an approximate way to estimate the interest on any principal for any number of days. When the principal contains cents, mark off four places from the right of the result to express the interest in dollars and cents. When the principal contains dollars only, mark off two places.

2%—Multiply the principal by the number of days to run, and divide by 180.

4%—Multiply the principal by the number of days to run and divide by 90.

5%—Multiply by number of days and divide by 72.

6%—Multiply by number of days and divide by 60.

FIRST AID

What To Do In Certain Emergencies

First aid is the first care given to help injury or sudden illness until necessary treatment can be given by a physician.

Cuts and Scratches: If severe, stop the bleeding by direct pressure on the wound with a sterile pad. When the bleeding ceases, paint with 2 per cent iodine and let it dry thoroughly before applying bandage or Band-Aid.

Open Wounds: Clean dirty or greasy wounds with high grade benzine, then apply half strentgh iodine. All open wounds should be covered with gauze or bandage. Do not touch wound with fingers. Do not use anything but accepted antiseptics, or blood poisoning may be caused.

Burns: For severe burns call a physician at once. To slight burns apply sterile gauze wrung out in a solution of warm water and baking soda, or apply the 5 per cent tannic acid jelly from your first aid kit. Never put iodine on a burn. Apply any bandages loosely.

Poison Ivy and Sumac: Wash thoroughly with soap and warm water. Apply dressings kept wet with a very strong solution of Epsom salts and cold water; or else apply a thick paste made of soap and warm water, which should be allowed to dry and remain on all night.

Insect Stings: Remove "sting" and apply household ammonia or a paste made of baking soda.

Sprains: Violent stretching or twisting of a joint may cause a sprain. It is characterized by pain and rapid swelling. Keep injured part raised, on pillow if an ankle, in sling if a wrist. Apply compresses wrung out of cold water, or ice bags. Send for a doctor if the case is severe.

Fainting: Keep patient lying down and lower head. Loosen any tight clothing. Apply ammonia inhalant or smelling salts to nose and sprinkle face with cold water.

Shock: Lay patient on back, head low, loosen clothing around neck, chest and abdomen. Keep warm with blankets and hot water bottles. If conscious and able to swallow, give hot, strong coffee, hot milk, or half a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in water.

Fracture: Apply splints reaching above and below the joints of the fractured bone, to permit moving without pain or danger. Three persons are needed for lifting on stretcher—one at head and shoulders, one of hips, and the other at the legs.

Eye Injuries: Loose particles may be removed from eyelid with a clean handkerchief or a bit of cotton rolled on a toothpick. Particles embedded in the eyeball or lid must always be left to a surgeon, or blindness may result. Use cold compress temporarily to relieve pain until doctor arrives.

Sunstroke: Cool head and body—especially head—as quickly as possible with cold compresses, ice bags, or a cool bath. Never give stimulants. Keep head slightly raised. Treat heat exhaustion same as shock.

Fits: Do not attempt to hold patient down. Place any small object between teeth to prevent biting tongue. Let sleep after the attack has passed, as exhaustion usually follows.

Dog Bite: Wash wound with running water, and apply tincture of iodine. Bandage and take to doctor immediately to decide whether Pasteur or Vaccine Treatment is advisable. Have the dog examined by the local health authorities for possible evidence of rabies.

FOR POISONING

First: Send for a physician.

Second: Induce vomiting by tickling throat with feather or finger. Drink hot water or strong mustard and water. Swallow sweet oil or white of eggs.

Special Poisons and Antidotes

Acids: Muriatic, Oxalic, Acetic Sulphuric (Oil of Vitriol), Nitric (Aqua Fortis).
Ant.: Soap suds, magnesia, lime-water.

Prussic Acid: Cyanide of Potassium.
Ant.: Ammonia in water. Dash water in face. Give stimulants.

Carbolic Acid:
Ant.: Flour and water, mucilaginous drinks.

Alkalies: Potash, Lye, Hartshorn, Ammonia.
Ant.: Vinegar or lemon juice in water.

Arsenic: Rat Poison, Paris Green.
Ant.: Milk, raw eggs, sweet oil, lime-water, flour and water.

Bug Poison: Lead, Saltpetre, Corrosive Sublimate, Sugar of Lead, Blue Vitriol.
Ant.: White of eggs or milk in large doses.

Chloroform: Chloral, Ether.
Ant.: Give emetic, keep patient aroused; apply mustard plaster over heart and calves of legs; use artificial respiration.

Carbonate of Soda: Copperas, Cobalt.
Ant.: Soap suds and mucilaginous drinks.

Iodine: Antimony, Tartar Emetic.
Ant.: Starch and water, chalk, magnesia, starchy food, strong tea. Apply external heat.

Mercury and its Salts.
Ant.: Whites of Eggs, Milk Mucilages.

Opium: Morphine, Laudanum, Paregoric, Soothing Powders or Syrups.
Ant.: Strong coffee, mustard or ipecac as emetic. Keep awake and moving. Keep warm.

Bamford To Build New Bledsoe Theater In West Asheville

Asheville Citizen-Times
September 1, 1928

ERECT MODERN PLAYHOUSE ON HAYWOOD ROAD

Will Be Ready For Use June First Bledsoe Announces

PLANS INCLUDE OTHER BUILDINGS

Bamford Lease Has Renewal Clause After Five Years

Construction of a vaudeville and motion picture theater on Haywood Road, in West Asheville, was announced yesterday by J. T. Bledsoe, well known realtor and developer.

The theater building has been leased to Carl Bamford, operator of Majestic and Princess theaters, for five years. The lease contract has a renewal clause of an additional five years, it was announced.

The amusement house will be erected on the Bledsoe lot, adjacent to the corner lot of Haywood Road and Mildred Avenue. It will front 84 feet on Haywood with depth of 140 feet. The seating capacity will be 350.

Fireproof

The building will be entirely fire-proof, the heating plant being separated from the main building. There will be no basement to the structure, the floor resting on wooden sills laid on steel imbedded in concrete.

Construction will start immediately, and the theater will be ready for opening sometime between June 1 and 15, Mr. Bledsoe announced yesterday.

The corner lot of Haywood Road and Mildred Road has been leased by Mr. Bledsoe to the Texas Oil Company for ten years. A filling station will be erected on the property by the owner.

Immediately to the rear of the filling station, on Mildred Avenue, Mr. Bledsoe has leased the garage building for five years.

The Bledsoe building on the opposite corner of the Haywood and Mildred is being finished. Most of the store places have been rented, while negotiations are pending for the others.

Other Structures

On Mildred Avenue, Mr. Bledsoe is building two residences for J. H. Nicholson at aggregate cost of $8,000. The development of this section is the result of Mr. Bledsoe's faith in West Asheville.

Recent announcements by the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, and the Carolina Powdr and Light Company that approximately $300,000 will be spent in expanding their West Asheville services have been a boon to business in that section. The light company has rented space in the Bledsoe building for its temporary West Asheville office.

Eliza Sydney checks on pie pastries cooling near a window Friday afternoon. Sydney and Ben Herring are the owners of Pies in Disguise, a local pie business that is celebrating its second anniversary this weekend. ERIN BRETHAUER/EBRETHAU@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

NOT JUST A PIE IN THE SKY

Through hard work, Asheville duo make delicious dreams reality

Carol Montsinger
COLUMNIST

When I grow up, I want be to Eliza Sydney.

It's way too late for me: She was born just a year before me, but I feel as if this 27-year-old wrings the most out of each and every day.

So, that almost-365-day head start she's got on me is enough to keep me forever a few steps behind.

In all seriousness, Sydney is simply inspiring and represents a segment of Asheville's community who seem to do so much — she's a pie maker, is an exercise instructor and harpist — and balance career, ambition and fun with great gusto.

"We are people who like to keep busy," Sydney said, humbly dismissing my query about how she and her partner in pie, Ben Herring, 29, manage to expertly balance their Pies in Disguise with other jobs and hobbies. "We don't get bored often."

"This is a town of a lot of jacks-of-all-trades," she later said about her fellow go-getters. "I think that's why Asheville is always recognized as a happy place to live. People are really able to pursue so many different passions here, even if it's simply going for a mountain bike ride every Wednesday."

I first met Sydney and Herring for an assignment about the Pies in Disguise's opening. Now they will celebrate the business' second anniversary with a party at Pisgah Brewing in Black Mountain at 7 p.m. today.

Sydney appears to be truly energized by the support of Asheville in all of her areas of interest, particularly with her home-baked goodies.

"People recognize what we are trying to do with local ingredients, and people are willing to support that," she said. Supporting local food, product and people is certainly a passion of folks here. For Herring and Sydney, "our passion is our business," Sydney said.

Even if you are on Team Cake, this young duo's enthusiasm and dedication should inspire you to celebrate tonight. There will be music, beer and, of course, Sydney's delicious confections spotlighting local ingredients, such as her popular mixed berry.

The pies taste fabulous, but they are also pure fun to look at: Pecan pies go incognito with a giant crust mustache in the center of its eyeless face. Sydney strongly encourages party-goers to go in disguise to Pisgah Brewery

This sense of humor is obvious in Sydney's approach to her other job as an exercise coordinator at Rush Fitness on Patton Avenue. It reflects off her old-school kicks she spray-painted gold for a dance performance; her iPod even got in on the fun by suddenly playing a James Brown Christmas song during a cycling class one evening.

Comedy is even the source of her classical musical inspiration: She said she picked up the harp, which she plays at weddings, art exhibit openings, local bands and the like, when she was 8 because she loved Harpo Marx from the Marx Brothers classic flicks.

Sydney estimates she dedicates about 15-20 hours a week to the pies they sell at the Asheville City Market, Desoto Lounge, Double Decker Coffee and Desserts, and West Village Market and Deli (They also take direct orders). She is, however, full time at the Rush, teaching cycling and other group fitness classes.

"I am really fortunate to have the job I do (as a fitness coordinator) and to also have this on the side," she said. "When we started Pies in Disguise, we had lived in Asheville for a time, and we realized that we had to get creative and have another source of income to fall back on."

Herring is also an accomplished stonemason. Since I first met the duo, I've seen Herring pedaling down Haywood Road a couple of times on the official Pies in Disguise delivery bike.

And I was pleasantly surprised to find Sydney behind the bike handles of my very first cycling class at the Rush.

I'm not one for group classes, or for bikes for that matter. But I desperately needed to shake up my dull exercise routine before my flirtation with couch turned into a long-term relationship.

And not only did Sydney make me feel welcome, she kind of made spin fun? I can't say that turning into a puddle of sweat in 60 minutes is exactly a total hoot, but her encouraging attitude, emphasis on education and sweet music playlist made me come back. And back. And now six months later, it's a part of weekly stress relief routine.

It's so refreshing to have Sydney, a pie princess, also be so dedicated to fun, healthy fitness. I feel constantly bombarded with conflicting messages about food, body image and working out.

For Sydney, it's simply about moderation, except for when it comes to enjoying all things. Fun should be excessive, decadent.

"It's all about moderation," she said. "Fitness has to be fun, and pies have to be tasty."

One thing Sydney and Herring don't do a good job of fitting in is regularly acknowledging all they do (Sydney also actively supports Meals on Wheels). So the party is a jubilant compensator.

"It's nice to really plan this out and really celebrate," Sydney said. "We are not one to pat ourselves on the back."

This is the opinion of Carol Motsinger. She can be reached at cmotsinger@citizen-times.com.

Pineapple Jack's a great place for a quick meal

WEST ASHEVILLE — One of the best things about living in West Asheville is that everything is within walking distance.When I saw the first signs of life at Pineapple Jack's, I wasn't too excited, since it seemed it was just going to be an ice cream and smoothie place. When I found out the menu included sandwiches and salads, I decided to investigate.

Pineapple Jack's is the second outing for owner Chad Pharr, who previously owned Fat Cats in Cullowhee. The space is small, but bright and cheery with pictures of pineapples everywhere.

Over the course of three visits, I carted takeout back to the family eagerly waiting at the house.

My wife loved the Tango in Blue salad ($5.95), a generous portion of mixed greens, crumbled blue cheese, walnuts and dried cranberries with raspberry vinaigrette. Junior got the Old Favorite ($3), a peanut butter, banana, honey and raisin sandwich that kept him happily occupied for a while. I ordered the Jack of Clubs ($6.95), a bodacious sandwich with turkey, ham, bacon, Swiss, provolone, leaf lettuce, tomato and basil mayonnaise. The sandwich came on really good multi-grain bread, and the basil mayo had just a hint of heat to it, a very nice touch. On a later visit, I tried the Jack's Roast ($5.95), a heaping helping of deli roast beef on the same bread with Swiss, leaf lettuce and the basil mayo. It was also first rate.

There's plenty to like about Pineapple Jack's, a neat little sandwich and smoothie place on Haywood Road in West Asheville.

The wraps sound pretty good, also. Overall, this is a great little place for a quick lunch or a carry-out dinner. It is well worth checking out.

PINNER'S DRUG STORE BEGAN BACK IN 1933

Pinner's Drug Store, 619 Haywood Road in West Asheville, originated in 1933 at the corner of Woodfin and Market Streets, according to Beaman Pinner, owner and founder. The company moved to its present location in 1941.

Mr. and Mrs. Pinner (Evelyn) have one son, Zack, who is a senior at Lee Edwards High School, and quarterback on the school football team.

PINNER

Pinner is past president of the Cosmic Club, W. N. C. Drug Club, the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and First Commander of the West Asheville Memorial Legion Post No. 335, serving a second term. He is a veteran of World War II.

Mrs. Pinner is president of the West Asheville Legion Auxiliary.

Beaman Pinner Dies At Age 76

From Staff Reports

Beaman L. Pinner, whose drug store in West Asheville was a community focal point for almost half a century, died Sunday in an Asheville hospital.

Some mothers in residential areas along that section of Haywood Road didn't think they could get their children through a minor illness without Beaman Pinner.

Pinner, 76, was an active member of the community, and from his home at 148 Brucemont Circle or Pinner's Drugstore at 619 Haywood Road, he kept in touch with the people he served. He served for 17 years on the school board.

Owner and operator of Pinner's Drugstore, he could be found at the soda fountain mixing shakes and building banana splits as well as in the prescription department dispensing medicine.

The small soda fountain, of the Roaring '20s style, is backed by mirrors framed in stained glass and mahogany. Pinner brought it with him when he moved from Woodfin Street in Asheville in 1941.

Pinner, a native of Pomaria, S.C., took over a drugstore in Woodfin Apartments in 1933. When he moved it to West Asheville he remodeled a building on Haywood Road that had been a neighborhood grocery. His drugstore became a favorite gathering place for children from schools in the area.

Pinner was appointed to the Asheville City Board of Education in 1947. He was vice chairman of the board for a time, and at one point served for some time as temporary chairman.

He was a graduate of Newberry College and an Army veteran of World War II.

Pinner was a member of North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association, Asheville Cosmic Club and St. Mark's Lutheran Church.

He was a charter member and past commander of West Asheville American Legion Post No. 335 and a charter member of West Asheville Business Association. He was past president of WNC Drug Club and Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Surviving are his wife, Evelyn Chester Pinner; a son, Zach E. Pinner of Hilton Head, S.C.; and a grandchild.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the chapel of Groce Funeral Home. The Rev. Lewis O. Dasher will officiate. Burial will be in Green Hills Cemetery.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Tuesday at the funeral home.

Memorials may be made to St. Mark's Lutheran Church, 10 North Liberty St., Asheville, N.C. 28801, or to Buncombe County Chapter of American Cancer Society, 260 Merrimon Ave., Asheville, N.C. 28801.

Corporation Purchases West Asheville Stores

Tri-State Hardware Organization To Open Business

The purchase of the hardware concerns of H. Pumford and Son and M. A. Ingle and company, of West Asheville and plans for the opening of a large hardware business at 717 Haywood road, were announced yesterday by officials of the Southern Hardware corporation, operating in the Carolinas and Alabama. The amount involved in the transactions was not divulged.

The large building which is to house the new concern is being entirely renovated and painted with attractive display windows in front. Inside a part of the immense and varied stock of hardware to be carried by the company is being arranged with every item on display. With the work well underway the store will be opened soon, it was said.

Formal Opening

A formal opening to be announced later will be held and in connection with this a unique advertising plan will be carried out. The manager, D. L. Moyde, is to distribute throughout West Asheville homes 1,000 covers to aluminum pots with cards. These cards can be presented at the store on the opening day and the remainder of the utensil will be given to the bearer. A representative of a well known paint concern will be at the store to give painting and paint for a number of houses will be distributed in a contest to be held.

Large Corporation

The concern is incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000 W. B. Gamble, South Carolina, J. E. Ridings, of Forest City, Mr. Moyde and others are the incorporators. Mr. Moyde will have charge of the West Asheville store and will make his home here. Mr. Gamble is also spending sometime in West Asheville assisting in the organization of the new store and in tentative arrangements for the expansion of the business.

Plan Enka Store

Contract for the construction of a large building at Enka where a second store will be established has been awarded, Mr. Moyde stated yesterday. Construction work will begin soon and will be rushed to completion so that the store can be stocked.

The concern is now operating hardware stores in the Carolinas and will open a new business in Forest City April 1. The stocks of the two West Asheville concerns were purchased with the exception of the plumbing business of H. Pumford and Son which will be conducted by Mr. Pumford and his son.

The local store in accordance with the policy of others owned and operated by the corporation will be conducted on a distinct organization basis, officials have announced. Prior to the arranging of stock 57 hardware stores in four states were visited, Mr. Moyde said, and the most practical and modern ideas pertaining to stock arrangement and organization are being embodied in an attractive and convenient display system.

The concern has been in business for 14 years and is well known throughout the Carolinas and Alabama.

ARMY CAPTAIN OPENS HARDWARE STORE WITH 5 YEARS IN SERVICE

The Quality Hardware and Electric Company opens for business today at 229 Haywood road, West Asheville, with a well selected line of goods representing leading manufacturers of the country. Capt. John McMullen, just released from the Army and a new comer to Asheville, is manager of the firm. Capt. McMullen who has had five years of service in our armed forces, participated in some of the hottest engagements in North Africa. Sicily and Italy.

A number of well known lines are on the Quality Hardware and Electric Company's shelves including Lucas brand paints and varnishes and Kemtone wall paints, Stromberg Carlson radios, Launderall washing machines, Filter Queen vacuum cleaners, farm accessories including lanterns, plow points, bridles, straps, garden tools and Ferry's seeds. There is ample parking space in front of the store for patrons. This is a distinct advantage to potential buyers that many Asheville stores in congested sections of the city do not enjoy. Capt. McMullen said that his firm would have a number of scarce items in stock. An electrical appliance repair department will be maintained.

Although Capt. McMullen, who was born in Lexington, Ky., in 1918, has not lived in Western North Carolina for any time, he married Miss Nell Crawford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grover L. Crawford, of 31 Hilltop Road, Biltmore Forest. Mr. Crawford is owner of the Tuxedo Feed Store at Biltmore.

Capt. McMullen has had a colorful career in the Ordnance department of the Army with the Second Corps of the First Army and later with the Fifth and Seventh Armies. As a second lieutenant, he was at historic Kasserine Pass in Tunisia, where the Germans came back with one of their vicious last-ditch stands where the courage and steadiness of our men finally turned the day. Capt. McMullen saw something of the late Gen. George Patton in Sicily. He was inclined to think that the soldier slapping incident had been over-emphasized, as officers and men alike were under tremendous pressure during the Sicily campaign and incidents sometimes happened that would not have occurred at normal times.

Capt. McMullen expressed the belief that the Italians are wedded to the tradition of carrying out orders and not using initiatives. The mass of the population adjusts itself to whatever element is in control at the time. He said that in Sicily the people are of a very low class and practically uncivilized. However, the further northward one goes, the people become more progressive. When you travel up the "boot" to Turin and Milan the natives are comparable with citizens in our own country.

Record Bar Will Open Next Week In West Asheville

The Record Bar at 721 Haywood will probably open the last of next week. Mrs. Mae E. Frady will operate the bar, carrying a complete line of Decca, Victor, Columbia and other top line records, including classical, hymns, hillbilly, jazz and albums.

The Bar will also have a complete line of sheet music, gifts, novelties, souvenirs and greeting cards.

The interior of the store is being completely remodeled. Record players will be installed so records can be heard before purchase is made.

A (while you wait) photo booth will be installed as soon as delivery can be made on cameras.

Another service is offered at the bar. Pocket cards and photos are permanently sealed in plastic—giving 24-hour service on this work. This is a new service in Asheville. It was used by the Army, Navy and war plants to preserve identification cards. A complete display can be seen at the bar.

Mrs. Frady is a native of Asheville, having spent the past seven years in California. She now resides in Asheville with her husband and son, Donald.

West Asheville Garage Offers 24-Hour Service

Automobiles have a funny way of becoming unmanageable at the most inopportune times, but the motorist needn't worry about that, because the West Asheville Garage and Body Works stays open 24 hours a day and can take care of any kind of automobile repairs that might be needed

This firm is now under the management of Charlie Reese and Horace Self. Both of these men are well known in this area for their skill in automobile work. Mr. Reese has been engaged in the business for over 12 years and formerly worked for Atkins Garage.

According to Mr Reese and Mr. Self their firm is the only one in the city offering all night repair work. This firm also maintains a 24-hour wrecker service.

A specialty is made of wreck rebuilding, and Mr. Reese declares that he has in his employ one of the best body men in the city. Auto painting is another feature of automotive work in which this firm excels.

Spring is only a short time away and many motorists will want to have their car tuned up, oil and lubrication changed, and their car in general overhauled. All this will be gladly attended to by the West Asheville Garage and Body Works, who runs a complete Cities Service Station. Any one of all these services may be obtained by telephoning 2636.

THE ULTIMATE IN CAKES—Quality Bakery produced this giant cake weighing approximately 800 pounds for Sears, Roebuck and Company. It contains some 125 dozen eggs 125 pounds of shortening, more than 150 pounds of sugar and more than 150 pounds of flour. Baker A. F. Felthaus puts on the finishing touches here. The cake will be served to Sears customers tomorrow night when the store celebrates its birthday.

Stylist enjoys life's curves

Editor's Note:

"People are often the last ones to recognize the drama in their own lives. They marvel at the adventures of others, but don't look inside to see that their own lives hold just as much possibility."

– Erving Polster, psychotherapist, in his book, "Everyone's Life is Worth a Novel."

Magazines and news shows have churned out plenty of articles and shows on famous people of the millennium: JFK, Martin Luther King Jr., Billy Graham and others.

But just as much adventure and drama, and pleasure and pain, lies in the lives of people you pass on the street. With that in mind, the Citizen-Times randomly chose 13 Western North Carolinians who agreed to share their life stories with us, and you.

ASHEVILLE – For Kathy thbone, life is a matter of stylish clips and double dips.

When she's not cutting hair at the Haywood Road salon she's owned 21 years, Rathbone's likely making funnel cakes or dipping ice cream at a concession stand she and husband Roy operate at Smiley's Flea Market in Fletcher.

"I love doing what I'm doing, and I have such a good clientele," she said.

At Kathy's Beauty Shop, that clientele ranges from distinguished blue-haired ladies to children. Some of her customers have been going to the shop for 40 years, and Rathbone inherited their business when she took over the salon.

KATHY RATHBONE

AGE: 47
OCCUPATION: Hair stylist, concession stand operator
FAMILY: Husband Roy, daughter Jeannie, grandson Timmy, stepdaughters Rhonda and Andrea RESIDES: West Asheville
ORIGINALLY FROM: West Asheville

FACES in the CROWD

PHIL ALEXANDER/CITIZEN-TIMES

Ethel Metcalf, seated, is not just a regular customer of stylist Kathy Rathbone. She is also her mother.

"A lot of people think, why don't (I) move to another section of town," she said. "But why should I? I don't have any overhead; I own the building."

"They always know we're going to have a fresh pot of coffee on," said stylist Vanette Baldwin, who has been with Rathbone from the beginning.

In fact, when Rathbone bought the place, she couldn't even legally cut hair. She had her training in electrolysis, the electric-stimulated removal of hair. She took on Baldwin to run the salon while Rathbone went to hair school for her cosmetologist's license.

"I always wanted to do hair, but my mother and daddy (Ethel and the late Gene Metcalf) wouldn't let me," Rathbone says. "They made me go to school to be a lab technician."

But working in a doctor's lab wasn't for her, either. "I worked half a day for Dr. Claude Frazier and went home for lunch and never went back," she said. "I hated it."

That's when she entered electrolysis school and began work at Ivey's.

But anyone wanting Rathbone to remove hair needs a doctor's referral, particularly because of one incident.

Rathbone said a man, claiming to be a model for bikini underwear, arrived at the studio and wanted more than his tan lines retouched. "He walked in and took it off – all off," Rathbone said.

She refused to do the work, instead calling her father, who in a number of choice words told her she should leave.

Roy and Kathy Rathbone married in 1995, while he was still a district chief with Asheville Fire Department. But a back injury caused when a floor collapsed at a fire scene forced Roy Rathbone to retire.

They entered the concession business, buying Seattle Espresso at the Asheville Regional Airport.

After helping her daughter and son-in-law with a Canton ice-cream stand last summer, the Rathbones set up a trailer and Roy converted it into a concession stand.

Their business at Smiley's has increased five-fold just since July, when they set it up. "From the time we get there on Sunday morning and the sun breaks through, I am frying (funnel cakes) until it's over," Kathy Rathbone said. "It's really not like work. We're tired, but we love it."

Mrs. Ida Rhoads' Opens Up-To-Date West Asheville Restaurant and Bus Station

West Asheville's most modern dining center will open tomorrow morning at 728 Haywood Road under management of Mrs. Ida Rhoads who has served a host of patrons in past years. The name of the new restaurant is a mystery, as Mrs. Rhoads wishes her customers to decide this matter. All suggestions should be in Mrs. Rhoads hands by next Wednesday, and the name will be announced in next week's West Asheville News. Five dollars is offered for the winning name.

Mrs. Rhoads has large and spacious quarters at the intersection of Haywood and Brevard roads, probably the busiest corner in West Asheville. As all east-west bound buses stop at the door, the restaurant will prove popular with the traveling public as well as Asheville folks.

A complete fountain service will be offered by Mrs. Rhoads restaurant, with emphasis put on ice cream, which will be served in as many flavors as war time restrictions will permit. Those wanting sandwiches will find them in many varieties. Patrons who prefer individual table service for family or social meals will be accommodated. The color scheme of the spacious dining center is in strawberry pink and brown.

Since 1942 Mrs. Rhoads has operated the Rhoades Ice Cream Parlor, 687 Haywood road, where she built up a large following. These patrons will be glad to know that she has opened larger and more commodious quarters, where more complete service will be given.

Mrs. Rhoads said yesterday that distinctive and delicious dishes will be prepared in a modern gas and electric kitchen. A roast chicken luncheon will be served tomorrow, the opening day, at a popular price. Sunday mid-day dinners will be served each week.

Mrs. Rhoads Restaurant is especially well located on the bus line to cater to office workers and others desiring breakfasts and evening dinners. Seasonal dishes will be a specialty. During the tourist season those who want luncheons packed before leaving for the Great Smoky Mountains National Park or other scenic spots can make arrangements with Mrs. Rhoads.

Only well tested food products such as Biltmore Dairy milk, cheese and butter, Carson's ice cream, Asheville Packing Company's hot dogs, Colonial bread, and Brooks' seafood are used at Mrs. Rhoads Restaurant. Meals may be topped off by the men folks by smoking Clark Fowler's Hav-a-Tampa cigars. Asheville Linen Service supply table linen, aprons and towels.

"WHAT'S IN A NAME?" FIVE BUCKS TO WINNER

Shakespeare once said "What's in a name?" The answer is $5.00.

Mrs. Ida Rhoads is offering $5.00 to the person submitting the most appropriate name for the new restaurant and bus station she is opening Saturday morning, February 24, at 728 Haywood Road, West Asheville. All suggestions must be mailed or submitted to Mrs. Rhoades at the above address not later than next Wednesday. The winning name will be announced next week in the West Asheville News.

Rocky's Hot Chicken Shack Reopens in West Asheville

Rocky

Rocky's Hot Chicken Shack first opened in Arden, NC in February, 2009. It didn't take long for the word to spread. Read my article, "Hot Chicken Sissy!" here. But even with a pretty good level of success, Rocky closed down the shack.

There was a huge outcry, which led to the formation of a Facebook Group:Â Afterburn – aka "Bring Back Rocky's Hot Chicken Shack" put together by what must be Rocky's number one fan,Â Jason Nicolai. Jason has kept everyone up to date on Rocky's journey with such energy and enthusiasm, it was completelyÂ contagious!

Gradually word spread that Rocky was looking for a new location, somewhere in Asheville. Then came the announcement: Rocky's Hot Chicken Shack will be reopening on Friday, July 1, 2011. And it has!

They've done a fantastic job this time with location (big enough for a crowd with plenty of parking), a website, Facebook Page and a Twitter account.

I wasn't able to get there for the opening, but here are two excellent accounts:

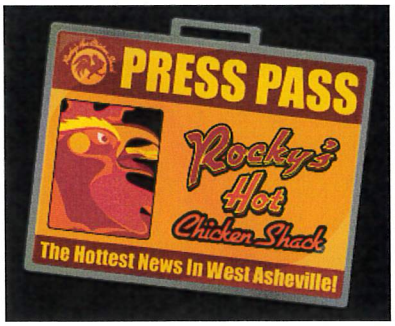
The Shack Is Finally Back
Rocky's Hot Chicken Shack Re-Opens in West Asheville on July 1, 2011



Asheville, NC (June 24, 2011) —A little more than a year after closing its doors in Arden, local Rocky Lindsley's hot chicken shack is finally back and set to re-open on July 1 in its new West Asheville location at 1455 Patton Avenue.

Rocky's Hot Chicken Shack first opened its doors in 2009 and quickly gained a cult following as word spread about a hole-in-the-wall that served mercilessly hot chicken with a ghost chili sauce that was rumored to induce psychedelic experiences.

In fact, the shack became so popular that many evenings, late-comers and repeat offenders were greeted by a closed door and Rocky's hand-written note: "Sorry, ran out of chicken." Demand became so great, that Rocky's one-man operation couldn't keep up. In April 2010, Rocky closed the shack to avoid burnout. What he didn't anticipate was the public outcry (and downright begging) that ensued.

Fortunately for Asheville's hot-chicken lovers, Rocky's devout following included a former restaurateur and retail designer who partnered with Rocky to re-open the shack with a more sustainable business model. Six months after closing his doors, a plan to reopen them was in place.

Rocky and business partner Lauren Cundiff and their crew have spent the past several months renovating the new shack, installing pressure fryers, and researching home-cooked sides, local brews and wines. Although the new building seats over 100 and has an expanded menu of sides and drinks, the heart of the shack—face-melting chicken—remains exactly the same.

Rocky's hot chicken is still mercilessly hot (with Plain for the timid), served three ways (breast, legs or wings) with pickles on white bread to soak up the addictive sauce.

Open Tuesday-Saturday

11:00 AM to 9:00 PM
11:00 AM to 10:00 PM Friday & Saturday

Closed Sunday and Monday

In the coming months, Rocky's other habit, live music, will be a regular feature on Saturday nights from 7:30 to 9:30.

Information

Description

Rocky's Hot Chicken Shack is the home of Asheville's best hot fried chicken. Rocky's is no frills, just seriously hot, deliriously good fried chicken in heat levels from plain to extra hot (affectionately named Mt. St. Hell No!). Rocky's ghost chili is legendary, and those who claim to have eaten it must be prepared to prove it.

Rocky's has been described by local food critics as "addictive, mercilessly hot, psychedelic and face-melting," among other things, including those we can't mention here.

Rocky's serves its hot fried chicken with an assortment of soul food sides that change daily. Ingredients are sourced locally and organic, when available, and its chicken comes from responsibly farmed, free range rebels.

Rocky's serves locally crafted and specialty beers and a variety of wines. And, of course, sweet tea and lemonade. Meals are also served with water (you'll probably need it). And we offer "The Antidote," Rocky's frosty ice cream sandwiches that deliver a tasty cool down after the meltdown.

Rocky's is currently completing renovations on its new West Asheville location and is scheduled to re-open in May. Which gives our devoted diners time to build up their stamina.

Back to the Shack!

by Mackensy Lunsford on 12/29/2010
Related topics: food, Rocky's Chicken Shack

After a long hiatus, Rocky's Hot Chicken Shack is back, serving what many claim to be the most addictive fried chicken in town.

Rocky's gained an underground following for serving mercilessly hot, sometimes ghost chili pepper-spiked bird to all who dared to venture into an aesthetically challenged squat building on the side of Highway 25 in Arden. The Shack was shuttered earlier this year under rather vague circumstances.

To owner Rocky Lindsley, it was rather simple. He was tired, his wife was sick of it, and his landlord was thinking about charging him more.

It also turns out that Lindsley was blissfully unaware of exactly how popular his product had become. "I was constantly running into people who were so upset, and it was very flattering," Lindsley says. "I was sort of surprised at the reaction." A few chicken-addicted potential investors even approached him about reopening the Shack.

"It blew me away," says Lindsley, who says that all of the attention was "a catalyst for me to partner up with these investors and get back into it."

Ready for mind-blowingly hot chicken? Yes, yes you are. — photo by Jonathan Welch

Lindsley says he's all warmed up ready to dive back into the business of selling his secret-recipe bird, modeled after fried chicken from Nashville hole-in-the-wall, Prince's. "I made a test run for myself and kicked my own ass in my own kitchen, so I've still got it," he says.

Lindsley reports the Shack will reopen in West Asheville in mid-spring. "We've got a location and it looks like it's a done deal, but there's some hoops we've got to jump through before it's settled, so I don't want to jinx anything by giving the location away."

Lindsley also reports that fans of Rocky's will be happy to note that very little will change, save the addition of a few side dishes. "We're going to keep the chicken exactly the same way — simple, to the point and hot enough to melt glass. Because the investors got why it worked in the first place, they want to keep it soulful and they want to keep it honest," he says.

Rocky's Hot Chicken Shack returns

Rocky Lindsley's addiction is your addiction, Asheville. After taking an all-too-long hiatus, the fried-chicken meister is bringing back his popular Rocky's Hot Chicken Shack, and with it, the recipe for what is considered to be the most sought-after chicken in town.

Wingin' it: At the original Rocky's location in Arden, Rocky Lindsley cooked and served all of the... [More]

While on tour as a professional drummer in '94, Lindsley became hooked on a certain sinus-searing brand of fried chicken from a Nashville hole-in-the-wall called Prince's. Once back home in Asheville, Lindsley tried to recreate the eye-watering fowl, to great success. Eventually, he opened Rocky's Hot Chicken Shack in an aesthetically challenged building beside Highway 25 in Arden, serving the mercilessly hot bird to all who dared to venture in.

The Shack quickly achieved a solid underground following. Though Lindsley's brand of fried chicken was available plain, it was the ghost-chili-enhanced hotter-than-hot that made true believers out of the brave. The restaurant's sweating devotees seemed to issue a silent challenge to newbie diners: only grandmas order the plain chicken. But the spiciest bird, that was for toughmen who wanted to prove their mettle ... and conceivably hallucinate from pain. The sheer deliciousness of the chicken, combined with both the bravado that it took to stomach that spice and the ensuing addiction — that's what earned Rocky's Chicken Shack a culinary cult following. But, as is is the case all too often, the popularity of any good thing can often bring it trouble. Following a string of articles revealing the hidden gem and an ensuing ground swell of success, the Shack abruptly closed. Talk about playing hard to get.

But to Lindsley, it was rather simple. He was tired, his wife was sick of it, and his landlord was thinking about charging him more. "I was working there five nights a week, playing music four nights a week and it was literally kind of killing me," says Lindsley. "My wife was also letting me know that it didn't matter how good it was doing, it ain't worth it if I'm a zombie." When the landlord upped the rent, Lindsley took it as a sign and flew the coop.

What he failed to grasp, evidently, was exactly how popular Rocky's had become. "I was constantly running into people who were so upset, and it was very flattering," Lindsley says. "I was sort of surprised at the reaction." A few chicken-addicted potential investors even approached him about reopening the Shack. It's easy to imagine them trembling from withdrawal and clutching fistfuls of cash.

Finally, Lindsley's 12-year-old daughter made him Google himself. Admittedly not much of a computer guy, Rocky was a bit shocked when he discovered just how deeply the public's devotion to his food ran, especially after finding scores of positive reviews and a Facebook page devoted to bringing his chicken back. "It blew me away. That was sort of a catalyst for me to partner up with these investors and get back into it."

After a number of trial runs, Lindsley says he's ready to get back in the game of spicy chicken. "I made myself a test run and kicked my own ass in my own kitchen, so I've still got it," he says. (continued...)

Rocky's Hot Chicken Shack returns

Lindsley reports that the Shack will reopen in mid-spring, though he won't reveal the exact location. "It looks like it's a done deal, but there are some hoops we've got to jump through before it's settled, so I don't want to jinx anything by giving it away," he says. He divulges that West Asheville, his old 'hood, will be the site of the Rocky's revival. "It's kind of cool to be back in my stomping grounds," he says.

Fortunately, very little of Lindsley's successful formula will change, save the addition of a few side dishes. "We're going to keep the chicken exactly the same way — simple, to the point and hot enough to melt glass." Lindsley adds that plain (but still really good) fried chicken is available as before for those that don't really go for a full face-melter at lunch. "If [Rocky's] was going to change, and [the investors] were going to try to take it to Vegas and make it something that it's not, I wouldn't be interested in doing it," he says. "And because the investors got why it worked in the first place, they want to keep it soulful and they want to keep it honest and keep it simple," he says.

Rocky's, Lindsley assures Xpress, will stay rough around the edges, offering counter service and no wait staff. "Just come in, place your order, sit down. Pretty much the same joint. If you're going to have the word 'shack' in your title, you need to keep it that way." Rocky's Chicken Palace, after all, just doesn't have the same ring to it. "No," agrees Lindsley. "That doesn't exactly scream soul food to me."

To what does Lindsley attribute the near-cult following success of his chicken?

He tries many times to explain it and falters. "I'm almost glad I don't know how to answer that," he says. "It's almost part of the folklore of it in a way. I'm amazed at how well it did." He partially attributes his success to consistency — that is, the hot wings will be just as mouth-numbingly hot each time.

Then, Rocky takes one more stab at what makes his chicken so good, and nails it. "When somebody makes something the right way, it doesn't matter if it's fries or boiled peanuts or hot dogs, you can tell. When somebody really gives a shit about what they're doing and they really put their heart into it, you can really taste it."

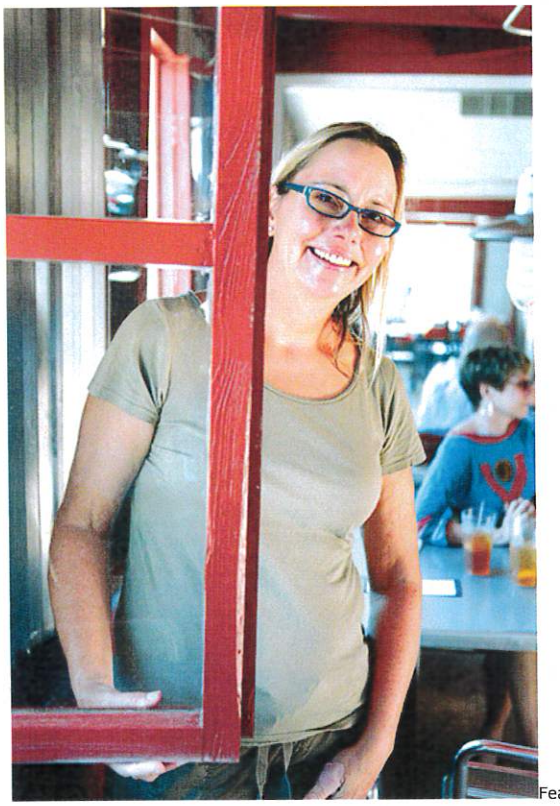
Bringing The Shack Back

Meet the lady who helped Rocky make his Hot Chicken Shack into a hip West Asheville diner.

by Mick Kelly . photo by Matt Rose



Fear not, hot chicken fans: Rocky's Hot Chicken Shack, the macho Hendersonville Road dive that served only blisteringly hot chicken breasts (on top of white bread–with a pickle) has reopened in West Asheville after closing for more than a year. On opening day last month, hundreds of people filed into the new Rocky's, named for co-owner Rocky Lindsley, in the former Tomato Cocina Latina space on Patton Avenue in West Asheville. The draw? Well, the buzz about the new place was palpable, as was the intrigue surrounding Rocky's infamous main dish, a juicy chicken breast that ranges in spiciness from Plain ("scared," says the menu) to Hot ("pepper spray") to XX Hot, which comes with the warning: "Mt. St. Hell No!" Lindsley says his hot chicken is known to cause euphoria, and at the very least, he promises you'll sweat.

But one of the real secrets in the new restaurant's sauce is Lauren Cundiff, the woman who helped revamp and redesign the shack. Cundiff, a 51-year-old former Whole Foods executive who helped the chain design new stores in the South and West, moved to Asheville in 2008 when her husband, Rich Cundiff, also a Whole Foods exec, was offered a job as COO of Earth Fare. Richard had stopped by the old Rocky's for lunch, and Rocky and the couple became friends.

In addition to working for Whole Foods, the Cundiffs ran a gourmet restaurant and grocery business in California wine country, so they weren't new to the restaurant biz. When Rocky's shut down last spring, the pair decided to take it on as a project, Rich as an investor and Lauren as Rocky's active business partner. First up: finding just the right space, which they did in the abandoned Tomato Cocina Latina on Patton. After a bit of research, Cundiff found that the building in 1968 housed a Yogi's Honey Chicken Shack. She spent five months gutting and removing, opening the place up with corrugated steel and barn red shutters. The main room's centerpiece is a long bar made of salvaged Brazilian Rosewood. Where the old place was a dim cinderblock shack that sat less than 25, the new Rocky's is light-filled and seats 108. "It's a little more pretty than a true shack would be," Cundiff says.

The menu's centerpiece is still hot chicken, prepared by Rocky, who runs the kitchen. But Cundiff, who oversees finances and general operations with seven new employees, encouraged Rocky to add a few more items to the menu, like (gasp) salad, vegetables and local beers. So far, the expanded--dare we say, more feminine—Rocky's has had steady lunch and dinner crowds, according to Cundiff. "It's kept us on our toes," she says. The crowd is a good sign for those who are glad the shack is back.

Saint Joan of Arc School

On September 19th. 1927 St. Joan of Arc opened its doors to boys and girls from the 1st through the 8th grade. Three Sisters of Christian Education from St. Genevieve were the first teachers in charge. Through the untiring efforts of Monsignor Louis Bour the school prospered and became in a short time an important unit of education in Western North Carolina.

The continuous progress of the school through the years and the yearly waiting list of pupils show that there is an evident appreciation of the work done by the Sisters.

A new fire proof building will be completed by September 1950. It will be up to date in every way. Of great interest to many will be the opening of a kindergarten. Applications for September are already being received. Reverend William Kuder is in charge.

Consignment store climbs to the top

Outdoors outfitter forced to expand

By James Shea
JSHEA@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

ASHEVILLE — Four partners founded Second Gear with a simple idea — make outdoor equipment affordable.

The store sells used outdoor equipment on consignment, stocking anything from shoes to kayaks.

The business started slowly but has grown 20-40 percent annually since it was founded in 2004. The store has sold 2,600 items on consignment.

"It's expensive to buy new," Second Gear co-owner Russ Towers said. "That was the genesis of the store. There was so much stuff to do in Asheville (that requires outdoor gear)."

The store started in a small space in West Asheville. It moved across the street into a larger store in 2008 and recently completed an expansion, giving the store a total of 3,550 square feet of retail space.

"We basically maxed out across the street," Towers said. "We maxed out here. We knew we had to expand or go home."

Employee Nate Meltzer answers a customer's question at Second Gear.

ABOUT THE BUSINESS

Name: Second Gear
What: Used outdoor equipment store
Where: 444 Haywood Road
Website: http://secondgearwnc.com
Phone: 258-0757

Similar to hunting

Lela Winton, of Asheville, has been shopping at Second Gear since it opened. She is addicted to buying and selling outdoor equipment, always looking for the perfect bargain.

Winton really likes to buy shoes, but she also looks for outdoor gear and jackets, preferring to shop at Second Gear over a traditional outfitter.

"It's more like a hunt," she said.

Winton likes the additional space, and so did her young son. The extra room has allowed Second Gear to set up a tent on the floor. Her son enjoyed himself by crawling in and out of the tent, making it a toy.

"We are going to have to remember to bring a tent when we go to the beach next week," she said with a laugh.

Towers said the store has a loyal customer base. Regulars come into the shop on a weekly or even daily basis and look for new items.

People on vacation also visit the store. Second Gear has fliers in the Chamber of Commerce but also has a strong Web presence.

Chris Mullen from Wisconsin was visiting his aunt. He browsed a rack with bike clothes and selected a shirt that fit.

He plans to participate in an annual bike ride in Iowa over the summer and needs equipment.

Mullen said he was amazed at the selection and prices.

"I like it," Mullen said. "I have not seen anything like it before."

PHOTOS BY ERIN BRETHAUER/EBRETHAU@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

Kathy Streberger looks at a trail map while shopping at Second Gear, a secondhand sporting and outdoor goods store in West Asheville. The business recently expanded.

Changing seasons

Towers had business experience and the entrepreneurial drive to open a store. He teamed up with a couple of former Outward Bound instructors. They had the expertise in outdoor gear. The partnership worked.

Shortly after the original store opened, the outdoor community embraced the idea.

But the store evolved. The partners originally figured the store would sell bikes, backpacks and other outdoor equipment. They were surprised that clothing became a huge part of the product mix.

"Think about your closet — you have a lot more clothes than bikes," Towers said.

The business was cyclical in the early years. The store did really well in the spring and summer, but winters were a slow period for the partners.

"The first couple years were like that," Towers said. "Winters were tough. (But now) we have some solid growth."

The store moves different items onto the store floor as the seasons change. The shorts and T-shirts are out in the spring and summer and winter coats and gloves in the fall and winter. Besides the used consignment items, Second Gear also stocks guidebooks and maps. Towers said the items "fill in gaps" in the merchandise.

Part of the community

Second Gear has three employees besides the partners, who work part time at the store. Towers said Second Gear is more than a business. It is part of the community. The business sponsors numerous events and fundraisers, often providing gift certificates or store credit.

"The mission from day one was not to just make money but to be a part of the community," Towers said. The store expanded for three reasons, Towers said. For starters, the store was packed.

"We had products that we could not get onto the floor," he said.

Also, the space was available and sales growth was strong.

Towers has been pleased with the expansion.

"April is going great," Towers said. "As soon as we opened up there was this rush of stuff."

He added, "It flows, but we still have room to grow."

J. G. Ball Well Known Asheville Grocer Opens New Store

J. G. Ball, well known Asheville grocer who for the past fourteen years has operated Ball's Grocery at 985 Haywood Road announces the formal opening on Wednesday morning of his new Semi-Super Market which will be located at 723 Haywood Road.

The new location has been completely remodeled and modernized and new fixtures of all kinds have been installed including one of the most modern electric refrigeration systems. The new store will occupy floor space measuring 25x70 feet.

Mr. Ball announced the appointment of G. R. Bennett as manager of the meat department which will feature at all times well known brands as well as a complete line of sea foods. Many new features will be offered by the new store including self-service, phone and delivery service (deliveries in West Asheville only) and a full stock of nationally known brands of merchandise including frosted foods.

"Ideas incorporated in the new store are the result of years of close observation to grocery store buying trends," said Mr. Ball. The new store incorporates many new and original ideas that I have conceived during the past 14 years of serving the buying public" he said.

The new store is a member of the A-G group and the NROG as well as the Mutual Distributing Company. It is a noteworthy fact that the NROG is one of the largest buying organizations in the country and Mr. Ball states that thru direct buying he will be able to offer housewives the best possible prices at all times.

Broadening its original mission

MMF now offers small businesses bigger loans, technical support

By Dale Neal
STAFF WRITER

WEST ASHEVILLE — "I'm more of an artist than a businesswoman," R. Brooke Priddy freely admits in her West Asheville studio.

But in the past five years, Priddy has stitched together a profitable company in Ship to Shore, creating custom-made women's lingerie and dresses.

Priddy launched her firm with the help of Mountain Microenterprise Fund, taking the Foundations course to learn business basics and how to write a business plan. She then took out a $1,500 loan from the nonprofit, which she used to buy a sewing machine.

But five years later, just breaking even, Priddy needed help, not with the needle and thread but with marketing and planning. "I think about what is happening now. I'm not really thinking forward. I'm never giving myself for future projects."

So, Priddy turned again to Mountain Microenterprise Fund, enrolling in the new Growth and Opportunities Program, or GO. Priddy was paired with Elizabeth Johnson, a professional business consultant paid by MMF.

Priddy had the talent as a seamstress as well as the passion to succeed as a businesswoman, Johnson observed. "Brooke wanted a fresh perspective. Most people want to do their business better, but they don't have the time. It takes an incredible willingness to do this," Johnson said.

Priddy sees sales taking off, sewing up new wholesale deals with boutiques over the Internet and creating more one-of-a-kind wedding dresses for local brides. She's now ready to hire a business assistant to help with the bookkeeping and accounting. She's taken on another $5,000 loan from MMF to provide for a Web site and marketing.

From scratch, with love: The woman behind Asheville's Short Street Cakes cooks up community with her creations

Barbara Blake • April 18, 2010

ASHEVILLE — When Jodi Rhoden was a little girl, she dreamed of becoming a famous actress and an astronomer.

Instead, she bakes cakes. Big cakes, small cakes, round cakes, square cakes, layer cakes, flourless cakes, wedding cakes, vegan cakes, cupcakes. All created under the slogan, "Fresh, natural, from scratch, with love."

As the proprietor of Short Street Cakes, which opened a little more than a year ago at 225 Haywood Road in "East West Asheville," Rhoden is a baker and decorator extraordinaire. But this is no ordinary cake lady.

When Rhoden is not whipping up Aunt Tissy's Italian Cream Cake or her new Ashevelvet Cake, she is busy being mom to 4-year-old Jasper, mentoring other small-business owners, keeping up with her lively blog, "My Life in Cake," offering her sweets and her energy to local nonprofits, championing urban agriculture through the Bountiful Cities project, collaborating with local crafters on projects such as Howard Street Handmade, and otherwise working to build a sense of community in West Asheville and beyond.

"Pretty much, if there's an organization that's doing the right thing in the community, Jodi's going to lend her creativity to supporting them in some way, even if it's just baking cupcakes for fundraisers," said Safi Mahaba, who serves on the Bountiful Cities board with Rhoden.

"She believes in the grass-roots, she believes in our ability as a community to take care of each other and sustain ourselves, and she lives that and breathes that every day of her life," Mahaba said. "She's just amazing — I don't know how she gets it all done."

Catching her breath

Rhoden grew up near Atlanta, was active in theater in high school, and graduated in 1999 from the University of Georgia in Athens with a degree in social work and a certificate in women's studies. She worked in the rape crisis and domestic violence fields and was involved in various forms of "do-it-yourself" activism, such as Food Not Bombs. She and her former husband, Duncan Macfarlane, Jasper's father, met in Athens and lived for two years in Boston before moving to Asheville in 2001.

It was in Boston that she learned to bake, working as a job trainer in a bakery-training program at the Haley House, part of Dorothy Day's Catholic Worker Movement. She also helped Jane Smillie as she started CitySprouts, Cambridge's renowned schoolyard gardens nonprofit.

"I was very influenced by the experiences I had there, in the soup kitchen and community gardens," Rhoden said. Proof of that lies in the fact that the five people she named as those she admires the most, living or dead, are Dorothy Day, Emma Goldman, George Washington Carver and her parents, Sally and Jim Rhoden.

When the couple arrived in Asheville, "we jumped right into the anti-war movement at the start of the Iraq War," Rhoden said. "I worked with the Asheville Community Resource Center (now defunct after losing its lease on Lexington Avenue) and Bountiful Cities back then, and activism was more of my full-time job than the bakery or waitressing jobs I had at the time."

They bought a dilapidated house on Short Street in Montford and lived in the backyard in an Airstream trailer for a year and a half while they restored the home.

"In 2005, our son was born, which changed my life forever. My efforts became channeled into raising him, and at the same time I began to focus on creating Short Street Cakes and writing, via my blog," Rhoden said.

"Five years later, I feel like I am just now catching my breath; I've moved the business to Haywood Road, and it's doing great, and I'm writing a book about Southern cake ladies for Lark Books," she said. "My son's father and I are no longer together, but we're great co-parents, and I feel excited and happy about all the projects I am working on and ones to come."

Community from scratch

Those projects, especially the cake business, have been informed by deeper lessons about relationships and community.

"I have been influenced equally by my Southern family and my political work in becoming a baker," Rhoden said. "My mom taught me about baking and cooking, and the importance of family meals and celebrations. And my love of do-it-yourself craft and self-sufficiency prompted me to be more self-sufficient through gardening and baking and cooking from scratch."

She took a Foundations course through Mountain Bizworks two years after beginning to bake out of her certified home kitchen, realizing that for the business to succeed she needed a larger capacity than her home kitchen offered.

"I am really grateful to Mountain Bizworks — the class was affordable and I learned some basic business tools and formulas that I was able to run with," Rhoden said. "The main thing, though, is the community of the organization — you meet some of the most inspiring people who are living in Asheville and thriving as self-employed artists, farmers, chefs, craftspeople."

Rhoden didn't just meet people who were inspiring. She began inspiring others, including Katie Grear, who, with her husband, Mike Adams, launched Lady Luck Flower Farm in Candler a year ago.

"Jodi was our first customer; we were trying to do the best we could, but we didn't have a Web site or anything, and she put me all over her blog and that connected a lot of people to me through her," Grear said.

"Jodi is amazing — she's got it all down. We both did the Mountain Bizworks thing, but she is really like a premium example of just making it all happen," Grear said. "Like her logo says, from scratch with love — that's like who she is, exactly. She really gave us hope and confidence, and without her support, I don't know…"

Ellen Fletcher Knight, a quilt maker who was a vendor at the Howard Street Handmade community craft fair that Rhoden organized last summer in the space next door to the cake shop, said Rhoden has a gift for bringing people together for the betterment of all.

"Jodi was very deliberate about picking her location with community in mind, to get people excited about that part of West Asheville, to get artists together and talking and creating a dialogue of things that are hand-crafted and grass-roots, and what it means to actually start forming a community," Knight said.

City harvest

Today, Rhoden's main passion beyond her son, her blog and the cake shop is the Bountiful Cities Project, which encourages gardens in inner cities to provide healthy, locally grown food.

"What I like about Bountiful Cities is that it not only creates opportunities and supports efforts for urban agriculture to happen here in the city, but as an organization it (teaches) the importance of local food and urban agriculture from a social justice perspective," Rhoden said.

"There's no reason we can't produce more of what we eat right here where we live, and deepen our relationships with our neighbors in the process."

Rhoden also is passionate about relationships with the past, as evidenced by the fantastic Frigidaire Flair stove that houses the antique china on which she serves slices of cakes in her shop. There are also aprons strung on a clothesline on the wall, and vintage cake plates and carriers that friends pick up for her at yard sales.

"Aesthetically, I'm interested in things that tell a story," Rhoden said, "old quilts, or dishes, or houses, for that matter. I wonder where they've been and who used them."

In a nod to modern times, she says she generally makes and eats home-cooked meals, but confesses that she's "not afraid of a little Bojangles every now and then."

Rhoden isn't interested in opening a second Short Street Cakes or moving on to a bigger city or even expanding into a café setting with other foods.

"I really love just specializing in one thing," she said. "I think it makes it simpler and smoother, and we stay really focused on exactly what it is that we do."

She also stays focused on community, donating any cakes or cupcakes that are more than a day old to the A HOPE day shelter.

"Just like me baking cakes," Rhoden said. "I think there are many people who are creating alternative economic means by making beautiful things and selling them in the community.

"It is a return to a saner pace of life that once existed," she said. "Hopefully, we can bring those traditions into the future — keep the good parts and change what we need to change."

Short Street Cakes announces spring menu

A West Asheville cake shop has announced a new spring menu that includes 10 new flavors.

Short Street Cakes, which specializes in scratch-made, Southern style cakes, opened just over a year ago at 225 Haywood Road offering all-natural products made with many local and organic ingredients.

The cake shop's new menu will include a buttermilk white cake with cooked caramel icing, a peanut butter chocolate cake, and a fresh coconut cake with seven-minute icing, as well as a bacon apple deluxe cake.

The menu can be viewed online at www.shortstreetcakes.com. The shop is open from noon to 6 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday and by appointment Sundays and Mondays. Whole cake orders require 48 hours notice, though cupcakes are available for sale during shop hours.

Discount Store Will Open Here

Sky City, a discount self-service department store, will become the newest addition to Asheville's mercantile family with its opening in August.

Announcement of the store, which will entail an $800,000 overall investment for building, land, fixtures and merchandise, was made Saturday.

The store will be located on Patton Avenue next to the A&P store at 1069 Patton Avenue and will extend 250 feet to the west.

The American Jobbing Co., operators of the Asheville Army Store and the Bower's stores in North Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia and Kentucky, are the lessees, having signed a 20-year agreement with Town & Country Shopping Center, of which Harry D. Blomberg is president. Myron C. Peterson of Asheville and Ben A. Bower of Knoxville are the principal stockholders of American Jobbing.

Peterson, manager of the Asheville Army Store, said Sky City will carry men's, women's and children's wearing apparel, shoes for the entire family, housewares and household goods, small appliances, millinery and bags, hardware, toys, sporting goods, jewelry and cameras. A complete drug department and a snack bar will also be included.

The one-story structure, of masonary and steel construction, will have 40,000 square feet with an option for an additional 12,000-square-foot expansion. Architect for the air conditioned structure is J. Bertram King. Construction is to begin immediately.

"The concept of the self service store is to sell merchandise on a low markup enabled by volume, self service and parking facilities offered to the customers," Peterson said.

The reduced overhead will allow families to save considerable amounts each year for personal and household needs, he said.

"The companies with which Sky City is affiliated bring about a vast buying power, enabling them to purchase merchandise at bigger discount prices in the market and pass these discounts on to the customer," he said. "Discount prices will prevail every shopping day, rather than on special sales days only. Sky City will sell only first quality merchandise.

Design will be for easy shopping with seven check stands each operated by two employes. Wide aisles will easily accommodate shopping carts, he said.

Sky City Discount Center

Asheville Citizen August 15, 1962

To Open Doors Wednesday

Sky City Discount Center, the latest in self-service shopping and newest member of Asheville's mercantile family, opens its doors to the public at 10 a. m. Wednesday.

The mammoth, 40,000 square feet store will encompass some 30 departments ranging from women's ready to wear to shoes for the family, from accessories to small appliances.

The $750,000 structure, located in the 800 block of Patton Avenue west of the Smoky Park Highway Bridge, will offer free parking facilities for 400 cars and will have shopping hours from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Charles E. Longmire, an employe of Sky City-affiliate Bower's Stores Inc., for the past 20 years, has come here from Toccoa, Ga., to be operational manager.

Robert B. Peterson, also a Bower's employe, has left his general manager post at Kalin's Department Store in Hendersonville, to be Sky City's merchandise manager.

Sky City's home, designed by architect J. Bertram King, will be a one-story structure of masonry and steel construction and will be fully air conditioned.

"The concept of the self-service store is to sell merchandise on a low markup enabled by volume, self service and parking facilities offered to customers," Myron C. Peterson, a principal stockholder and manager of Asheville's Army Store, said.

He said the reduced overhead will allow families to save considerable amounts each year for personal and household needs. Sky City is designed for easy shopping and purchasing with seven check-out stands operated by two employes each. Wide aisles will easily accomodate shopping carts he said.

The center's 30 departments include:

Women's fashion ready to wear, women's sportswear, lingerie, millinery and bags, accessories, maternities, infants and toddlers, girls' wear, men's wear, sportswear and furnishings and a complete boys' department.

Also shoes for the family, domestics, piece goods, home furnishings, notions, drapery and upholstery, health and beauty aids, greeting cards and stationery.

Giftwares, hardware, paint, tools, auto accessories, toys, lighting fixtures, small appliances, a record shop, a camera and photo supply center and a luncheonette.

Among the key personnel at Sky City will be Mrs. Mildred Merrill, manager of children's wear; Charles Kent, hardware department manager; Carroll Henry, assistant manager in hardware; B. K. Harrison, shoe department manager; J. W. Thomas, managerial coordinator and specialty adviser; Mrs. Lucille Harding, yard goods department manager; Mrs. Ethel Wallen, women's ready to wear manager; E. C. McKay, camera department manager; Joe Revis, men's and boys' section manager, and Mrs. Ella Garland, cosmetic department manager.

Store officials cited Sky City's affiliation with other companies as adding vast buying power, enabling Sky City to purchase merchandise at bigger discount prices and pass these discounts on to customers.

TRADITIONAL ceremonies Wednesday morning marked the grand opening of Asheville's first discount house, Sky City, Inc. On hand at the ceremonies were (L-R): C. E. Longmire, operational manager; Philip Woollcott of the Bank of Asheville; Mayor Earl W. Eller, who cut the ribbon (his second of the day—having also opened a new First Union National Bank office); and Myron Peterson, president of Sky City, Inc. About 25,000 persons went through the store during the grand opening day from 9:30 a.m. until 10 p.m., Peterson said. The parking lot and store were filled and traffic was backed up on Patton Avenue in both directions for considerable distances all day long, Peterson said, except for a short lull in the early evening hours.

Sunset Villa Dine And Dance Place Now Open

Management Promises Good Food And Fine Service

The Sunset Villa, Asheville's newest dine and dance establishment, opened up this week at number 24 Haywood road, just across the West Asheville bridge. This is an entirely new place, the building being built especially for this business.

The Sunset Villa is catering to couples and special parties seeking a new and interesting place to spend a pleasant time dining and dancing. No stags are allowed on the dance floor, and the management states that there will be an orderly crowd at all times, as no rough-house tactics will be tolerated.

There is an excellent dance floor provided for their patrons at no additional cost whatever, and delicious food may be had at all times, including steaks, chops, seafoods, short orders and sandwiches at moderate prices. Popular brands of beer and soft drinks are also available, served at the correct degree of coolness.

The management of the Sunset Villa invites the public to drive out and inspect this new place, and have a good time. Plenty of parking space is available and prompt curb service is assured those who just drop by for a sandwich and refreshment.

Remember, it's the new white building just across the West Asheville bridge ... good food ... dine and dance in comfort.

Super Gulf Station Cleans Flood Damaged Cars

Station At 547 Haywood Road At Baker Street, West Asheville

C. F. Trent manager of the Super Gulf station at 547 Haywood road in West Asheville, has interesting news for the automobile owner whose car was caught in the recent floods here. "We are equipped to give these cars a thorough interior cleaning," he states, "and in most cases can remove all traces of mud and water resulting from the flood. We have experienced men to give the motorist prompt and efficient service."

The Super station specializes in car washing, lubrication and upholstery cleaning, and the manager advises that with every wash or lubrication job the interior of the car will be thoroughly vacuum cleaned free.

Mr. Trent has had thirty - five years experience in the automobive repair business and is thoroughly familiar with all makes of cars and trucks. In addition to regular service usually offered by the Gulf stations, the Super Gulf provides complete garage and repair service second to none in the city. A call, phone 9493, will receive prompt attention, and your car will be sent for and delivered to you after the repair job is finished. Your visit to the Super Gulf station is always appreciated, and you will find each member of the personnel courteous and obliging whether you merely wish road information or to have your car accurately attended to.

DINING AT THE DINERS

NOTHIN' FANCY

Local diners feature hearty food and lots of it

By Carole Currie
LIFESTYLE EDITOR

You hear plenty about the big, fancy eating places around town, the ones that advertise a lot and the ones whose parking lots are filled on Friday nights. The places you don't hear so much about are the little cafes that serve the regular guys every day, early breakfasts and hearty lunches.

Those are the meals that stoke the furnaces to build the houses, drive the trucks, run the stores, deliver the mail and run the shops. They are also the meals that provide the energy to file the lawsuits, fill out the tax forms and write the books.

Once, all restaurants served meat and potatoes and vegetables at Formica booths. Then food got trendier and more varied, restaurants got into decor and the clientele got dressier. Some of those meat and potatoes places didn't change. They went on opening early for the breakfast crowd and serving big biscuits and gravy for breakfast and meat and potatoes for lunch. Their regulars kept coming.

Cafe customers like it that they don't have to dress up at their favorite old-fashioned cafes. Heck, they don't even have to take their caps off. They like seeing people they know, they like being greeted by friendly waitresses who know their names. But most of all, they like it that they can fill up for $5 or less.

We sent staff members out to do a sampling of some of the area's favorite diners. Naturally, we couldn't write about them all. Notable omissions here are places like the Hot Shot Cafe in Biltmore where the biscuits are famous and the Mediterranean Cafe in downtown Asheville where everybody knows your name.

Since we didn't get to mention every one, you can let us know your favorites, especially some all over Western Carolina that we may not even know about.

TASTEE DINER
575 Haywood Road, West Asheville
252-9644
Open 6 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Friday

The Tastee Diner on Haywood Road is a local tradition – a place where the home-style food is delicious, the service is lightning fast and the prices are unbelievably low.

It's an old-fashioned diner, open for breakfast and lunch only. The main dining room is tiny – 10 stools and two booths, with more tables in a next-door room. For the real experience, sit at the counter, and watch the staff prepare and serve orders.

The menu is loaded with Southern staples. For breakfast, they've got eggs, bacon, sausage, pork chops, hot cakes, biscuits, French toast - even livermush (80 cents a serving). The most expensive morning item: a ribeye steak with two eggs and fixings, $3.95. For lunch, offerings range from hamburgers ($1.45 single, $2.05 double), hot dogs (95 cents), grilled cheese ($1.25), fish sandwich ($1.85) and peanut butter sandwich (95 cents).

We enjoyed the Thursday lunch special – meat (we chose country steak), three veggies and two biscuits for $3.75. Wash it all down with iced tea (55 cents a cup). And save room for the homemade pies, a steal at 95 cents a slice.

Hungry? The art of Southern dining is hardly a lost one here in the mountains

By Carole Currie
CITIZEN-TIMES CORRESPONDENT

When mountain air inspires appetites, those appetites call out for real mountain food, or at least the kind of dishes that were passed at your grandmother's table.

Steaming grits, salty country ham and red-eye gravy, crispy fried chicken, mashed potatoes, pinto beans and corn bread, turnip greens and hot biscuits are all on the menu wish list. Of course, you hope to wash it all down with a beaker of sweating-from-the-chill sweet tea.

Alas, with so many upscale restaurants in Western North Carolina, hungry fans of country food have to look a little harder sometimes to find it. It's here, though, and when you find it, you're in for a feast. We'll tell you about a few of our favorites.

Tastee Diner

575 Haywood Road, West Asheville, 252-9644

WEST ASHEVILLE — Tastee Diner is an outstanding country food filling station, as any of the regulars packed into the tiny place will attest. Tourists don't usually discover this eatery in West Asheville, but they'll wish they had because not only is the food good, it's a bargain.

At breakfast, cook Sherry Miller lovingly ladles sawmill gravy over huge split biscuits owner David Hinson has just taken out of the oven. On a typical morning, 600 of those biscuits go down. All the usual things are on the menu for breakfast, served 'til noon, but you can also get a tomato or livermush biscuit.

The lunch specials are posted about 10 a.m. and on a recent day they included country-style steak, chicken casserole, grilled ham, meat loaf, chicken and dumplings and the diner's specialty, beef stew. Favorite go-withs are pinto beans, slaw and cornbread, but there are lots of other choices.

Hinson makes the pies, the coconut getting special raves. At lunch, suits and blue shirts mingle and there's lots of socializing among diners.

The diner is open from 6 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday through Friday. At breakfast, you can eat like a king for $2.50. At lunch, a meat and three sides is $4.10. You pay cash here, but not much.

If you love antiques and collectibles, Asheville has an active auction scene

By Carol Mallett
CITIZEN-TIMES CORRESPONDENT

ASHEVILLE — Antiques and collectibles are all the rage these days. Finding treasures from Grandma's attic and bygone times is a major hobby.

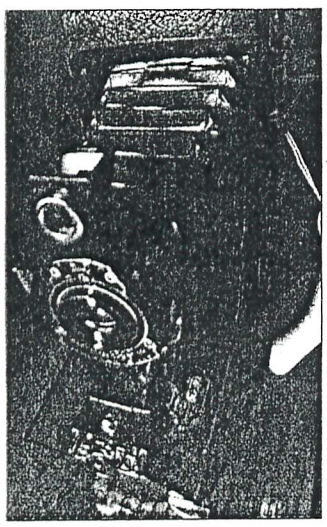
If you're hooked on collecting and love "junking" downtown, yard sales and antique stores, try auction bidding for new pieces.

Asheville has a large, active auction scene. A good weekly event to start with is Tommy Tuten and Johnny Penland's Auction, every Friday night on Craven Street below Westgate Bridge.

"We sell everything from appliances to fine antiques," said auctioneer Johnny Penland, who founded the family business in 1985. The staff in the old barn-like building includes wife, Anne Penland, daughter Beth Penland Tuten, son-in-law Tommy Tuten, grandchildren and other relatives, along with an assortment of friends.

The family atmosphere and camaraderie extends to the bidding audience, most who attend become new friends of the personable staff.

"We never know on Monday morning what we'll sell on Friday night, or who'll be there," said Penland.



You never know what you will find on a given Friday night at Tuten and Penland's Auction House. They sell everything from books to cameras, toys to furniture.

"The major collectibles most people are after are fine porcelains, china, cookie jars, advertising art, sterling, pottery-especially fine art pottery, paintings, prints, lamps, furniture," said Penland. "It's a split between dealers, collectors and individual looking for items for their homes. We get people from all walks of life, doctors, lawyers, rich and poor."

The thrill of the hunt

Part of the allure of an auction is that small chance of a "score," getting a great item at a low price.

The highest priced item every auctioned off at Tuten and Penland's was a set of French Huguenot pistols that sold for about $121,000. Their lowest-priced items can go for a dollar.

Want to attend an auction?

Try these local auction houses:

■ Tommy Tuten and Johnny Penland Auctions: An absolute auction, every thing goes, even if it's only for $1. Find everything from household items to Victorian lamps and fine furniture; it's a surprise every week. Coffee and hot dogs are sold in back. Get there early for a chair.
When and where: 6 p.m. every Friday, 155 Craven St, Asheville, beneath the Westgate Bridge.
Terms: Free admission, previews, 10 percent buyer's premium, absentee bids allowed.
Information: Call 255-0455 or go online to www.tommyteutonandjohnnypenlandauction.com

■ Wilson and Terry Auction Co.: Mark Wilson and Blake Terry are two of the best young auctioneers on the scene. The bidding is easy to follow and their auction features a mid-range of collectible pricing, everything from North Carolina pottery to fine furniture. Rumor has it that a guitar once owned by Elvis will be put up at their next sale.
When and where: Check the Web site or call for schedule. The next auction is an on-site estate scheduled for Sept. 27-28 at 65 Summit St., Burnsville. The auction house itself is located at 1098 New Stock Road, Weaverville.
Terms: Free admission, previews, 10 percent buyer's premium, absentee bids allowed
Information: Call 645-0695 or visit www.wilsonandterryauctions.com

■ Brunk Auctions: Robert Brunk's Auctions are elegant events, respected at the national level like Christie's and Sotheby's. Even if you can't afford to bid on that $50,000 corner cupboard, there are lower-priced objects and it's a chance to see world-class antiques right here in Asheville. A must for auction addicts, there's catering, reserved seating and some free seats in the back.
When and where: 117 Tunnel Road, Asheville. Next auctions are scheduled for Oct. 26-27 and Jan. 4. Check the Web for updates.
Terms: free admission, previews, 10% buyer's premium, absentee bids allowed, remote live bidding through www.icollector.com
Information: Call 254-6846 or go online to www.brunkauctions.com

AUCTION:

"A dollar's as low as we'll go and we operate a 100 percent absolute auction," said Penland.

Unlike some auctions where items can have a "reserve" (a minimum dollar amount required for sale is set in advance) or pieces can be "withdrawn" (removed from the sale by the auctioneer's choice), Tuten and Penland's sells every piece each Friday night.

There's often humor involved. On a recent Friday night, when a particularly ugly green velvet couch wouldn't sell for even one dollar, Penland took $2 from his wallet, threw them on the couch and asked for a bid of one dollar, warning the winner he had to take the couch with him or else.

How the bidding works

You don't have to be an expert to bid. "We get newcomers every week; we welcome them in and tell them how to do things," said Tuten, also a licensed auctioneer. "

At the beginning of each Tuten and Penland's auction, they announce the terms and conditions of the auction.

"We don't use a chant, extra words; we're very clear and can be understood very easily," said Penland, referring to the fast patter often used by auctioneers.

Still, there is some auction etiquette to learn. You are required to get a bid card with an assigned number before you can participate (there's no charge for the card). Hold it high in the air while you bid, so they can see it.

The auctioneer asks for an opening bid. If no one accepts it, the amount keeps dropping until someone bids.

The auctioneer takes bids from those with raised cards until the high bid wins the item. Keep in mind that there's a 10 percent "buyers premium." That means you'll pay 10 percent more for the item in the end than the actual amount you bid for it, and there's sales tax on your purchase, too. Make sure you understand the terms before you bid.

Check the item carefully at the "preview," an assigned time prior to the auction when you can wander around and look closely at the numbered lots. Payment at most auctions is accepted in cash, check or credit card and items should be picked up during or right after the sale. Some auction houses allow pick-up the next day.

Tuten and Penland Auctions oozes atmosphere and down home character, the feel of old Asheville, down by the river.

"This building was built by the Civilian Conservation Corp in Newbridge and moved to its present site 55 years ago," said Penland, whose father, Grover Penland, originally operated an antique business on the site. Many local auctioneers trained there, under the respected Penland, now semiretired.

If you can't be there, you can leave an absentee bid.

"Leave a bid of the highest amount you are willing to pay," said Penland. A house bidder presents your bid. "He bids for the absentee bidder as though they were sitting in his chair," Penland explained. "If two bids are left, they will open closer to the higher bid, eliminating the lower one. If it sells for less, you still get it for that plus a 10 percent buyer's premium."

New 28806 Deli offers innovative creations

By Scott Adams
CITIZEN-TIMES CORRESPONDENT

ASHEVILLE — If you've ever wished for a relaxed and affordable fine dining experience, 28806 Deli offers a unique gathering place for everyone from serious foodies to newcomers.

"We love being challenged," said co-owner Eric Backer, 32, about the company's enthusiasm for taking customer requests and suggestions for hard-to-find and innovative food items. He and co-owner Peter Affatato, 38, along with their friendly staff, come up with plenty of food experiments.

I had one in the form of a sandwich special featuring house-roasted shaved pork on black bean focaccia with roasted poblano chiles, lettuce, tomato, white cheddar and lime cilantro mayonnaise. The flavors were amazing, particularly the lime cilantro mayonnaise, which provided a cool contrast to the slightly spicy chiles. Sides like potato salad, buttermilk cole slaw and macaroni salad cost 50 cents extra, but my sandwich's hefty size was worth the $6.95 I paid for it.

They keep breakfast a bit more simple, yet just as delicious. I ordered two eggs and cheese on a roll with Applewood-smoked bacon and was amazed at what came out of the kitchen. The perfectly fried eggs oozed a bit of yolk which moistened the sandwich's center for a truly homestyle breakfast. The portions were again right on the money at $3.75 for a breakfast that carried me onto lunch.

Dining Out

If you're a grilled-cheese sandwich fan, try a panini, grilled-cheese Italian-style. My friend had a panini special with prosciutto, mozzarella, roasted red peppers, scallion garlic mayonnaise and spinach. I took a few bites and relished the robust flavors of mozzarella and garlic encased in house-baked bread.

Quality ingredients fill sandwiches and the company's numerous prepared foods, as well as their signature breads and pastries.

The day I visited, the pastry display case featured five types of cookies, thick, dense brownies and nine types of cakes, including a Cassata, or Italian Wedding Cake.

Pastry chef Trish Sodano said a customer requested it and after some research, she assembled this traditional dessert, a sponge cake soaked in rum sealed together with cannoli icing and orange whipped cream and covered with a layer of almonds. A slice was a bit pricey at $4, but by the wonderful last bite, I was dangerously close to buying the entire cake.

"Everything we do is done in-house," Affatato said. He and Backer have a passion for artisan breads. "I rip bread apart and smell it like wine."

The term "artisan breads" basically means, "You're using your hands at some point," Backer said. Quality, ingredients, like natural starter, make the company's eight regularly featured types of bread a delight to the bite. Ciabatta is just dense enough to enjoy on its own in addition to completing a proper Italian sandwich.

Bill Sanders/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER
Lunchtime diners crowd into 28806 Deli in West Asheville. The deli is also open for breakfast.

Affatato and Backer's original idea was to create a catering company and bakery, so sandwiches were a natural outgrowth of having so much artisan bread around. "We don't look at ourselves as a sandwich shop. We're a prepared food shop," Affatato said.

Food offerings stem from Affatato and Backer's culinary backgrounds. Affatato cited his Italian-American family-upbringing, classical French-style culinary training, travels in Europe and a personal love for Asian food as coming together in his creations.

While Affatato grew up with delis in New York state, Backer brings an equal amount of Southern influence having come from Georgia. Wild mushroom grits could make heads turn no matter where you're from.

Just as the food appears fresh and colorful, so does the deli itself. Fresh flowers grace each table resting on a floor covered with hand-painted swirls. A cobalt blue ceiling, yellow bathroom doors and a sharp assortment of lighting styles give the deli just the right mix of class and comfort.

28806 Deli plans to have microbrew beers (no draught, just bottles) and wine by the end of the month.

If you go

Restaurant: 28806 Deli, Bakery & Caterers, 1328-A Patton Ave., Asheville, 252-5664, www.28806deli.com
Type of cuisine: Eclectic bakery with breakfast and lunch items, plus take-out dinner entrees
Price range: $1.75-$6.95, catering prices vary
Hours: 6:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday; 10:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Saturday; closed Sunday
Ambience: A nice mix of class and comfort
Service: Friendly, attentive and knowledgeable
What others say:
Pam Reed of Asheville had the roasted pork sandwich lunch special: "I like it. They're being a little more creative and not just using Duke's mayonnaise."
Rebecca Pickens of Weaverville had samplings of deli salads, including the new potato salad: "It's just a really good change from traditional potato salad. The sun-dried tomatoes really made it."
Lank Snow of Fairview had two eggs and cheese on a biscuit: "This is a good breakfast here. I drive all they way from Fairview for their food."
The upshot: This place puts the flavors and quality of gourmet food into deli classics like soups, sandwiches and salads with amazing results.

West Asheville Firm Employes Johnson, Mrs. Sowers

Officials of the Universal M[illegible] Company, Inc., West Asheville branch of the Richbourg Motor Company, yesterday announced the addition of Mrs. Hugh Sowers and Sam H. Johnson to the sales force.

Both Mrs. Sowers and Mr. Johnson, who are well known in Asheville, will begin their duties at once. Mrs. Sowers is a member of the West Asheville Community Club, and is also actively connected with the literary, music and civic departments of the organization. Her husband, Hugh Sowers, is connected with the Asheville branch of the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company.

Mr. Johnson has been engaged in the real estate business here for the past two years. Previously he was employed by the Southern Railway for fifteen years.

Charles C. Ricker, of the concern which is located at 432 Haywood Road, stated yesterday that the Universal Company is a model Ford agency of its class in the Carolinas, and maintains a Class 8 shop with mechanics trained in the Ford school. The sales force consists of four members with three others employed in the parts department and office.

The Universal Motor Company, Inc., of 432 Haywood road, West Asheville, is now rated as a model Ford agency in the Carolinas, officials stated yesterday. The mechanics in charge were trained in the Ford Motor company school, with a sales organization of four members employed. Mrs. Hugh Bowers and Sam H. Johnson recently joined the sales force and have assumed their duties with the firm.

Officials yesterday called attention to the fact that the local impression that the Universal company is connected with the Richcourt Motor company, of Asheville, is not correct, the West Asheville firm being a separate and individual company and agency.

Three men are employed in the parts department and office, Charles C. Ricker, of the company, stated.

Louis Vargo Expert Clock Repairman

Louis Vargo, 26 Sheridan road is considered one of the foremost repairers of fine clocks in the entire country. He has worked on many museum clocks for collectors and put them in perfect running condition. He is also considered an authority on early American and European antique clocks.

Many homes in this section of the state have fine clocks but they are only ornaments when they do not run properly. If you have a clock in your home that is not keeping correct time why not call Louis Vargo and have him repair it. He maintains a pick-up and delivery service and all repair charges are said to be reasonable.

Some time ago Vargo had an outstanding display of clocks in one of the local department stores and it drew a large number of people to see it.

Appliance store closes after 59 years

Business had hard time competing with big chains

By Tim Reid
BUSINESS EDITOR

ASHEVILLE — Roberta Wade Sams was stoic as she closed out Wade's TV and Appliances Thursday, shuttering the business that her father started 59 years ago and became an institution in West Asheville.

"We've enjoyed good business until the last little while when the discount stores came in and the mom-and-pop stores started dying out. We're just calling it quits," Sams said as she emptied drawers and watched workers cart out the last of the store's inventory.

Wade's closing left longtime customers like Jean Johnson of Woodland Hills wondering where they will get the service and reliability they depended on Wade's to deliver.

Johnson said she bought her first appliance from Wade's when she got married in 1950 and has continued to do so ever since.

"They have always provided excellent service at reasonable prices, and they serviced everything they sold," she said. "You always got the better brands at Wade's. You might pay a little more, but they lasted a lot longer."

Roberta Sams' father, Meeker LeMoyne Wade, was a radio repairman for another company before opening his own business in June 1943.

"It was Wade's Radio Service at that time," his daughter recalled. "That was wartime, of course. When appliances and radios became available after the war, he started to sell them."

Steve Dixon/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Roberta Sams checks the bottom of the cash drawer for the last time as her husband Frank reads the paper at his desk Thursday on the final day of business for Wade's TV and Appliances on Haywood Road in West Asheville. The business was founded by Mrs. Sams' father in June 1943.

Wade's sold Maytag and Frigidaire appliances primarily, and most of its televisions were Zenith.

Roberta Sams joined the business around 1945 or '46, and her husband, Frank H. Sams, joined it in 1959.

Wade remained active in the business until 1989, and he died in 1993.

Running the business "has been awfully hard the last little while" as chain stores could offer merchandise cheaper than Wade's could buy it wholesale, Roberta Sams said.

"We never sold the cheapest thing we could find," she said. "When we sold something, we actually tried to educate the customer about it. We always had a good reputation for doing what was right."

Discount stores can sell appliances cheaper than independent stores like Wade's, Sams said, but customers have trouble getting them serviced unless they buy extended warranty coverage.

Sams said she and her husband are long past retirement age and it was time for them to exit the business.

"We had thought about finding someone to take it over," she said, "but if you're not making money, nobody wants to buy it."

Sams said she will regret not seeing many of the people she has come to know over the years at Wade's.

"Our customers have really become friends," she said. "We're going to miss them."

Johnson said she called Roberta Sams when she heard the business was closing, concerned that her washing machine was getting old and might need repair soon:

"She said not to worry, it's a Maytag."

Webb Motor Will Open West Asheville Branch

Bruce Webb, President, Announces Step; Will Open Saturday

Establishment of a branch at 744 Haywood road, West Asheville, in the building formerly occupied by the Hudson Essex Sales company, has been announced by Bruce Webb, president of the Webb Motor company, Buick Dealers.

This branch, which will be devoted to the display and sales of new and used cars, will open Saturday, Mr. Webb said last night. It will be in charge of Walker Thomasson, an experienced automobile man who has been with the Webb motor company for the past year as a member of its sales force.

We have recognized the rapid growth of that section of Asheville west of the river," Mr. Webb, explained, "and have been planning the establishment of a branch there for the past two years. The step was held up temporarily because of business conditions but now with the optimistic trend taken as a result of the location in that section of the great plant of the American Enka company, we feel that we are justified in creating this branch for the service and convenience of our customers in that section.

The building affords ample facilities for the mechanical department and action on that matter will be taken as soon as the branch determines just what demand there is for such mechanical service in West Asheville. In the event that such a demand is there, and we anticipate that there will be shortly, we will establish in this building, in addition to the sales force and display rooms, a complete, authorized Buick Service station.

West Asheville Cafe Makes Bow On Haywood Rd.

The West Asheville Cafe, under ownership of N. W. Brown, has opened a very attractive eating place at 687 Haywood Road, West Asheville. Mr. Brown, who was previously in business on the Weaverville Road for eight years, believes he knows what the general public wants to eat and how food should b. prepared.

Both counter and table service are offered by the West Asheville Cafe. Mr. Brown will operate his cafe from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m. daily and will remain open Sundays.

Food at the West Asheville Cafe is cooked in a first class sanitary kitchen with gas equipment. Biltmore Dairy products including ice cream will be served. Special seasonable dishes will be served to patrons.

The West Asheville Cafe is located at what was formerly the West Asheville bus station. Mr. Brown was born and reared in the Leicester section and has lived in Buncombe county all his life.

Osborne, Former Publisher, Printing Firm Owner, Dies

Samuel Brooks Osborne, 81, of 228 Montford Ave., owner and operator of the Osborne Printing Co. until his retirement 12 years ago, died in his home at 3 p. m. Friday after a long illness.

A native of Brevard, he was a son of the late W. K. and Mary Thomas Osborne. He was a former publisher of The Brevard News, which later became The Transylvania Times.

Mr. Osborne came to Asheville in 1926 and founded The West Asheville News, now known as The Asheville News. At one time Mr. Osborne also operated a newspaper in Andrews.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Ella Monroe Osborne of the home, two sons, Cameron B. and Keith, both of Asheville; a daughter, Mrs. H. Guy Hensley of Asheville; a brother, Dr. V. W. Osborne of Atlanta, Ga.; a sister, Mrs. J. K. Mills of Brevard, and four grandchildren.

Services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Sunday in Morris-Hendon-Black Funeral Home chapel, with the Rev. C. A. Zabriskie officiating. Burial will follow in Green Hills Cemetery.

West Asheville Drug Store is Progressive

A very nice business is being done by the West Asheville Pharmacy, located near the Postoffice in the principal section of that part of the city. The owner is W. E. Shelder. This store started in West Asheville about five years ago, and fills a need for drug service in the section across the French Broad River.

West Asheville tailgate market revived

ASHVEGAS

The conditions are right for the West Asheville Tailgate Market to flourish.

It's been a long time coming. The tailgate market has been "kind of dying on the vine" for about the past seven years in the lawn behind the Westville Bakery, Jim Gordon told me recently. Some weeks, the market had just seven or eight vendors.

Gordon is the market's senior manager. It's been his leadership that's kept the market going. And he's excited about this year.

The market moved to its current location in the Grace Baptist Church and SunTrust Banking parking lot on Haywood Road late last year. It's roomier and much more visible from the road. Gordon said the market also reorganized by creating committees and getting more people involved in the market's operation.

Gordon says there's a waiting list now for vendors. Hickory Nut Gap Farm is now an anchor vendor, said Gordon, who farms at Graceful Growers in Leicester. "I think we have a better chance of making it here," Gordon said.

Christopher Fielden, the market's junior manager, said he's excited about the 22 vendors that now sell at the market. "We have a better product mix," said Fielden, who said a fresh seafood vendor may be coming on board soon.

Fielden also told me that it's about time for a vibrant market on Asheville's west side.

"West Asheville is such a vibrant community focused on eating locally that there's no reason it can't have a thriving tailgate market," he said.

On my recent visit, I found goat cheese, fresh eggs, a pile of great leafy greens and several bakers. A fiddler offered a nice soundtrack, and in typical West Asheville style, a guy on a tall bicycle came riding through to delight shoppers.

This could be a banner year for tailgate markets around Western North Carolina. As the local food movement continues to gather momentum and with the support of organizations like the Appalachian Sustainable Agriculture Project, I think we'll see more community tailgate markets get organized.

Fielden said the Riceville community is one example of a new market blossoming. There's also room to grow as the economy remains in a rut.

The West Asheville market continues to accept applications from vendors. The best place to find and communicate with the West Asheville Tailgate Market is on Facebook.

'Four Horsemen' At West Asheville

The feature picture at the West Asheville theater tomorrow and Tuesday will be "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," with Rudolph Valentino and Alice Terry. Rex Ingram's "The Four Horsemen" by Blasco Ibanes, marks the triumphant return of a feature production, which thousands of movie fans have proclaimed the greatest work of Valentino's career, and the picture that established him firmly as a great star with the public.

Wednesday the feature picture will be "Thunder Mountain," with Madge Bellamy and Alec B. Francis. Thursday Ben Lyons and Belle Bennett will feature in "The Reckless Lady." Friday, Johnny Hines in "Rainbow Riley," and Tom Tyler in "The Cowboy Musketeer" Saturday.

SHOW FIGHT OF JACK AND GENE IN W. ASHEVILLE

Eubanks Gets Films For Friday, Saturday; At Strand Next Week.

Manager W. H. Eubanks, of the West Asheville theater, scored a technical knockout in the first round of the legal fight over the showing of Dempsey-Tunney fight films when he started displaying the picture at 10 o'clock Friday morning in his theater, and expected to continue the reels through Friday and Saturday.

In the meantime, H. S Amos, manager of the Strand, and Publix Theater officials here went ahead with their plan to exhibit the full fight also all next week at the Strand, despite word from Statesville that the management of two Publix Theaters in Charlotte had been indicted but had posted $5,000 bond and were continuing the showings.

The exhibition of such films, Judge E. Y. Webb ruled in federal court at Statesville, is legal, the films are not subject to confiscation and any law to the contrary is unconstitutional. The grand jury, however, had indicted the theater interests.

The judge's decision came after a heated argument in which Thomas J. Harkins, district attorney, sought to impound the films in Charlotte.

Similar reels were seized in Atlanta after showing for more than two days. The exhibit of the films in West Asheville is the first showing in western North Carolina, and was drawing a big crowd Friday. The West Asheville theater recently was overhauled and heating equipment improved

WEST ASHEVILLE THEATER CLOSES

Tom Stelling, Manager, Placed In Charge Of Property

Because of receivership proceedings against the operating company, the West Asheville theater, a motion picture house in the western section of the city has closed its doors pending further order from the Superior court at Charlotte, where the receivership was instituted.

The Carolina Theaters, Inc., with headquarters in Charlotte, operated the West Asheville house and about nine others in smaller cities of North Carolina. Most of them it is understood here, will be closed pending liquidation of the company by the court at Charlotte. The order providing for the receivership was signed by Judge William F. Harding on request of A. B. Coleman, vice president of the company, according to a Associated Press dispatch received here. The Continental Trust company of Charlotte, has been appointed receiver.

The receiver is to make his returns to the court March 12. The petition asking for the receivership stated that several suits had been filed against the corporation and the concern is unable to meet its obligations.

Tom Stelling, who was manager of the West Asheville theater just before the receivership, has been placed in charge of the local property pending the outcome of court proceedings.

Players Lease West Asheville Theater

The Blue Ridge Players, of Asheville, have announced the leasing of the West Asheville Theater building on Haywood road, where they will stage various productions. J. R. Herron, president of the company, has stated that feature length productions will be shown until September at which time feature length plays, differing from the present run, will be placed on the program for regular presentation on every Friday evening throughout the winter months.

George Coggins, pioneer mall builder, fashioned many legends

Rob Neufeld

Visiting our past

Westgate, North Carolina's first modern mall, was in 1956 the brainchild of George Coggins, a man who trailed mythology behind him. He lived all of his 93 years, save a few weeks, in the 20th century. A chronicle of his activities is a portrait of a kind of entrepreneur who knew he was a mountain legend and filled the role.

For instance, his founding of Bee Tree Vermiculite, an important home insulation manufacturer, had its roots, he vouched, in a Davy Crockett-like childhood experience. "I decided to go into the mining business," he said in a 1992 interview, "when we were 'possum hunting one night." He had trapped a 'possum in a hole and tried to get it out with "a stick with a little fork on the end of it. You put it in the hole and twist it," he explained, "and it gets the 'possum hide caught on it, and he comes out with it."

"When (the 'possum) came out," he said, "he had something interesting all over him. It was a new mineral we hadn't seen before in the ground, and it was known as vermiculite."

Coggins, a descendant of the Davidsons and Alexanders, both founding Buncombe families, had grown up on what had once been Davidson land — in the Bee Tree community. Coggins' father, Henry Allen Coggins, unofficially presided over life there as the "Mayor of Bee Tree." His connections enabled George to get a job building an addition to the Beacon Manufacturing plant one summer during the Depression.

George had to go down 12 feet to the bottom of a form to bail water out so concrete could be poured for a foundation. "Finally, I came out the ... third day," he recalled. "I was so sore and stiff from the damp I couldn't get up. And I told the foreman ... (and) he said, 'Oh, you're just a sissy. That's like all of you Bee Tree boys.' When he said that, he was standing right on this form, and they were pouring concrete down in the bottom. I hit him right on the chin, and he went right over the form and fell in the concrete."

Coggins' idea for Westgate was born out of a parking ticket downtown. "I was on the parking side of the street," he related, "where it said park this side only, but I headed in the wrong direction when I backed up into that space. It was a one-way street. So, when I came back, the policeman had a ticket on the car and he said, 'I'm going to run you in. You're parked on the wrong side of the road.'"

Coggins told the policeman, "If you give me a ticket, within five years, you won't need any parking space in downtown Asheville because I'll build a shopping center that's centered around parking."

George Coggins, Asheville businessman, surveys the city of Asheville from his mountain home in 1991.

Coggins already had a leasehold on a former quarry on newly built Patton Avenue, and he began to travel around the United States, looking at malls in such places as Chicago and Boston. He gained a commitment from Louis Lipinsky to move his famous department store, Bon Marche, from downtown to Westgate; and he obtained a loan from Massachusetts Mutual Insurance Company to construct his landmark shopping center in West Asheville.

America's Birthday Party Gets Under Way In WNC

(Related Stories On Page 5D)

Damp, sometimes, but dauntless, residents of the mountain area turned out by the thousands Saturday for the first day of a long weekend celebrating the 200th birthday of the nation.

In Asheville, holiday activity centered on the City-County Plaza where Quality '76 sponsored what amounted to a two-ring circus with a sideshow.

From 10 a.m. clog teams clacked their way through intricate routines. banjos and guitars rang loudly and spirited horses paced and curvetted before admiring crowds.

Clowns clowned, dancers danced and some senior citizens trouped gamely as the Jubilee offered a wide range of entertainment.

Water was a part of it, too. Prominent personalities in the community got dunked repeatedly as accurate throws with baseballs triggered a dunking machine.

Some of the fastest action took place as musicians scurried to get their electronic gear under cover when the rain showers began.

In Biltmore Forest a wayward, although tethered, balloon gave some parents some anxious moments, but the young aeronauts it carried aloft were lowered unharmed to the ground.

At Westgate Shopping Center in West Asheville another captive balloon lured more hundreds to a crafts fair sponsored by the High Country Crafters at which local craftsmen displayed their wares at about 40 booths.

New Westside Grill Serves Up American Classics Quickly, But With Style

Lifestyle Editor

Taste Of The Mountains

Just like those cars that aren't your father's Oldsmobile, the Westside Grill on Patton Avenue is not exactly your grandma's home cooking. But who's to quibble when going there is so much fun?

The Westside Grill, a McGuffey's brainchild (but different), is a snazzy, upbeat, noisy diner-style eatery that opened in late August to instant booming business. It is something new, a little different, an entertaining and welcome addition to West Asheville, and servings are ample enough for stevedores.

The grill drew its inspiration from the 1920s-40s style diners that served good quality food at reasonable prices, in quantity and quickly. The sleek art deco decor with its grays, blacks and chrome, neon and accents of red completely transforms the old Shoney's location. It's something more sophisticated than most diners ever were, but evocative of those times, nevertheless.

The background music goes from big band through the Beatles, but not much more into contemporary than that. The walls are decorated with wonderful photographs of famous diners from the past, including the old Regas diner in Knoxville, Tenn., from whence the now famous Regas Steak House grew.

The McGuffey's people hope this prototype diner idea can be duplicated in other cities once the idea is perfected. Charlotte is a good possibility for the next one, and the Spartanburg/Greenville area after that.

Servers are young, energetic and casual. Sometimes they form a conga line and go dancing and singing through the diner, inviting customers to join in. But behind their breezy exterior lies a determination to deliver meals quickly. This isn't a place to linger over a quiet, romantic meal. There is a serious attempt to deliver most food to the table within six to eight minutes after it is ordered, making this a good destination for eating within the limitations of a lunch hour.

Slushy machines provide some specialty drinks like the Orang 'o' Tang (a daiquiri-type drink), Long Island iced tea, Margaritas and something called Lynchburg lemonade.

Westside Grill

Callie Foreman shows off a plate heaped with the Westside Grill's ribs, skin-on fries and giant biscuit.

Taste

The menu, naturally, is American classic with chili dogs, meat loaf, country fried steak, hickory smoked ribs, burgers and more. Big favorites are the daily blue plate specials, most served with homemade mashed potatoes (with a few lumps to prove they're the real thing) or fries. Blue plate specials include pork chops and chicken pot pie, but the runaway favorite is Saturday's Yankee pot roast ($6.95) served with mashed potatoes and stir-fried veggies (broccoli, cauliflower, carrots and snow peas). The skin-on fries are cut daily and fried when they are ordered.

On the night we visited, I had the one-half herb-roasted chicken ($5.95), served with the mashed potatoes and stir-fries — almost enough for two. Among us, we also sampled the catch of the day, the ribs and a burger with fries. The charbroiled burger got highest marks. The ribs that night were a little dry, but others report more moist ribs. The high point of the meal was the biscuit, four to five inches across, crispy top and bottom and melt-in-your-mouth in-between. Some customers have become so addicted to the biscuits that they order one on the side, even if they are having a burger or a salad.

Dessert was an enormous strawberry shortcake in a goblet ($2.95), made the old-fashioned way with fresh berries layered on a split biscuit. The contemporary touch is the topping of low-fat yogurt.

Prices are reasonable, ranging from about $2.95 for appetizers and large salads to $6-7 dollars for most of the entrees. This is the kind of place where you can comfortably get a light meal of an appetizer or go the whole nine yards from salad to dessert.

The Westside Grill is open seven days a week, daily from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. except Fridays and Saturdays when it is open to 11 p.m. There may be a short wait some evenings, but turnover is rapid, so 15 minutes usually is maximum waiting time.

In addition to cash, Visa, Mastercard, Diner's Club and American Express are accepted.
